'MY DADDY AND I . . .'

"My mommy walked out and left me alone with my daddy almost two years ago.

"My daddy explained to me he has done something wrong and he expects to be punished, maybe by going to jail . . .

"All my relatives are in Quebec except my mommy who lives in Toronto somewhere and she does not want me.

"My daddy and I are very close . . . He looks after me well . . . I will miss him very much . . .

"I would like to thank you for anything you can do for my daddy."

Ontario Provincial Judge Harold Rice admitted Friday that this letter written by 11-year-old Rochelle Desrosiers of Toronto saved her father from going to jail after being convicted of driving while his licence was suspended.

"I don't want to be flooded by a lot of letters from children on behalf of daddy," said Judge Rice in an interview.

"But I'd have to be a pretty hard-hearted soul to stand here and say that I wasn't affected. It was a very touching letter."

On that account he decided to send Raymond Desrosiers home on 18-month probation.

Desrosiers said he had paid his rent three months in advance and hired a woman to look after Rochelle because he expected to spend some time in jail.

"I was pretty scared," the 49-year-old longshoreman said.

Guaranteed Wage Plan Experiment

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and Manitoba are going to join in a guaranteed annual income experiment involving a limited number of persons in the province.

Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said it will be the first major social experiment in the field of guaranteed income.

The project will be operated by Manitoba but the federal government will contribute 75 per cent of the cost and participate in the research.

One official said Ontario and British Columbia both have expressed interest in a guaranteed income scheme. There was no indication, however, if or when these two provinces would ask for federal assistance.

In Winnipeg, Premier Ed Schreyer said intensive planning has been under way since last July and the experiment could get going with payments to participants starting this fall.

Final planning for the project will involve families and individuals to be selected in Winnipeg and in a farm and rural town area.

Asked by reporters to elaborate, Schreyer said details are being worked out and sites of the experiment in Manitoba have not been determined.

Under guaranteed income plans, the government guarantees an individual he will receive a certain amount of money annually.

If the individual, cannot make that level of income through employment, welfare or unemployment benefits the government makes up the difference.

Four experimental annual income projects were, or still are, being conducted in the United States. There is yet no definitive work on their effectiveness.

Major concern is whether a guaranteed income would deprive individuals of the incentive to get work. A federal official said that incentive and problems of administration are areas that will be studied in the Manitoba projects.

Manitoba officials said all participants would be volunteers and would be told that the project would last a definite period, perhaps three years.

The selected individuals in the scheme would be welfare recipients, those on low wages, unemployed and persons formerly unemployed.

The level of guaranteed income to be offered was not announced. But the official said more than one scheme will be tested.

GAS RATIONING IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Distributors of Texaco gasoline will start rationing gas to 200 service stations here Sunday for the first time since the Second World War, the Los Angeles Times said today.

The cutbacks, ranging as high as 47 per cent in some cases, also marks the first time a major oil company's retail outlets have been hit by the growing U.S. gas shortage.

Texaco, the largest U.S. gasoline retailer, has more than 1,000 outlets in the Los Angeles area, but only 200 will be affected.

The Times said most motorists will still be able to get the gas they need at the 200 stations but those stations will be limited in the amount of gas they can get from distributors.

The distributors' action followed an announcement by Texaco and Mobile on the national level, instructing their distributors that they would be limited to last year's level of purchase.

LOOK OUT BELOW appears to be the warning needed here. Actually, there's no danger of this $250,000 French helicopter, Alouette 3, squatting on the armed forces chopper already parked at heliport in Victoria West. Airborne craft is new acquisition of Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., which plans to use its 1,800-pound sling load capacity for industrial jobs. Alouette is turbine-powered, can carry six passengers. (Irving Strickland photo.)

GLOOMY SEERS JAILED

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — The Cambodian government has rounded up more than 50 of the country's top astrologers and thrown them into jail, police sources said.

The sources said 55 astrologers have been arrested without formal charges as a result of a prediction that President Lon Nol will not survive in power until the end of April.

A similar flood of gloomy predictions preceded the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as head of state in March, 1970, and the subsequent opening of the cambodian war.

NEWS BRIEFS

Execution Stayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A second stay of execution was granted in British Columbia Supreme Court today for a man convicted of capital murder in the death of a prison guard. Garry McNamara scheduled to be hanged April 10 now is scheduled to die on the gallows Nov. 27 for the murder of prison guard John Starchuk, 55.

Bell Rates Hiked

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada won approval Friday for virtually all the 1973 price increases for which it applied to the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mississippi Rises

MEMPHIS, TENN. (UPI) — Hundreds of persons from Illinois to the Gulf of Mexico may have to flee their homes today, as the rain-swollen Mississippi River and its tributaries continued to flood low-lying areas.

California Jolted

LOMA LINDA, CALIF. (UPI) — The fifth small earthquake in California this week juggled this San Bernardino County community Friday, registering 3.3 on the Richter scale, not enough magnitude to cause damage.

Indians Indicted

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — Most of the leaders of the Indian takeover of Wounded Knee, S.D., have been charged in indictments returned by a federal grand jury in Sioux Falls, S.D., it was learned Friday.

Passengers Pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. airline passengers will begin paying a 34 cent per ticket surchage Sunday to defray part of the cost of screening against hijackers.

Red Jet Proceeds

PARIS (AP) — The Soviet Union will go ahead with production and marketing of its TU-144 supersonic jetliner even if the Franco-British Concorde is abandoned, Soviet journalist Victor Louis says.

Nixon Aides To Talk

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Responding to mounting criticism, President Nixon has ordered his personal staff to testify, if called, in connection with the Watergate affair.

This is a major compromise by the president with the Senate's investigation and also a grand jury hearing now under way in Washington.

H. R. Haldeman, the president's chief of staff, and John W. Dean, the White House counsel, recently connected by hearsay to the advance planning of the Watergate raid, are believed never to have appeared before the grand jury investigating the case.

For the first time the White House appeared to be showing concern about the bipartisan attacks on the administration's conduct in the case.

The change was believed to be due in part to the concern expressed by a number of Republicans in Congress and elsewhere that the White House might be covering up involvement of aides and others close to the president with men employed by the committee for the re-election of the president who were convicted of the breaking into and bugging the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee last year.

And Watergate conspirator James W. McCord has testified under oath that he met or talked almost daily with former attorney-general John Mitchell in the spring of 1972, according to Senate sources. The testimony directly contradicts Mitchell's own sworn statement that he met with McCord only once and had virtually no other contact with him.

McCord's testimony, delivered to the Senate committee can only be interpreted as meaning that either McCord or Mitchell has committed perjury.

61% Addicts Live in B.C.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Sixty-one per cent of Canada's known hard drug users live in B.C., according to statistics released Friday by the federal health department.

The department says there are 8,958 persons known to use such addictive drugs throughout Canada and 5,496 of them are in B.C.

The statement also says there are 45,127 known users of cannabis (marijuana and hashish) and 10,000 known users of hallucinogens.

However the department's totals do not jibe with those from other sources. The Le-Dain commissions for example, estimates the number of cannabis users as between 841,000 and 866,000.

The health department's tables show some considerable increases between 1971 and 1972, however, in the convictions for use of marijuana, heroin and cocaine.

Heroin convictions nearly doubled — to 923 from 504 — and cocaine convictions more than doubled — to 44 from 19.

Marijuana convictions rose to 11,713 in 1972 compared with 9,478 in 1971.

Most of the statistics are compiled from drug-related criminal records, the news release accompanying the statistical tables said. Information on drug users also came from physicians and treatment agencies.

Next to B.C., Ontario showed the next highest number, 1,720 addicts, and Alberta was third with 638 and Quebec fourth with 616.

The statistics may represent better reporting by treatment and drug crisis centres in some provinces. However, officials of the health department could not be reached for comment.

Another table, showing an eight-year cumulative total of habitual hard drug users, showed 682 of the 8,958 were addicted before they were 20 years old.

The statement issued with the tables said the "8,958 illicit narcotic users were made known to the department in 1972." The tables indicated these were from the eight-year cumulative record, which probably would not take into account any who had kicked the habit, had left the country or who died.

IRISH PUNCH-UP

BELFAST (UPI) — Ten policemen and 14 civilians were hospitalized today as army troops fired rubber bullets to disperse a crowd that turned a downtown Belfast dance hall into a "wild west saloon punch-up."

The army said security forces were sent to the hall when dancers started fighting and the brawl spread into the street, but both factions turned on troops and police.

"It was like a wild west saloon punch-up," one man said. "Everyone was hitting everyone."

The troops firing rubber bullets broke up the melee but not until 24 persons were injured and taken to a hospital, an army spokesman said.

Damage Done: Meany

Times News Services

WASHINTGON — AFL-CIO President George Meany told the White House bluntly Friday that a simple ceiling on meat prices "does not go far enough" to win labor over to another year of wage-price controls.

"The damage has already been done," Meany said, "and so meat price ceilings are now set at a 22-year high . . . equity will be served only if these prices are rolled back to where they stood before the recent spiral began . . . we will not support inequitable extension of the Economic Stabilization Act."

Meanwhile, most supermarkets across the country simply froze their meat prices Friday at Thursday's levels, according to a spokesman for the National Association of Food Chains. "It will take them some time to calculate what their ceiling prices must be under the new rules.

Most U.S. farm and meat industry leaders expressed infuriation Friday over the meat price ceilings Spokeswomen for consumers planning a week-long meat boycott said their plans remained in effect despite Nixon's action.

An opinion perhaps representative of the farmers' viewpoint nationwide was expressed by Elton Berck, president of the farmers union in the beef-producing state of Nebraska. Berck charged the president acted "under the advice of Wall Street-cowboys and legal fact-benders."

In Toronto the manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association said beef prices are starting to decline after hitting their seasonal peak in March.

"Unprecedented consumer demand sustained prices," Charles Gracey said in an interview Friday.

Schweitzer to Quit

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Pierre-Paul Schweitzer will retire as managing director of the International Monetary Fund when his present term expires at the end of August, it was confirmed today.

Schweitzer had been under pressure from the United States to leave the fund post, although several Western European countries wanted him to remain.

The economist, 60, a former deputy governor of the Bank of France had led the fund since 1953. His future plans were not announced.

The U.S. opposition to Schweitzer was based on his forthright statements in 1971 on the need for a devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

Agreement on a successor has not yet been reached.

GENTLE WITH ALIENS

TORONTO (CP) — Speaking on the day before the deadline for all illegal visitors to register with the immigration department, Immigration Minister Robert Andreas said Friday night the government will "apply a very gentle hand" in dealing with visitors who establish themselves in Canada without gaining landed-immigrant status.

He spoke to 100 persons at a conference on immigration sponsored by the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs.

With today's deadline, lineups were the rule all this week at the immigration office here as visitors who arrived in Canada before Jan. 1 scrambled to meet the target date.

Many have no idea what is in store for them at immigration. As a 30-year-old Trinidadian mother of two said while waiting to register:

"I don't have any choice. They could deport me now, but if I didn't come here and then they found me they could deport me anyway."

The woman, in Canada for six months, declined to give her name because "I'm afraid."

Pea-Shooter for Elephant?

Washington Post Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's ceiling on beef, pork and lamb prices is merely a faltering step in the right direction. What the current inflation cries out for is a comprehensive controls system on wages, prices, dividends and some interest rates.

The attempt to forestall a kick in the teeth from George Meany seems to have been abortive. What the administration doesn't seem to realize is that Meany has little influence over the collective bargaining policies of the many strong AFL-CIO unions. They just won't take 5.5 per cent wage increases when the consumer cost of living for January-February rose at an annual rate of almost 8 per cent, with food bought in the gorcery stores up 28 per cent.

It's too much to expect Meany to keep union presidents in line when the scorecard reads that way; even if the presidents wanted to play ball, the rank-and-file won't.

Nixon is also losing old political supporters like economist Pierre Rinfret, who said: "The president used a pea-shooter to try to kill an elephant."

Twelve weeks ago, on Jan. 11, the president abandoned a moderately successful, mandatory Phase II for a "voluntary" Phase III, a decision which has been a near disaster for the economy. Since then, all hell has broken loose, including the second devaluation of the dollar in 14 months.

Phase III, for all of the PR pretense that it is just as tough as Phase II, has actually kicked off a new round of inflation of which skyrocketing meat prices were merely the most obvious and most politically-sensitive reflection.

The business community interpreted Phase III to mean that prices were decontrolled, and that union leaders would be fairly free to bargain for wages substantially higher than the old 5.5 per cent guidepost. There was no good reason for the business community to figure it any other way.

Thus, in February, the annual rate of increase in the wholesale industrial commodity price index was a sensa-

3 Tots Die In Alberni Flash Fire

PORT ALBERN I— Three children were killed here Friday and four people injured when cleaning fluid apparently triggered an explosion and flash fire in a house.

Dead are Alexander Clay Morgan, 8; Diane Ethel Morgan, 7, and Marilyn Beverley Sutherland, 4.

In serious condition at Victoria General Hospital, where he was tranferred for treatment in the burns unit, is Randy Morgan, 12.

Mrs. Delores Morgan, 31, is in satisfactory condition at West Coast General Hospital in Port Alberni. Patrick Morgan, 15, and his friend, Raymond Seitcher, 13, were released from hospital after treatment for cuts received when they jumped through a window to escape the burning house.

An RCMP spokesman said cause of the fire is not yet certain but it appears some chemical Mrs. Morgan was using to clean floors exploded.

The single-storey frame house at 14th and Redford Street was gutted by the fire which followed.

A witness, Harry Dyler, who operates a service station across the street, said: "The house just blew, just exploded."

He and another man ran across the road where Randy had fled from the house, his clothes ablaze. They rolled the youngster on the ground to extinguish the flames.

Police said Alexander Sutherland, a logger working at Tofino, was flown back to Port Alberni after officers were able to get word of the tragedy to him.

His Life Looted, Ripped, Ruined

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Jesse Burges Thomas returned to his Washington apartment building this week and found his entire life strewn about the street.

His stamp collection, his nautical books and charts, his Japanese mementos, his enormous quantities of objects both valuable and junky were being rifled, looted, ripped off, ruined by neighborhood people who had come to watch his eviction.

Minutes later, he collapsed on the street outside his apartment and died a half hour later at the hospital.

The medical examiner's office said he died of congestive heart failure. Some of his neighbors said he died of a broken heart.

Thomas, 53, was "a pack rat," said one neighbor. "A collector," said another. "An eccentric, a religious fanatic," said yet another.

He was also magna cum laude at Andover Academy, a graduate of Harvard in history and languages, a sailor who had been all over the world, a maritime editor, a naval historian and a part-time cab driver just before the end of his life.

"It's such a perfect tragedy," Allen Appel, a neighbor who frequently talked with Thomas, said sadly. "I suppose it's so easy for people to blame the landlord, but it's really not the landlord's fault. He gave him (Thomas) several warnings. They were in court over it. Thomas just didn't pay his rent for months, but he just said God would take care of him and didn't seem to care."

The looting, Appel said "Was such an insane thing. The looters are the ones I really blame."

Neighbors said Thomas' second-floor apartment had been crammed full of stacks of newspapers, vases, lacquered boxes, dozens of cottage cheeese containers and coat hangers, shell-inlaid boxes, Japanese postcards, 30 to 40 broken umbrellas, first-day issues of stamps — some dating back more than a century — oriental clothing and altar pieces, old Life magazines, boxes of rubber bands, paper clips and shipping books, charts, records, pictures — everywhere his reminders of his life at sea.

A deputy U.S. marshal and a crew of a dozen or so men hired by the landlord moved in a little after noon on Tuesday. Thomas was not at home when the eviction began, according to the marshal's offices.

Several witnesses said there was a "block-party" atmosphere to the eviction initially, as a group of 30 to 40 people gathered.

Then the mood turned ugly, witnesses said. Looting, at first surreptitious and then blatant, began. A teenager threw some hand-tinted Japanese slides to the ground and stamped on them, destroying them, according to witnesses.

A woman accompanied by several children systematically picked through the stacks and the filing cabinets and, when she found something she liked, held it up triumphantly. Children, teenagers, young adults, older people grabbed off everything they could.

Some neighbors picked up items to safeguard them for Thomas' relatives. Later that night, Thomas' wife, Anne, arrived and, with help, hauled off the remains of her husband's treasures.

One woman neighbor, who helped Thomas move into his apartment last fall, said he was a pack-rat, but he had an eye for esthetics, too. "Some of his stuff was beautiful and probably valuable. It was all to weird. His whole life was collecting things. He just dropped dead of the shock of seeing it all destroyed."

Western Talks Over

WINNIPEG (CP) — The premiers of western Canada concluded a two-day meeting today, prepared to bring a united front to a conference with Prime Minister Trudeau on Western economic opportunities.

The conference is proposed for July 25 and 26 in Calgary. Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said the meeting will be basically a two-way converstation between the west and the prime minister.

Premier Dave Barrett said the four western governments plan to come up with proposals specific enough that the federal government will be able to give yes or no answers.

Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer said Ottawa will have about a month's notice of the western premiers' proposals.

Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta said the west isn't asking for anything that would detract from development of eastern Canada, but merely wants help in realizing its high potential for economic growth.

The premiers' conference ended with a communique pledging further work on specific proposals in such areas as freight rates, agriculture and regional development policies.

The meeting with the prime minister in July will be preceded by further meetings of provincial ministers and another meeting of western premiers, scheduled for June 18 in Victoria.

Arsenal Sunk 1-0 by Derby

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal was humbled at home by Derby County today and Liverpool nosed ahead in the race for the English League soccer title.

A goal by Steve Powell in the first minute was enough to sink Arsenal.

Liverpool was held to a 1-1 draw at home by Tottenham, but that point sent it into the lead with a game in hand.

Liverpool has 53 points from 36 games and Arsenal 52 from 37 games. Leeds, edged 1-0 by Manchester City, is in third place with 45 points from 33 matches.

FROM BAD TO WORSE

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — First the bad news: Dennis McAuley's car stalled on the tracks at a CNR crossing.

Now the good news: Whitby police came along, took him out of the car and asked the railway to stop all trains until a tow truck could arrive.

More bad news: a train came along and demolished the car.

Finally, more bad news: McAuley, 52, of Oshawa, was charged with impaired driving.

Where's Harry Thorpe

OTTAWA (CP) — As of Nov. 17, 1963, Harry Thorpe had $13,669.65 in his account in a Montreal bank. It is still there and nobody has turned up to claim it.

That is the largest unclaimed balance of thousands reported in The Canada Gazette today by S. S. Reisman, deputy finance minister, as of Dec. 31, 1972.

Under the Bank Act chartered banks report balances of $10 or more than have been unclaimed for nine years.

All of the amounts, including those less than $10, will be paid to the Bank of Canada if they are not claimed by their owners before next Dec. 31.

After that date unclaimed balances will become payable by the central bank should the rightful owner turn up.

The unclaimed sums include certified cheques, money orders and travellers cheques as well as bank accounts.

Karl Deusien of Toronto left $12,305.49 in his savings account in 1963 and Zina Greenberg of Vancouver has a balance of $11,593.60, also untouched since 1963.

Many Buying Beef in Mexico

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI) — Southern Californians have begun crossing the border to buy beef at cheaper prices.

Local meat markets have expressed concern, however, because of the shortage of beef in Mexico and the small profit margin.

A survey Friday showed quality cuts of steak such as filets at 99 cents a pound with New York cuts at 96 cents. Roasts hovered in the 96-cent area with crosscut ribs at 63 cents a pound and boiling beef at 43.

Pork and chicken prices also were far lower than in the United States, but transporation of them across the border was illegal.

The price difference normally would not be enought to cause persons to drive the 150 miles from Los Angeles, but the butchers said persons were buying in lots as high as 37 pounds.

In Minneapolis, thieves looted a market in suburban hilltop of 893 pounds of meat.

Butcher Ross Cantril estimated the meat was worth $1,000.

Cantril said the men fled in a station wagon when they were spotted taking meat from a portable freezes behind the market.

Mentioning the high cost of beef, bacon and sausage taken, Cantril said: "The police didn't have much pity on us."

And in Cleveland, Cuyahoga County common pleas court Judge Harry T. Marshall Friday told a former dishwasher charged with stealing 77 pounds of sirloin steak that meat had become "more precious than jewels."

William R. Symre, 54, pleaded innocent and was freed on $3,000 bond.

tional 12 per cent, the biggest one-month jump since the Korean War. Gone was the effective requirement of Phase II that demanded prior approval of major wage and price increases, replaced with one that would tinker with after-the-fact adjustments. And the enforcement authority, cleverly associated in Phase II with the internal revenue service, was reduced to a token.

Wholesale prices were rising so rapidly in mid-January that abandonment of Phase II was also an abandonment of elementary good sense.

It was close to being irresponsible, because, as the joint economic committee majority report said, to get to over-all price stability, there should be very little increase in wholesale industrial prices, so as to offset ballooning prices of services.

Leaving out food entirely, wholesale prices in the three-month period November, 1972, to February, 1973, rose at a seasonally adjusted rate of 5.9 per cent, and the rise was spread over 12 of the 13 major industrial categories.

In the face of this record, what President Nixon should have done Thursday night was to establish a 90-day freeze on all prices and wages—in effect, returning to Phase I of Aug. 15, 1971—with a promise that a revitalized and effective enforcement system would be set up once again, leading to a new Phase II. Congress, which on its own is pressing for stronger legislation, could have done nothing but extend the basic stabilization authority past April 30.

NDP UNHAPPY WITH NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Discontent within the New Democratic Party of British Columbia over the provincial government's failure to implement party labor policy was voiced Friday at a closed meeting of party members here.

Speaker after speaker in a crowd of almost 150 rose to voice strong dissatisfaction with the performance, or lack of performance, of Labor Minister Bill King, who did not attend the meeting.

There were no government representatives at the meeting, although King, Premier Dave Barrett and party MLAs were invited.

One member from Surrey held up an NDP election campaign pamphlet and read the parts of it dealing with labor laws and what the party would do with them if elected.

"I got this just this week from provincial headquarters ... to use right now in our membership canvassing," he said bitterly.

The members voted for the immediate abolition of the Labor Relations Board and the scrapping of the Trade Unions Act and the Labor Relations Act during the current session.

Japan Ups Discount

TOKYO (UPI) — The Bank of Japan today ordered a 0.75 per cent in its official discount rate to dampen growing inflation. The action by the central bank will boost the discount rate from the present 4.25 per cent to 5 per cent, effective Monday.

72% Interest 'Legal'

EDMONTON (CP) — A bankrupt company in Camrose, Alta., is charging its customers 72-per-cent interest on their overdue gas accounts, the legislature was told Friday.

Gordon Stromberg (CP — Camrose) asked the government whether any action is planned to stop Anchor Pipe Lines Ltd. from charging such interest.

Utilities Minister Roy Farran said the company is in receivership but added that the public utilities board has declared that these interest rates are legal and should be repaid.

Greece Retrenches

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek government announced today a spending cut and other economic measurers to combat inflation. Deputy Premier Nicholas Makarezos said public expenditures will be reduced by about $333 million but the industrial, agricultural and tourist sectors will be exempted from the reduction in public investments.

Tax Refunds Held Up

OTTAWA (CP) — At the start of the week, the revenue department was sitting on some 34,000 personal income tax forms claiming refunds for the 1972 tax year.

Cheques will not be sent out until legislation cleaning up tax measures hinged on the 1972 budget has been passed by the current Parliament, a revenue department spokesman said Friday.

The held-up forms are mainly from the elderly, the disabled and students, making claims on the basis of 1972 budget measures not yet passed by Parliament. All other forms, whether claiming refunds or making payments, are being processed in the usual manner.

Finance Minister John Turner announced Thursday that almost all measures deriving from his budget of last May 8 will start coming before the Commons next week. He urged speedy passage of the various bills so that refunds can start to flow.

The clutter-up in the tax situation arose because the Liberals dissolved Parliament for the election last Oct. 30 before bills to enact the May budget proposals had been passed.

Turner brought down another budget Feb. 19 that also has some measures retroactive to the 1972 tax year.

He announced Thursday that measures from the 1973 budget affecting 1972 will be contained in the bills to be put before the House starting next Tuesday. Chief item here is a scrapping of the capital gains tax when a family farm is passed on within the family.

On the personal income tax side, main measures in the 1972 budget were higher basic exemptions for those 65 and over, for the blind and disabled and for some university students or the parents who support them.

The revenue department spokesman said the forms calling for refunds have been processed right up to the final stage. Once legislation is passed, the only thing necessary would be to have the cheques made out and mailed. This would take only a very short time."

The department also is sitting on some corporate tax forms claiming fast depreciation write-offs for new manufacturing and production machinery bought since the May budget. It allowed, as of last May 9, a cost write-off over two years instead of 10 as a measure to stimulate production and create jobs.

The tax department has been giving corporations, which usually file tax forms every three months, an option.

If they are claiming on the basis of fast write-offs, the spokesman said, they can either leave their claim to be processed later once the write-offs become legal or they can have their forms processed immediately without the write-off and made subject to later adjustment.

Only a small percentage of firms so far have filed claims where the write-off provisions are a factor, the spokesman said. This could swell after the end of the current fiscal year, expiring today.

Just about every conservation issue worthy of the name resolves itself into a debate on use. You can split hairs, if you will, and say limited use, best use or wise use, but the result is the same; use is at the root of all conservation problems.

As a matter of fact, one of the most-frequently quoted definitions of conservation is wise use.

It makes no difference whether you're debating petroleum quotes, allowable-cuts, Bill 42 or bag limits, you're really talking use.

And use is at the root of one of British Columbia's current wildlife issues, one that surfaced last Tuesday, when Recreation and Conservation Minister, Bob Williams, let it be known that peregrine falcons could no longer be captured legally for falconry in British Columbia.

I say surfaced, because the issue has been simmering for several months and threatened to become a major subject for discussion at the mid-April meeting of the Federation of British Columbia Naturalists in Kamloops.

It all began last June when new, liberalized regulations on falconry and the keeping of raptors were announced by the Provincial Wildlife Branch.

The new regulations contained many contentious points as far as the Federation of B.C. Naturalists were concerned but the two which raised the greatest outcry were the way the bill was drafted and the plan to allow the capture of a limited quota of peregrine falcons each year for falconry.

An uproar over the peregrine might have been expected and it wasn't long in coming. At one of their meetings held in Parksville last October, the Federation of B.C. Naturalists passed a resolution demanding complete protection for the pregrine in B.C. It was a resolution based on a deep and abiding concern for the future of this majestic bird, a concern felt by nearly everyone connected with wildlife conservation throughout the world.

This resolution was apparently instrumental in the ministerial decision to clamp down on the peregrine collecting in the province. While Williams' announcement will put many minds at rest, the regulations allowing collecting still exist and could be reinstated at any time by a new minister not so well attuned to public feeling.

And it is this question of public feeling or attitudes that brings us back to the other major point of contention, the way the new regulations were drawn up.

Using the words of the Wildlife Branch "these regulations for the use of raptorial birds occuring in B.C. are based on the best available technical and social (i.e. public attitude) information available." The parenthesis are theirs.

The attitudes and feelings of a handful of falconers, legitimate as they might be, do not, in my opinion, represent the "best available social information" on which to base such regulations. The feelings and attitudes of thousands of naturalists throughout the province, as represented by the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, no less legitimate than those of their falconer friends, are just as worthy of consideration, and should weigh heavier if only in terms of numbers, in measuring that most elusive of human characteristics — our attitudes.

Note the word "use" in my quote from the Wildlife Branch. Is not simply looking and enjoying a legitimate use?

Most Win UIC Appeal —Labor

TORONTO (CP) — Labor leaders in Metropolitan Toronto say they believe most of those appealing loss of unemployment insurance benefits in a recent federal government crackdown are winning their cases, but they aren't sure how many are involved.

"I would say that anywhere from 60 to 75 per cent of the appeals are successful," Henry Weisbach, education director for the Ontario Federation of Labor, said in a Friday interview.

"That's what I hear from appeal board members in Toronto and across the province."

Commission officials won't say how many cases have been appealed until a study on the conduct of investigators is released on Monday.

Between Jan. 2 and Feb. 23 about 20,000 persons were disqualified in the Toronto-Hamilton area after investigators checked to see if they were looking for work.

Early in March, Yvon Charlebois, UIC director of publicity, said that only 1,400 had appealed and 328 had won.

Most of the disqualifications were made under a section of the act which requires a claimant to be available for work and to have made a reasonable and customary search for employment.

APPEALS HEARD

Mr. Weisbach is one of 34 employee representatives appointed to appeal boards in Metro by the Canadian Labor Congress. Each three-member board also has a government appointed chairman and an employer's representative from business or industry.

Murray Tate, another employee representative and a member of the Toronto Harbor Commission, said the mass disqualifications appeared to be aimed primarily at women.

"I can only cite personal experience, but on the three most recent board sittings I have attended—and including a board meeting to be heard April 4—38 of the 42 recipients appealing are women."

Mr. Tate, who has worked on appeal boards for the past 10 years, said he had never seen anything like the confused situation created by the crackdown.

"There are certainly a lot more appeals and appeal board hearings taking place," he said. He was on one Friday that reinstated seven of the eight claimants who were cut off benefits for not looking for work.

Ottawa Surprise: One Department Cut Staff

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Two Western Canadian MPs who have been probing the startling increase in staff and salaries for the federal civil service have received something of a surprise — they have found a federal department that has actually reduced its staff over the past few years.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said his department's staff has fallen from 4,272 on Jan. 1, 1970, to 3,024 on Jan. 31, this year.

What's more, after accounting for inflation the department's upper income payroll doesn't appear to have zoomed ahead as have the payrolls of other federal departments queried by either Steve Paproski (PC — Edmonton West) and William Knight (NDP—Assinaboia).

ANOTHER STORY

But the pair's glee may have been dampened somewhat because at the same time Macdonald presented his figures, William Rompkey, parliamentary secretary to Environment Minister Jack Davis, revealed that Davis' department — not even established at the beginning of the three-year period being probed by the NDP member — has managed to build up a staff of 9,712.

What's more, almost 800 of those new 9,712 environment staffers are earning more than $18,000 a year each with 21 of them taking home between $28,000 and $35,000 annually.

According to Macdonald, some 433 of his department's staffers are earning at least $18,000 a year. Large batches of them earn salaries right to the top of the high $29,000 range, with four staffers earning as much as $35,000 and one with an expectancy of $45,000 a year.

However, Knight was told that three years ago some 495 employees were earning more than $15,000 — the NDP members starts his 1973 calculations at $18,000 — so the energy payroll doesn't appear to have climbed at the same extraordinary rate of other departments.

LARGE HIKES

Both Knight and Paproski were recently told by External Affairs Minister mitchell Sharp of large increases in the staff and salaries of his department.

Paproski was told that 10 years ago the external affairs department employed some 1,516 staffers. Today it employs 2,751 persons.

In the written information given to the former Edmonton Eskimo football player, Sharp, who personally signed the reply, said that 10 years ago only 13 external employees earned $20,000 a year or more but today a whopping 284 staffers take home at least that amount.

In more detailed information given to Knight and covering not 10, but additions and changes in just three years, it was revealed that the addition of 54 employees to three more salary levels within the past three years is costing Canadian taxpayers at least $1.6 million a year.

MILLIONAIRE DIES INSOLVENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Financier Bart Lytton once had an empire with assets of $750 million, and his personal wealth at one time was estimated at $15 million.

Lytton died in 1969, but his estate wasn't closed until Friday. The final accounting: insolvent.

Lytton's widow, Beth, reported to Superior Court Judge Earl F. Riley that his only remaining wealth was his half-interest in the couple's community property, which totals $307,434.38 and includes a $201,000 house now being rented.

Mrs. Lytton said she had paid all her deceased husband's bills but had no money left to pay his heirs or their daughter, Mrs. Timothea Stewart, whom he owed $522,823.50.

Lytton, who lost control of his Lytton Savings and Loan Association and Lytton Financial Corp. in April, 1968, died of a coronary condition his doctor said began when his financial empire began to fall apart.

Under an agreement with her daughter, Mrs. Lytton will retain control of her property and will make certain payments on past loans to Mrs. Stewart.

This is the stuff Austin is made of.

Durable—is the only word for British Leyland's Land-Rover and their Austin Marina. Rust-proofing and undercoating are standard procedures for the latest Austin, which also comes with a special 7-point Cold Climate Package that beats the others cold.

British Leyland's Austin Marina has the same 1800 cc. engine as British Leyland's MGB. And they both have front power disc brakes as standard.

British Leyland's Jaguar is a superb example of timeless styling. They designed the Austin Marina along the same lines.

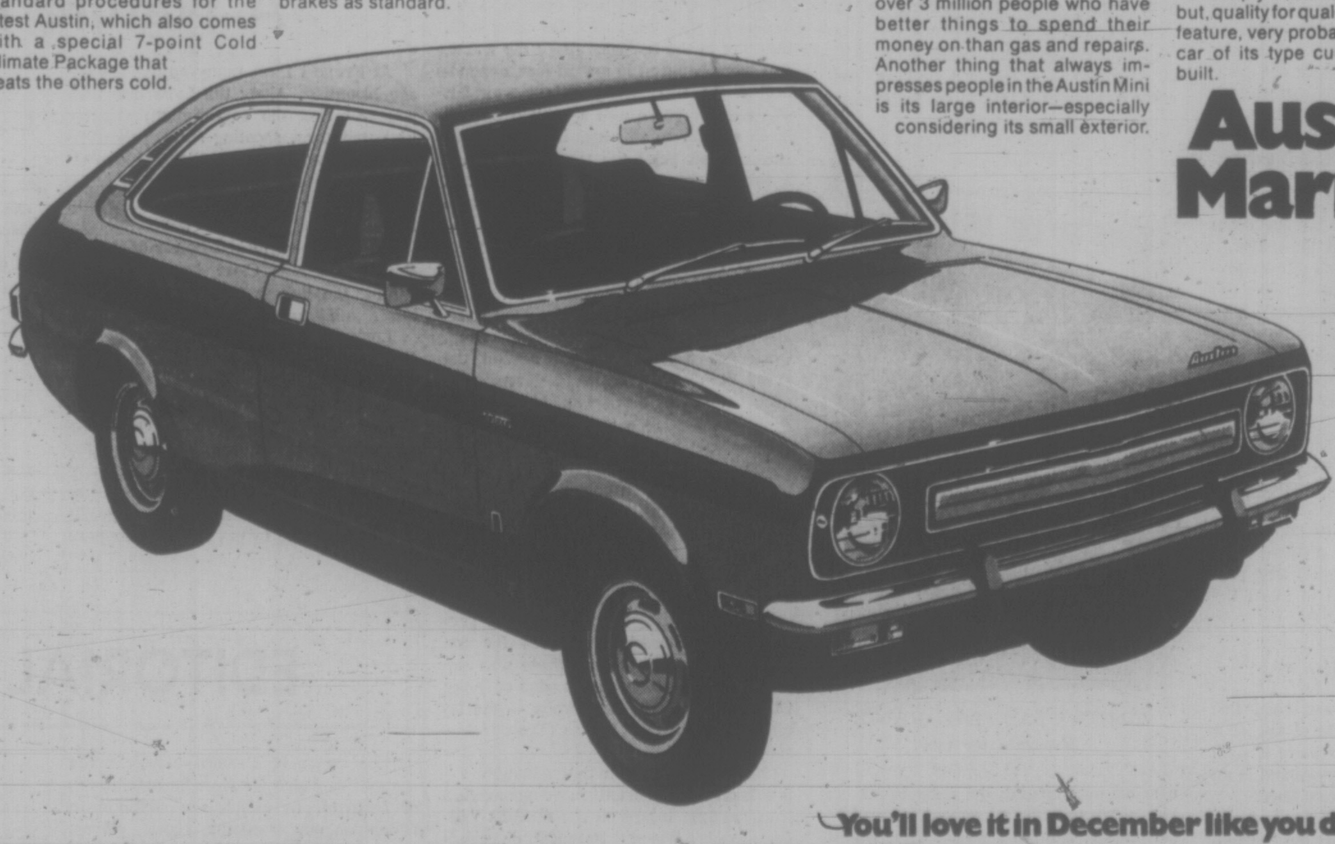
Built into every Austin Marina are the same kinds of economy and dependability that have made the Austin Mini the choice of over 3 million people who have better things to spend their money on than gas and repairs. Another thing that always impresses people in the Austin Mini is its large interior—especially considering its small exterior.

Of course, the new Austin Marina is built that much bigger outside and inside. In fact, the Austin Marina's front and rear seats are wider than most.

Durability. Performance. Styling. Economy. Spaciousness. These qualities, coupled with a low initial price tag are what you look for in a small car today. And these are the qualities Austin has built into Marina. The Marina is not simply the best Austin ever but, quality for quality, feature for feature, very probably the finest car of its type currently being built.

Austin Marina

BRITISH LEYLAND



You'll love it in December like you do today.

The Austin Marina is available in three models: 2-door Deluxe Coupe and 4-door Super Deluxe Sedan (both available with Borg-Warner automatic transmission) and 2-door GT. The Austin Marina is backed by five Canadian parts depots and a coast-to-coast dealer network.

All According to Plan?

The government appears to have avoided any possibility of a defeat on budget votes before the Easter recess and thereby prolonged its minority life beyond May and even June. Finance Minister Turner will present his leftover 1972 budget items, and his still unpassed 1973 legislation, in carefully weighed and scheduled spoonfuls, and has been assured of NDP Leader Lewis' support for non-controversial measures. The matter of the corporate tax reductions still presents a serious problem for Mr. Turner, but he says he doesn't jump off bridges until he comes to them, and that is a workable philosophy for a minority government.

It is interesting that Mr. Turner and Mr. Lewis have been emerging as the newsmakers of Parliament in the past few weeks. Mr. Stanfield still launches his thunderbolts against the government, but he is unable to force the gap in voting that the NDP continues to fill. And Prime Minister Trudeau has been very much in the background lately, leaving the field to Mr. Turner.

The Ottawa watchers can make what they will of that situation. But regardless of how it came about, it is a fine opportunity for Mr. Turner, who still has not forgotten the leadership aspirations which were thwarted at the 1968 Liberal convention. The finance portfolio being what it is, however, it is not entirely clear whether Mr. Turner is being groomed for a chance at the prime ministership, or fattened up for the kill.

In the meantime he is left with the remnants of two annual budgets on his hands, and the hope that the NDP will continue to swear off government-killing for Lent.

No News Is No News

Canada's chief of defence staff, Maj.-Gen. Jacques Dextrase, offers a modicum of encouragement but reveals nothing significant in his statement that a study is being made of air-sea rescue operations in Victoria to find out if coverage can be improved. It would be more encouraging still if the major-general would announce to what degree obvious improvements are considered feasible.

There are limits to which the Canadian government can go to make marine traffic, small or large, safer. The boating public, swelling year by year, would, however, like to know if faster helicopter service with the right type of machines for foul weather operation are in prospect for this part of the coast, or if other aids are in the offing. There is also the matter of who is to pay for them.

The air-sea rescue work now carried on by branches of the forces is, of course, much better than it was a decade ago, and the attitude toward it on the part of the defence establishment has changed for the better. It would be appreciated, however, if the progress of the studies Maj.-Gen. Dextrase mentions were divulged to that section of the public most concerned. The announcement that a study is being made could mean almost anything or nothing.

'Whistle a Happy Tune'

If music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, as William Congreve wrote in 1697, some instrumental sounds have the opposite effect, according to Victoria Symphony conductor, Laszlo Gati.

Mr. Gati advances the thesis that the decibel count and beat of rock music increases tensions and bears a definite relationship to the drug scene, now showing a staggering increase in narcotic addiction. It is his contention that the rhythm combined with the loudness, which hits with physical force, creates lasting changes in whoever is exposed to it for a long time.

"I feel — and I am really worried about it," Mr. Gati says, "that one or three hundred years from now when they try to analyze why the rest of civilization is demised, the reason will not be the atomic bomb but the kind of music we have been exposed to."

He cites, as examples of the impact of certain pieces, the influence of the Internationale at the time of the Russian revolution and the Marseillaise when France moved away from the monarchy. He might have also noted the contention of a couple of decades ago that the tune "Blue Monday" was directly associated with a wave of suicides in Europe.

The Victoria conductor counsels the substitution of Mozart and Beethoven for the present "rock" as a diet for young people, pointing out that classical music provides relaxation and reduces stress.

His comments fall on sympathetic older ears.

'Fat Boy'

The need for a measure of decorum in the Legislature has been emphasized by Mr. Speaker Gordon Dowding in his remarks following use of the term "fat boy" by James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) addressed to Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall.

"Fat boy" may be an insult in some instances. It nevertheless had an affectionate ring on television last August 30 when the mother of a new premier came on the screen to comment: "The fat boy did pretty well."

Usage can give different connotations to phrases.

Not Quite as It Appears

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Spring 1973, will go down as a major milestone in contemporary world history: the successful disengagement of overt American military power from Vietnam.

There were many who doubted that this disengagement could ever take place in orderly circumstances — or that if it did, that it would leave South Vietnam with a reasonable chance of survival.

Both doubts were wrong. The United States is leaving, and Saigon does have a fair chance to survive as a non-Communist power.

This is a fact of considerable significance. Add that China and Russia have reasons of self-interest to discourage an early, dramatic effort by North Vietnam to alter the outcome, and the spring of 1973 becomes a remarkable landmark indeed.

That much said, one must at once record the reservations and qualifications which limit the achievement.

Biding Her Time

North Vietnam has not acquiesced in even a temporary defeat. She is simply biding her time, manoeuvring for position, and keeping her options open.

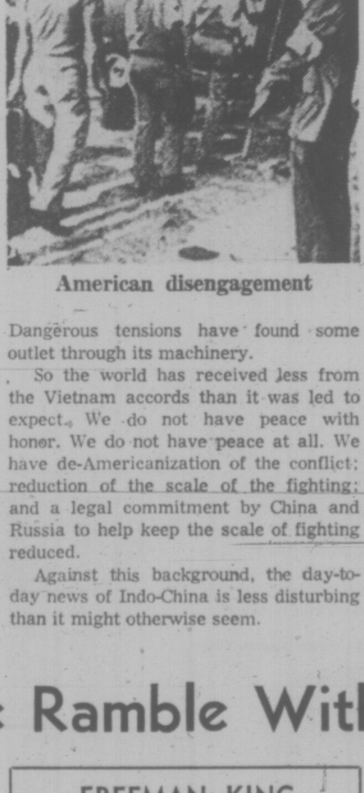
It does not seem likely, in fact, that Hanoi's acquiescence in a stalemate, much less a defeat, can ever be obtained by any combination of pressures and lures. Such consent is simply not a purchasable commodity — not even for $2.5 billion in reconstruction aid.

So South Vietnam's reasonable chance for survival is valid for only a limited period of time. Perhaps for a year; conceivably two. The length will depend on how tight a leash Moscow and Peking keep on North Vietnam.

Successful American disengagement is limited also by geography. In Cambodia, the disengagement is virtually nonexistent — and if it occurs, the client regime will have scarcely any chance of survival. In Laos, the prospects are better, but not by very much.

Disengagement applies only to America. Other armies have not disengaged. The war goes on; it simply is less of an American war.

The international supervision which, on paper, was to have rendered universal the benefits of peace has not even provided successful cosmetics. The most that can be said is that, on occasion, it has functioned as a kind of safety valve.



American disengagement

Dangerous tensions have found some outlet through its machinery.

So the world has received less from the Vietnam accords than it was led to expect. We do not have peace with honor. We do not have peace at all. We have de-Americanization of the conflict; reduction of the scale of the fighting; and a legal commitment by China and Russia to help keep the scale of fighting reduced.

Against this background, the day-to-day news of Indo-China is less disturbing than it might otherwise seem.

The frustrations of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) are not really central to the problem. They are peripheral; they reflect the core fact, namely unwillingness of Hanoi (and Saigon) to limit their future conflict to the political arena.

It was unrealistic ever to have thought the conflict might be so limited. International observers cannot impose peace on unwilling belligerents. All they do, in ideal circumstances, would be to help inhibit unintentional and undesired conflict. This conflict is neither.

Similarly, the difficulty which negotiators for Saigon and the Viet Cong are having in Paris, where they are supposed to be arranging the political future of South Vietnam, should have been anticipated.

Reluctant Negotiators

Neither side really wanted a compromise political settlement, and neither was ready to capitulate to the other. So it would have been very surprising if there had been early progress.

The United States and North Vietnam, attempting (also in Paris) to map the machinery for future reconstruction aid, are in a parallel position.

The unspoken assumption behind their meetings — that peace has come, and that therefore reconstruction can soon begin — is not valid. That being the case, Washington and Hanoi can only go through preliminary motions, preparing an alternative to war for the day when politicians in Vietnam decide to use it. Its availability might one day help influence the decision.

The truth about the news from Vietnam therefore is, not that "peace with honor" is coming apart at the seams, but that it was unrealistic ever to have expected so much.

The Americans, however, are going. And in the long view of history, that may well be the single most important development of 1973.

ART STOTT

That Spice of Risk

In that section of Margaret Jenkins school ground where the Pitzer home once stood, yarding operations were carried out in recent days. Now the logs have been assembled by what used to be building and grounds workmen, now facilities and school support staff, into the equipment of what is currently called an "adventure playground."

The timbers, with the bark on, have been arranged in varying structures off the ground so children can climb on them, walk the logs or pull themselves up through the loops of connected automobile tires. The old car tires make the installation look a bit junky, but they're functional, cannot be cut down like ropes or twisted around like chains.

As a backlash from years of over-protectiveness toward youngsters, I like the general concept. It gives the small boys and girls a chance to learn balance, develop certain muscles — and to fall on their noggins if they are careless. Falling on noggins can be highly educational. Properly explained to the very young, it defines the principle of cause and effect. There's a small philosophical regression here from the current trend against brutality and physical pain, but the equipment could help a child to understand that accidents frequently involve some violence and the way to avoid that particular violence is to learn to avoid the accident.

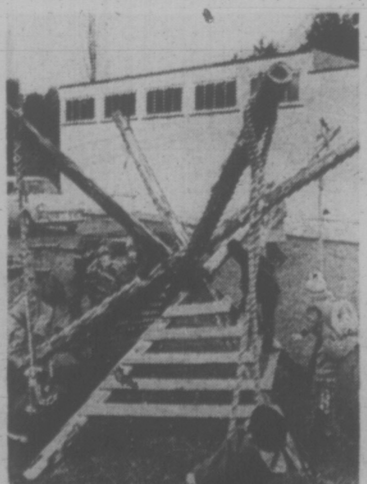
No Immunity

At all events, there have been few reports of injury — in spite of one of a broken leg — from use elsewhere of such equipment. And in what playground is an active youngster immune from hurt?

The point is made by one teacher, nearing retirement age, that the "adventure playground" provides something of a substitute for some of nature's play equipment of his boyhood. There isn't too much opportunity now, he points out, for children to build their tree houses, and fall out of them, nor to indulge the spirit of daring in a number of other activities cherished by an earlier generation.

When we were boys it was a normal practice for those in the Margaret Jenkins School area to saunter on hot days of summer to the magnificent and unintentional "adventure playground" the late James Sterling Smith had constructed. It was located beside and over the water that flooded a small but deep gully below what was known as the "haunted house" at Chinese Point.

The old boy had built a massive structure of logs, squared timbers, concrete counterweights, chains, pulleys and winches overhanging the gully to lift his big, converted ship's longboat, as well as his dinghy, from the water. That was a playground — when you weren't chased off — more adventurous than anything short of the trestle across Little Niagara canyon.



CORDOVA BAY PLAYGROUND
Adventure for tots

As an adjunct to the lifting apparatus, he also installed two logs, anchored high on the rocks and projecting out over the water like huge fishing poles. They were limber enough to compensate for rise and fall of the tide when his big boat was fastened to them. Strong chains fell from the tips of the logs and the boat could be moored fore and aft.

Walking those logs was a ritual which divided the heroes from the craven in our gang. For the first half of their lengths they thrust out over a steep incline of shelving rock. the other half, tapering to the tip, was above the water, anywhere between 15 and 25 feet, depending on the tide. Walking half way out was simple. There was a certain up and down motion to the log, but not much. Beyond that point the timber developed a sort of rotary motion, up, down and around. It took a good sense of balance to negotiate the final few feet.

Added Refinement

A refinement was added to the exercise by other members of our gang. Once you were committed beyond the point at which you could jump, with some risk, to the rocks below, they straddled the log a few feet out and by judiciously shifting their weight could make it swing in more wildly gyrating parabolas. That's when you developed high balancing skill, and amazing vocabulary enrichment as you told the bouncers in vivid terms what you thought of them and what you'd do when you got back — if you did.

In later years, the remembered performances seemed to express for me an inherent desire among those who are young to enjoy that razor's edge of living which is physically dangerous — the inalienable right of a boy to take damfool risks.

It is my conviction that adequate supervision will prevent most youngsters from inviting injury on the school's "adventure playground." Parental, or grandparental, anxieties preclude exposure of the young to unnecessary hazards. But insofar as the equipment permits removal of at least some of the cotton wool in which we're inclined to wrap our offspring, I think it's a good thing.

Life contains innumerable dangers. A little early experience with their milder physical forms could stimulate to some degree a competence in meeting them.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

At Francis Park many spring flowers are blooming, Along the Lyre tree trail you will find the erythronium (Easter lily), trilliums, shooting stars, yellow violets and, by the Lookout, the blue-eyed-Mary and rusty saxifrage. On the rock face, the tiny monkey flower is showing its yellow face with purple dots.

The yellow varnished flower of buttercups stand out. Close by, on an old stump, are lichens that turn the stump into a miniature garden.

Look closely and you can spot the "fiddle-heads" of bracken now breaking through.

In this locality now live some ruffed grouse, and if you are quiet and lucky you may hear the cock bird drumming. At first you think the noise is coming from a given spot, then the next drum will seem to sound somewhere else. It is most difficult to pin down just where he is.

Look on some open rock face and you can find the bearberry with its urn shape flowers coming into bloom.

On some of the Douglas fir branches you will find many buds of the male flowers. They soon will be in full bloom and the golden pollen will spread. The old maples will be in full flower in a few days and here you will find many honey bees and other little insects that are helping to carry out pollinating tasks.

How many of us realize that without many kinds of insects we would not have our flowers or even a great deal of the food we eat. In many cases each type of flower has its own particular insect that does the job. Some of these insects are attracted to the plant by scent, color and shape. Members of the bee family are the only ones that can spread the pollen in the clovers.

Some birds play an important part in the process, notably the humming birds that frequent flowering currant and honeysuckle.

Butterflies are also involved in this wonderful process, haunting the milkweed and some other flowers that are red or bright yellow. The moths, too, play their part, attracted to flowers that are white and show greater visibility at night and perhaps heavily scented, for both the insect and the flower are nocturnal.

When you are walking around, listen to the ravens calling. They are now nesting in the tall conifers and when the young hatch out it is fascinating to see the old birds teaching the young how to fly.

Slaves

The curse of Canada today is the manner in which we have become slaves of security. In effect, we continue to relinquish our freedoms, rights, drives, dreams and desires in return for welfarism, grants, subsidies and giveaways.

All too often the price of security is acceptance of the commonplace standard of the common man — the conformity of the third-rate. Yet it was not the apathy and smugness of security that got the wheel and polio vaccine invented — but the insecurity of hunger and disease.

It was the insecurity of religious persecution which brought the Plymouth Pilgrims to the New World. The timid stayed home, compromising their beliefs and relinquishing part of their freedom.

Today, the socialist rides to power on the backs of timid men who have made security their god. In the process, they would have all citizens enslaved in the "security" of a dictatorship that recognizes neither individual human rights nor the principles of freedom which date back to the Magna Carta — Patricia Young, 1030 Nanton Ave., Vancouver 9, B.C.

The Age Of Biology

The Peregrine Falcon has become a symbol of environmental concern but is it really in trouble?

By BRISTOL FOSTER

(Dr. Foster is director of the Provincial Museum. This is the first of a new series of articles written for Page 5 by Museum staff members.)

We have gone through the stone age and the iron age, to the age of physics with their transistors and atomic bombs, to the age of chemistry with plastics and pesticides paving the way to the new nirvana.

Now we are entering the age of biology, or, more exactly, genetics and ecology. While earlier ages were significant, the present age might be the most: in times past we have been largely concerned with accessories to life — a hand-axe, a radio, detergent — while the age of biology is concerned with life itself.

Evolution is characterized by a change from the simple to the complex. While the cross-bow is more complex than the hand-axe, it is simple compared to the machine-gun. Chemistry in general is more complex than physics, but both pale when compared with the complexities of biology. It is easier to build a nuclear reactor or a polyester molecule than to build a living cell; it is far easier to understand the workings of New York's telephone system than to understand a flea's brain or the complexities of life in a puddle.

The complexities of biology are both a boon and a bane to biologists. While great challenges can be an initial attraction to the science, they may ultimately result in severe frustrations.

An important function of scientists is to be able to predict future actions from past observations. Once molecules are arranged into a living substance they become far less predictable than they were in the non-living state. Hence it is not surprising that biologists have been accused of using too many "weasel words" — probably, apparently, generally, usually, often, and so on, to describe the likelihood of an event occurring. The public often demands a degree of certainty that biologists are unwilling to supply.

Perhaps biology would have become accepted as an important science earlier if they had followed the weatherman philosophy: "tomorrow will be sunny with occasional winds and scattered showers."

Recent advances in genetics, in particular plant breeding (the green revolution) and hereditary diseases, and the public concern over ecological problems have helped to bring biology to the forefront of the sciences.

Some biologists — particularly the environmentalists — have even thrown out the "weasel words" either because they have been carried away by their own enthusiasm, or because they realize that the public, in general, prefers to think in blacks and whites and not in ambiguous greys. Neither is very scientific. Thus dire predictions for the fate of the world often go beyond the rules of good statistical procedures. The extension of lines on a graph into the future is hazardous at the best of times.

Animals such as the grizzly, peregrine falcon and wolf are selected as foci for public environmental concern when less spectacular species may be farther down the road to extinction.

The more a species becomes "a cause" and emotion takes over from reason, the more difficult it may be for the public to learn the facts.

No doubt some ecologists recognize that they must resort to overstatements since the public may only respond to such treatment; the advertising media serves the hard-sell at every opportunity. The danger, of course, is the possibility of being proven wrong, thereby disenchanting some of your supporters.

The decision of choosing between absolute scientific accuracy and erring on the side of the angels is not an easy one. After all, on which side are the angels?

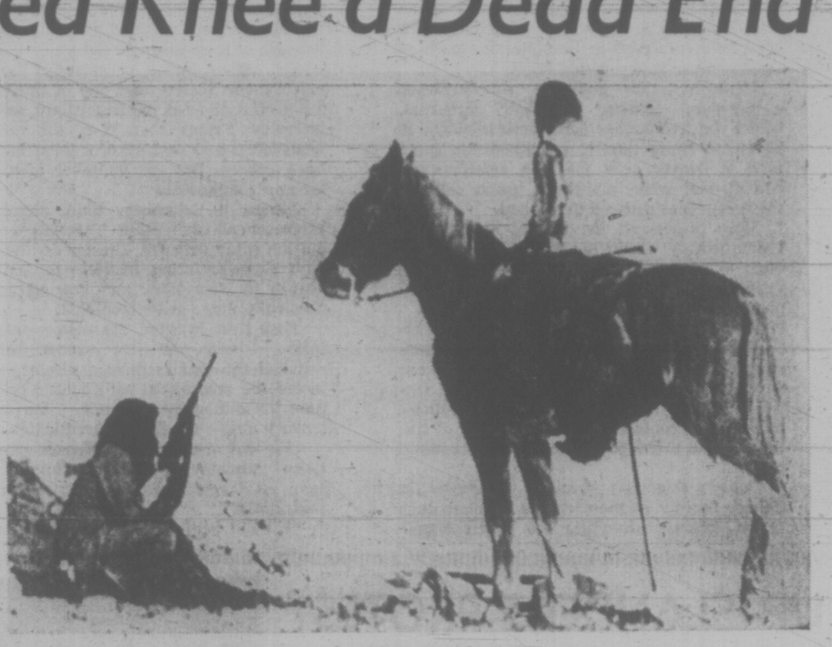
Wounded Knee a Dead End

By SHAUN HERRON
Winnipeg Free Press



On guard at Wounded Knee

Indians have come late to the tired circle of turmoil-makers of whom the world has wearied in the past decade-and-a-half.

The occupation of a building in Saskatoon by young Indians is not much more than an equivalent of the effect of certain young students who needed to exhibit themselves and had the personality to induce some other students to support them.

The young "activist" who "leads" his peers in unnecessarily extravagant "protest" is usually a potentially disturbed person with a compulsion to exhibitionism. He's on an ego trip.

There's a good deal of that in the American Indian Movement, and it is better to tell them early that most people think so than to encourage them to believe they will be taken to represent the Indian people of this continent. Some of the talk one has listened to from them about the significance of Wounded Knee has on it all the marks of the student "leaders" talk when they were sure they had society on the run.

Wounded Knee as a "liberated" Indian territory — as one of Winnipeg's Indian visitors in the AIM described it — is adolescent tosh; the only reason why the town has not been reduced by force is that the American authorities do not want to spill blood. We're all tired of blood on the streets.

The other day a European spokesman for the World Council of Churches defended the council's action in sending money to certain Indian groups. A European clergyman would no doubt be specially equipped to know each national situation better than the people who live in it, but in the North American situation it is an odd kind of archaic reactionary thinking to believe that there is going to be on this continent another nation than the American and Canadian nations and that there will be surviving national territories within the national territory. The real reactionaries, in our little moment, are the so-called "liberals" who support movements not because they make sense but because they are "protest" movements and because they are there.

A spokesman for the American Indian Movement in Canada told us the other day that they want to worship The Greater Spirit, sing their songs, speak their languages, and I know of nobody who is going to argue with them. We have saffron-robed priests chanting in the streets of this nation, we have Catholics, Protestants, Moslems — there are even, I understand, a few Congregationalists — Mormons and the rest, and I have no knowledge of anyone who wishes to restrict them in the practice of their religion and the use of tongues. So with Indians.

But to talk of the Indians' traditional way of life being preserved, on Indian territory as an inviolable right is nonsense and it would help a great deal to put the thing in perspective if governments, and especially federal governments, would insist that there are to be no second-class nations within the nation; as Mr. Trudeau once insisted, with respect to Indian policy, that there would be no second-class citizens.

The Indian way of life — the spokesman in question said they wanted to live as their grandfathers lived — is not possible any more than the way of life of the Ukrainian in the Ukraine is possible here. What was the way of life of this young man's grandfather? It was lived in a different country, in a different century — indeed in a different age.

Whatever governments may be disposed to say at the moment about aboriginal rights or aboriginal ways, the fact is that the movement of time and events is against any arrangements that might for the moment concede them or hope to preserve them.

All we would be doing by enshrining them in law or custom would be to create problems for the future that would be greater problems for the Indians than for the rest of us. It is indeed strange how reactionary are the "progressives" of our time. They will serve causes that belong to the dead past merely because someone whose skin is not "white" (have you ever seen a white man?) sponsors it.

The silliness of the tough talk we now hear from some Indians is exactly the silliness of tone and temper and miscalculation that we heard a few years ago from those who were going to tear down society from a university base, then sit down and think what they would put in its place. The Indians have one different plank in their platform: they will put the clock back to grandfather's time.

What are we trying to do, if we pay heed to this reactionary prattle? To lock the Indian into a ghetto from which he will have to emerge, even more incapable than he often is now of fitting into any kind of society except that which subsists on handouts and in increasing squalor.

We have to say again and again that we will not buy it and that we will not be bullied by young people who have not thought enough about their plight to be able to offer any sort of solution for it. All the American Indian Movement has to offer the Indian is feeling; and tough talk; and trouble.

History led us to this point. We should understand what the past has done to us and them. We should give a great deal of thought to what must now be done. But we should reject out of hand every proposal that pretends there is a way for the Indian back into the past, separate from Canadian society or special within it. There is only one nation.

INVESTING IN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT

Japan Tapping Brazil Wealth

By CHARLES VANHECKE
Le Monde, Paris

RIO DE JANEIRO — Today's big country shaking hands with tomorrow's giant. That is more or less the picture that a succession of Japanese businessmen arriving week after week in Brazil try to give of the new and impressive economic co-operation between the two countries. Brazilian Finance Minister Delvin Neto finds himself amply rewarded today for having been the propagandist of the "Japanese economic miracle." Whenever they stop off at Sao Paulo or Brasilia, after having toured the Brazilian federation scouting for investment openings, the trade missions from Osaka or Tokyo never fail to return the compliment by lauding in their turn the Brazilian economic miracle.

Fast Growth Rate

A remarkable growth rate (10.4 per cent last year), a notorious political stability, a firmer grip on inflation: all these add up in Japanese eyes to making Brazil the best possible investment bet. Nor are the Japanese alone in thinking so. According to the statistics supplied by the Banco Central do Brazil, twice as much foreign capital flowed into the country last year as in 1972 ($3,520-million as against $1,846-million).

Ikuso Hirokawa, president of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce and Industry, recently declared that his country would invest $1,000-million — or half of all its foreign investments — in Brazil this year. This would put Japan right behind the United States as foreign investor. And last November the entire steering committee of the Keindaran went over to Brazil in a body to announce Japan's readiness to co-operate in Brazilian development.

The reasons for this invasion of a market which, while it may number 100 million people, is far from having the same number of consumers, have often been explained by Mr. Neto. The economies of the two countries, he says, are complementary.

Brazil has vast natural resources which are only just beginning to be tapped, and plenty of cheap labour, but lacks technology and capital. Japan is short of raw material, but it has knowhow, industrial organization, and an abundance of spare capital. According to the president of the Mitsubishi Corp., its foreign currency reserves should amount to $20 billion this year.

This is why Japan is primarily interested in what are known here as export corridors — road and rail networks as well as port terminals which permit raw materials to be exported. The Japanese Export-Import Bank has extended credit worth $200 million to help Brazil to buy the materials necessary for converting goods transport to automation.

Petro-Chemicals

With a stake already in Brazil's first steel plant and first shipyard, the Japanese are also gradually beginning to move into the country's economy. They are involved with Brazilian capital in the Bahia petro-chemical complex whose equipment they have in part helped to finance. Japanese have also been among the first to invest in the vast cattle-breeding farms set up in Amazonia.

They are ready to finance the construction of a steel city on the Para State coast in the north where Carajas iron ore could be processed. Mitsubishi wants to share in the construction of the hydroelectric plant at Sete Quedas on the Parana River which, with an output between 10 and 12 million kilowatts, would be bigger than any present Soviet or American power complex.

Brasilia has just authorized Tokyo to buy up the world's biggest manufacturer of instant coffee, Dominium of Sao Paulo.

But these "offers to co-operate" are only the visible part of a Japanese offensive regarded as aggressive in some quarters. It can also be seen, in a less spectacular but no less effective form, in the takeover of a number of small and medium-size private companies.

Tokyo's economic offensive has undoubtedly been helped here by the fact there is a large and long-established Japanese colony in Brazil. Japanese immigration, which started at the turn of the century and waxed particularly strong between the two world wars, played a pioneering role in Brazilian agriculture, introducing new crops and cornering the Sao Paulo fruits and vegetable supply market. The Japanese colony is about 700,000, three-quarters of whom live in Sao Paulo. A little under 5,000 of them are Nisseis or second-generation immigrants. They form a dynamic and coherent group, whose members are to be found in five banks, three financial houses, as well as municipal councils and several state legislatures.

The Game of Economics

By JOHN NICHOL

Economics is too inaccurate to be a science, and too disciplined to be an art. It is more of a sport.

The name of the game is to have full employment and price stability at the same time. This is a game without end — because no free economy will ever have full employment — and no free economy will ever have price stability — and certainly no free economy will ever have both simultaneously.

So whatever your dreams may be — you can forget that!

The unemployment figures go up and down — responding to markets, labor unrest, weather, and other acts of Man and God. Prices fluctuate in response to shortages and gluts, freight rates, tariff lobbies, and the value of the yen in terms of the Siamese baht.

The fact that the perfect economic balance can never be obtained in a free society makes the problem of economic management an unending one. There is no solution. There is only a day to day struggle by governments to keep the system from falling off on either side. Governments use their economic tools like a high-wire artist uses his balancing pole — up a little on one side, down a little on the other. They try to keep their feet on the wire!

At the moment the world faces accelerating shortages of essential goods. Foods, fuels, products of the earth and land itself are being consumed (if land can be said to be consumed) at an ever increasing rate.

Consider this against the fact of the population explosion. In total terms, an increasing number of people are pursuing a diminishing store of the world's goods. The result, according to the age old laws of supply and demand, is that on a global scale, prices are going up. This does not mean that all prices everywhere will always go up, all the time. There may be times — in temporary depressions — or when trade or monetary systems collapse — when prices will slump. But not for long. The irrevocable long term trend is up!

The job of a nation's economic managers then is not to prevent rising prices. That is impossible. Their job is to see that their nation's price level rises no faster than that of their trading partners. They must control price increases so that the people, both inside and outside the nation, maintain confidence in the value of the nation's money. Financial panics and runaway inflation occur when confidence in the value of money is destroyed.

Just as no government can stop rising prices — no government can guarantee full employment. Again the population explosion, plus the increasing replacement of men with machines, means that even in the most aggressive free economy, with the most perceptive economic managers, there will be people out of work.

The concept of price and wage control provides a popular answer to this dilemma because of its apparent simplicity. This simplicity is dangerously deceptive.

Price, wage and profit controls will bring in their wake rationing, shortages, black markets, a bulging bureaucracy and a constipated economy.

The fully controlled economies, like those of the Communist states, solve the problem in this way. Everyone works, and prices are stable. Old granny sweeps the street all day. Prices are stable, but she hasn't had an egg in her borscht since 1921.

To a free people this system of rigid controls and deliberate consumer shortages is unacceptable.

In the face of these facts, there are a few imperatives for any modern free government. It must have a system of unemployment insurance that pays ample benefits to those who really need it, coupled to educational, retraining and mobility programs that work. All social assistance plans must have built-in increases to compensate for the eroding buying power of money. The government must make industrial efficiency, in internationally competitive terms, a top priority. These three, plus sensitive and alert economic management, provide the only practical answer.

Suddenly you know.

The touch of a hand. And "each other" become the only important words in the world.

A diamond ring may be part of your discovery. If so, Birks can help you get the same value in a diamond that you expect from life. Because we buy and sell a lot of them, our prices in each of our many qualities are lower than you'll find elsewhere. Lower than what many catalogues call wholesale prices.

Cancer 'Vaccine' Results Probed

By STUART AUERBACH
Washington Post

NOGALES, Ariz. — For two years in the late 1950s doctors injected patients at the Ohio Penitentiary with live human cancer to see how their bodies would react.

Uniformly, the prisoners all developed walnut-sized tumors on their forearms, where the live cancer cells were injected. In all cases, those tumors contained the same type of cancer cells that the prisoners received, and when placed in tissue cultures these cancerus cells all multiplied.

More important, the tumors disappeared spontaneously within six weeks of the injections — indicating that the body can reject cancerous tumors the way it rejects transplanted organs.

Now 17 years later, the doctors who conducted the study are looking for the 160 prisoners. They want to see how many of them developed cancer; if fewer of them got cancer than the national average, those injections might have conferred the same kind of immunity that a live polio vaccine gives against polio.

Cancer scientists here at an American Cancer Society science writers seminar cautioned against attaching too much significance to the study. For one thing, they said, the number is too small to be statistically significant. For another, it's unclear whether the tumors were rejected as foreign bodies or because of the cancerous nature.

Dr. Arthur James, president of the American Cancer Society and one of the two doctors who conducted the Ohio study, said in an interview Friday that 59 of the men have been found and that none of them had developed cancer. But the nunmber is too small for any conclusions.

James, a Columbus, Ohio, surgeon and professor at Ohio State University, said he did the sutdy with Dr. Chester Southam, then with Sloan-Kettering Institute for cancer research in New York and now at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia.

They first injected the men — all volunteers — with the live cancer cells and watched the tumors develop. Later, they injected the men again with cancer cells. This time the tumors were small — the size of a hickory nut — and disappeared faster.

"We did beef up the defences present in those patients because the tumors didn't grow as large and they got rid of them said James.

"We did beef up the defences present in those patients because the tumors didn't gorw as large and they got rid of them faster," said James.

Several months later, the prisoners were injected with a different type of live cancer cells. They also shed those tumors, which again were also the smaller, hickory nut-size.

"This indicated there was some cross protection against different cancer cells," said James.

Later, a different group of prisoners received injections of inactivated cancer cells. Nothing happened. They were injected with the live cancer cells and again they developed the smaller tumors which disappeared quickly.

Asked about the ethics of using prisoners for this type of research, James said all the men volunteered. They received no extra pay or privileges and said they entered the study to help mankind.

"Nothing like this had ever been done before," said James. "We told them we didn't know what would hapen. We even told them they might get cancer."

Among the volunteers was Dr. Sam Sheppard, the Cleveland osteopath who was in the prison for murdering his wife.

PSAC Solves Disputes

CALGARY (CP) — Chest-thumping oratory took up much of the time at the five-day convention of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) this week, but when the triennial meeting ended Friday, the union had emerged with its first-ever collective bargaining policy.

The PSAC, third-largest union in Canada spent nearly four days trying to resolve internal disputes involving some of the 16 component unions.

Much of the last day was spent on elections of the national executive—resulting in re-election of the president and the four vice-presidents.

The 265 delegates from PSAC locals across the country approved policy statements on wages and salaries, pensions, hours-of-work, bilingualism and collective bargaining that set out goals for organized public servants.

TERMED PRODUCTIVE

Claude Edwards of Ottawa, reacclaimed president of the union for his third term, said the convention, third for the PSAC since its formation in 1966, was the most divisive, but also the most productive.

Mr. Edwards said in an interview at the close of the meeting that he was encouraged by the policy framework established by delegates.

Debate early in the week had concentrated on two decisions made by the national executive, both of which were altered by convention votes.

One reversed a jurisdictional decision made by Mr. Edwards and the other allowed paid executive secretaries selected as component delegates to participate with full delegate rights.

Once the internal problems were out of the way, however, the union got down to policy business.

The PSAC will aim at a bilingualism policy that protects unilingual employees, while at the same time supporting the federal government's efforts to promote bilingualism in the public service.

WANTS COMMITTEE

The union will also try to set up an advisory committee on public service pensions which will include union representatives. Federal public servants are now unable to bargain their pensions.

OPPEL TO FLY TO TRAVIS AFB

CLARK AIR BASE, Phillipines (UPI) — An attack of malaria today separated two young missionaries, an American and a Canadian, who survived the prison camps of Indochina together.

Samuel A. Mattix, 20, flew to the United States for a reunion with his father who lives in Centralia, Wash. His military hospital plane, with 17 other ex-prisoners of war, was bound for Travis Air Force Base, Calif.

His close friend, Lloyd Oppel, 21, whose parents live in Courtenay, remained behind at the Clark Air Base hospital with what officials described as a "touch of malaria."

He is scheduled to fly to Travis Sunday with further hospitalization at Bremerton, Wash., whre he will rejoin Mattix.

Mattix and Oppel were working with the Christian Mission in Many Lands organization in Laos when the town of Kenkok was overrun by Communist troops Oct. 28. The two men survived but two women missionaries captured with them were tied to stakes and burned to death inside a house that caught fire.

The two missionaries were captured together, kept in prison together and released together last Wednesday in Hanoi.

In Port Alberni Lloyd's brother said Lloyd, 21, of Courtenay, is responding to medical treatment in Manila.

"I heard Friday from the external affairs department that he's doing well and coming along," W. E. Oppel said.

"But they don't know how long he'll be in hospital so I can't say when we'll see him," he added.

UP-ISLANDERS PROTEST HIGHWAY REROUTING

NIMPKISH CAMP—A petition is being circulated on northern Vancouver Island against the provincial government's proposed rerouting of the North Island Highway.

Under consideration by the highways department is an alternate route that would take the highway from Woss Camp to Gold River instead of from Woss to Kelsey Bay.

The petition claims the original plans called for a 60-mile per hour highway via Nimpkish, Woss and Kelsey Bay, ending at Campbell River—a distance of about 78 miles.

The alternate route through Gold River is 108 miles, it claims.

The petition will be forwarded to MLA Karen Sanford.

More Fighting In S. Vietnam

SAIGON — More post-truce fighting was reported in South Vietnam Friday and U.S. warplanes struck for the 23rd consecutive day in Cambodia.

Hanoi said now that U.S. troops are out of South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu's regime is finished.

The Saigon command said Communist gunners launched a heavy artillery barrage on a 600-man government ranger base 50 miles north of Saigon that killed one trooper and wounded 25 others.

The shelling of the Tong le Chan base occurred on the first anniversary of the opening of the North Vietnamese spring offensive of 1972 — the last major Communist campaign of the war.

A command spokesman told the daily news briefing today that 19,229 Vietnamese on both sides have been killed since the cease-fire began. He said this included 15,461 Communist soldiers, 3,286 Saigon government troops and 482 civilians.

Radio Hanoi, in a broadcast monitored in Saigon, said the United States completed the withdrawal of its last troops from South Vietnam and said American servicemen "will not come back so easily. Nobody will be able to save them (the Thieu administration) now."

Thieu left today on a globe-circling tour that takes him first to the United States for a discussion with President Nixon on South Vietnam's future. Throughout his tour, Thieu is expected to seek financial and political support for his post-war government.

U.S. Pacific Forces Command Headquarters in Honolulu said U.S. B-52 bombers and tactical fighter-bombers hit Communist positions and supply routes in Cambodia Friday. Military sources said some of the strikes hit around Highway 4 and along Highway 1, where heavy fighting has occurred in recent days between government soldiers and Communist troops.

Military sources in Phnom Penh said the U.S. air strikes avoided targets near the Cambodian capital because of bad weather.

Digitalis Poisoning 'Alarming'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — There is an alarmingly high incidence of digitalis poisoning even in the best of institutions, Dr. Thomas W. Smith, a Harvard University medical professor, said Thursday.

He told doctors and medical students at Queen's University that of 931 consecutive admissions screened at Boston City Hospital, 135 patients were on digitalis—probably the most common drug for heart patients.

Of those, 23 per cent were suffering from toxicity. He said that 43 per cent of these died with the drug a contributing and not the sole factor in the deaths.

Later he said his statistics represented "the worst possible" circumstances and that usually 10 per cent of patients on digitalis would suffer from poisoning.

Symptoms ranged from headache and nausea to irregular heart beat and coma. Sudden death could come from cardiac arrest.

304 GIVE BLOOD AT SCHOOLS

Blood clinics at four senior high schools this week produced a total of 304 donors, Red Cross spokesman Charles MacNeill said today.

There were 94 donors at Oak Bay senior on Tuesday, 70 at Esquimalt senior Wednesday, 97 at Mount Douglas Thursday and 43 at Claremont Friday.

While the objective had been 375, MacNeill described the school results as "very good."

AT CROSSROADS in the Cariboo country there's still snow on the ground. These abandoned buildings are on the sprawling Gang Ranch, southwest of Williams Lake.

TORTURE STORIES COVER-UP: REDS

SAIGON (Reuter) — A senior Viet Cong official said today that United States accusations of Communist maltreatment of prisoners of war are designed to cover up acts of brutality against Communists held captive in South Vietnam.

Col. Vo Dang Giang told reporters in Saigon that minutes prepared by observers from the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) at each of the prisoner releases showed all the freed Americans were in good health.

"All the minutes for the return of U.S. military personnel say the same thing—that their general health was good and they received fine treatment," the Viet Cong spokesman said.

Giang, deputy leader of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation to the Joint Military Commission (JMC), spoke at a weekly news conference at the Viet Cong quarters inside a closely-guarded compound on Tan Son Nhut air base.

The colonel said that in contrast to American captives, Communist war prisoners released by the South Vietnamese were frequently not in good health. Some were maimed and all were generally in bad condition.

"In reply to the American charges, my answer is clear. The minutes of the releases are there for all to see.

"It (the accusation) is a campaign staged by the other side to cover up acts of brutality against our people," Giang said.

Busing Major Issue

DUNCAN — Proposed extension of the school day at Cowichan Senior High School to accommodate 180 Chemainus students was tabled by the Cowichan School Board at a special meeting this week.

Problems with busing the Grade 11 and 12 students from Chemainus was a major issue, board chairman Gerry Philippson said. The board will wait for a more detailed study of the proposal to be made.

Cost of the busing would be $70,000 to $75,000 annually, said David Bradbury, chairman of the buildings and transportation committee.

The plan was to provide for the extra students by creating an additionl time space during the day by adding 20 minutes in the morning and 10 minutes in the afternoon, and shortening each period by five minutes.

Decision to move the students to Cowichan was based on the non-accreditation of Chemainus High School and the lack of a variety of senior level courses there.

Duncan Endorses Arena Plan

DUNCAN — A resolution from the city of Duncan endorsing the construction of another ice arena in the area was received and filed by Cowichan Valley Regional District board this week.

The resolution suggested the arena be built and financed through the regional district.

The board had learned at its last meeting that Mill Bay, Cobble Hill, Cowichan Bay and Shawnigan Lake areas were interested in building an arena.

Cost of an arena with a hockey and curling rink in the southern part of the district would be about $880,000 and an application is being made for one-third of that cost under the provincial recreational facilities program, the board was told.

Shawnigan Lake director Clifford Latter suggested that perhaps Duncan could join the other areas for the ice arena.

BUNKER RECALLED

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has announced the resignation of Ellsworth Bunker, ambassador to South Vietnam for six years over the peak and the decline of American involvement in that nation's longest war.

The recall of the durable, taciturn Bunker, one of the firmest supporters of the war, was no retirenment notice, although he will be 79 in May. The White House announced he will be taking on "other duties" for the president in the "relatively near future."

LONDON — An architect, enraged at losing a divorce court action Friday, drove a meat cleaver into a desk in front of two startled justices and hurled a chunk of meat at them, shouting: "You poor old men, here's some brains for you."

Thomas Oxley, 52, embedded the nine-inch cleaver in the desk. Threw the meat and hurled books at court officials before he was overpowered and dragged from the courtroom.

EDINBURGH — The Duke of Hamilton, 70, Scotland's premier peer and reluctant host of Nazi leader Rudolf Hess during the Second World War, has died after a heart attack his family announced today.

Douglas-Hamilton was head of the Douglas clan and as such held the honor of leading the vanguard of the army of Scotland into battle in the war.

The duke is survived by his widow and five sons.

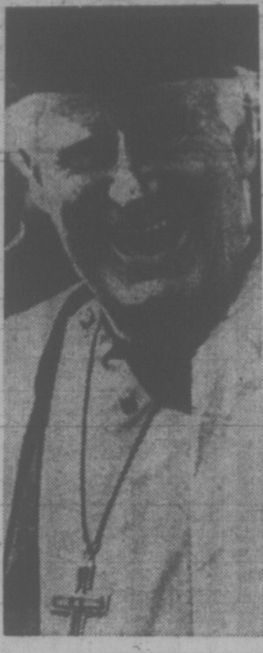
WINNIPEG — Rev. Daniel Berrigan, an American priest cn parole from a prison term for burning draft documents, said Friday he would never again enter Canada unless he receives an apology from Canadian officals.

Father Berrigan, scheduled to address University of Manitobe students Friday and again today (Saturday), made the comment in a telephone interview from New York after he refused to continue on a flight from Toronto to Winnipeg because he was questioned by RCMP.

CORTINO D' AMPEZZO, Italy — Midway through a bedroom love scene with Elizabeth Tylor, German actor Helmut Berger was unable to go on.

He was found to be running a high fever, but doctors blamed the flu, not Miss Taylor.

MONTREAL — Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque, who believes Quebec's separation is inevitable, said he hopes English-speaking Quebecers will stay to help build the "small country." In a speech to the 6,500-member Association of Protestant Teachers Levesque said also he dislikes the word "separatism" because it has come to have negative connotations.



RAMSEY

Ramsey to Retire

LONDON (Reuter) — Dr. Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury and spiritual leader of the world's 65 million Anglicans, will retire late next year, it was disclosed Friday.

Although it was known the archbishop would step down in the near future, a date was mentioned for the first time today when Dr. Ramsey returned from a month-long tour of Asia and the Far East.

His press secretary, John Miles, told reporters at Heathrow Airport "He is 69 this November and will retire when he is 70."

The disclosure will almost certainly intensify speculation about his successor and also pressure from within the church itself for a change in the method of selecting the new archbishop.

Under the present system, the British prime minister makes a recommendation to Queen Elizabeth who announces the appointment in her role as temporal head of the church.

But many leaders within the Anglican community want the church to have a greater say in the selection process for both bishops and archbishops.

Pipe Explosion Kills 5 Workers

LOERRACH (AP) — Five construction workers were killed and one was missing, presumed dead, when a gas pipeline near this West German town exploded late Friday night, police reported.

The pressurized gas blew out a lock and threw the construction crew up to 30 yards away, police said. Four other men were injured slightly in the blast and were released after hospital treatment.

3,000 NEEDED FOR CANVASS

The Salvation Army is trying to recruit 3,000 vlunteers to canvass Victoria residents in a one-night blitz April 30.

Red Shield Appeal chairman Judyth Kirchner has divided Greater Victoria into 58 districts for campaign purposes.

The army hopes to raise $89,100 for its work here. In 1972 the local corps spent more than $600,000 to provide such services to the community as an emergency welfare fund, homes for the aged, treatment for alcoholics and aid to burnt out families.

The Salvation Army has had to turn away more men than it treats at its centre for alcoholics at 516 Yates, Major Jack Barr said.

"We are turning away four to six men a week who are looking for our services but there is no room," he said.

He was commenting on the army's annual report which stated 171 men were treated during 1972.

Male Pill Tested

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers at Boston University have developed a biochemical test they say determines the proper balance of hormones to make an effective male contraceptive pill which does not alter male sex drive.

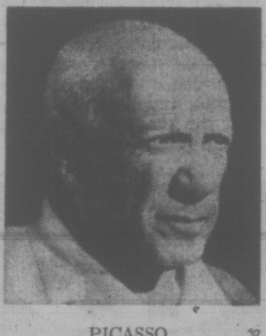
With the test, they developed a treatment, similar in composition to female contraceptive pills, which stops sperm cells production in male rats, but maintains mating behavior, or potency, the researchers said Friday.

Dr. Charles Terner, professor of Biology, and his team published results of their studies in the March issue of the British Journal of Reproduction and Fertility.

Dr. Terner says the concept of chemical sterilization of the male is "not all that new, but we developed a treatment and got it to work." Past attempts at developing birth control pills for men have had the serious drawbacks of increasing impotency or overstimulating the prostrate gland and making it vulnerable to cancer.

Researchers have been combining androgens with progestin or estrogen to produce anti-androgens, hoping to get the advantages of each type of hormone while cancelling out the disadvantages.

Dr. Terner and his team developed a biochemical test which measures the effects of anti-androgens directly on the body cells from which sperm cells develop.



PICASSO

Picasso Exhibition

PARIS (UPI) — A showing of 201 paintings by Pablo Picasso will be held in May in the first mass exhibition of new works by the master since 1970.

The paintings, to be displayed May 23 in Avignon, date back to the closing months of 1970. The most recent were completed last month.

Any one of the works could be worth up to $200,000 by the 91-year-old Picasso's own estimate.

The developer of cubism is now a virtual recluse and declined even to attend a giant celebration of his 90th birthday.

He comes out of his home in Mougins, on the French Riviera, only occasionally, sometimes to shop in nearby Nice.

On his 80th birthday celebration, which he did attend, Picasso said, "I don't like to go out, usually because I prefer to work."

Drama Festival April 30

For the first time in 13 years, the B.C. Drama Association Vancouver Island Zone annual festival will be held in Greater Victoria.

The event will take place at Church Hall, Glencairn Lane, Colwood, April 30 to May 5.

There are 18 entries representing 13 clubs, providing a full week's evenings of one-act plays.

Clubs entered include Campbell River Players, Colwood Country Players, Courtenay Little Theatre, District 69 Players of Parksville, Driftwood Players (Gibson's Landing), Gallery Players of Victoria, Nanaimo Theatre Group, Old Vic Players, Victoria, Peninsula Players, Sidney, Texada Drama Club, Salt Spring Island Community Players and Yellow Point Drama Club.

NDP Shelves Dues Clause

A proposal by former labor minister Jim Chabot (SC — Columbia River) that a "Christian conscience" clause be written into B.C.'s labor laws was shelved Friday by the NDP government.

Chabot had proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act which would have allowed a person who did not want to pay his union dues to the union to appear before the Labor Relations Board and state his case.

He said similar provision is made in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Manitoba and should be brought into effect in B.C. A person appearing would then have the opportunity of attempting to convince the board that his dues should be paid to the charity of his choice or to a fund designated by the board.

Chabot attacked Labor Minister Bill King for the comments he said King made in a letter sent to a man who had appealed to the minister to have a conscience clause written into the legislation.

The Socred said King had written that the man had "bordered on bigotry" and that Christianity is often used "to clothe many questionable philosophies."

CLAUSE 'PHONEY'

He also ciricized Rosemary Brown (NDP — Vancouver-Buarrard) for allegedly calling the conscience clause "phoney."

King told Chabot that he is not prepared to accept amendments that will change his labor legislation until he has completed a study of the labor-management relationship in the province.

People who wish changes enacted will have the opportunity to appear at public hearings which will be held in connection with the study, he said.

The minister then moved adjournment of the debate on Chabot's motion, having the effect of allowing the motion to die on the order paper.

Other motions proposed by members of the opposition parties suffered an even harsher fate, as the legislature spent an hour discussing private members' bills.

Ten bills, sponsored by private opposition members, were ruled out of order because they involve expenditure of public money or interfere with government revenue.

Private members' bills, in the former Social Credit administration, were always left until near the end of the session. Many bills were never brought up for second reading and subsequently were dropped.

New WCB Chairman Selected

Terrance G. Ison, a member of the law faculty at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., has been named chairman of the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Board.

He succeeds Cyril White, who resigned from the chairman's job several months ago.

Ison, who holds law degrees from the University of London and Harvard Law School, formerly practised law with the Vancouver firm of Lawson, Lundell, Lawson and McIntosh after coming to Canada from England in 1960.

He was a law faculty member at the University of British Columbia until 1968, when he joined the Queen's faculty.

Ison is the author of a book on personal injury compensation and of several law review articles. Two of these were done on the financial problems of personal injury. He has done studies on workmen's compensation.

Labor Minister Bill King said of the appointment: "Mr. Ison has had a wide and varied career including an extensive interest in compensation matters which should prove to be highly beneficial to the workers of the province."

Shell Hikes Expenses By $15M to $100M

TORONTO (CP) — Shell Canada Ltd. plans capital and exploration expenditures this year of about $100 million, an increase of $15 million from 1972, the company said in its annual report.

It said environmental control projects account for most of the increase.

The company also said exploration and spending connected with the Alberta oil sands, undertaken in a joint venture agreement with Shell Explorer Ltd., are expected to rise to $50 million this year from $46 million last year.

Shell Explorer is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Shell Oil Co. of Houston, Tex.

Shell Canada is studying royalty and taxation levels being reviewed by the Alberta government and hopes such considerations will be resolved by the end of th year.

The company then will apply to the provincial government for a permit to proceed with oil sands development.

As reported earlier, Shell Canada's consolidated net earnings for 1972 amounted to $78,997,000 or $2.37 a share, up 28 per cent from $61,543,000 and $1.85 the year earlier.

Aid Refused

NEW YORK (CP) — The United States Veterans Administration said Thursday it was compelled by law to refuse treatment to Thomas Aiken, a Vietnam veteran who injured an eye in combat. Aiken, 24, of New York, was repeatedly turned away from a Veterans Administration hospital because of his undesirable discharge, and eventually lost the eye. A Veterans Administration spokesman said it was "mandatory under the law" that Aiken be refused treatment. He added that the reasons for refusing benefits are confidential.

ALCAN PIPE ANNOUNCEMENT

GORDON K. CLEMENT

Gordon K. Clement has been elected president of Alcan Pipe Limited, the Vernon, B.C. manufacturer of irrigation tubing. He succeeds Creighton Cross, who was recently appointed vice president of Alcan Canada Products Limited, Alcan Pipe's parent company. Mr. Clement brings to his new position over 25 years experience in the aluminum industry. He has held senior positions with Alcan in both the smelting and fabricating fields, including that of general manager of the Extrusion Division of Alcan Canada Products Limited. He will reside in Vernon.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday to Friday at 388-3551. These hours to be kept to filing deadline, April 30. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I have to travel 35 miles to get from my home to my place of employment. There is no bus service. Can I claim travelling expenses when filing my income tax return.

A. No. The expense of travelling to and from work is not deductible. For 1972 and subsequent years, however, you may claim an employment expense deduction of three per cent of your employment income, up to $150 a year.

Q. Is a disability pension under theh Canada Pension Plan taxable? What about a regular pension under this plan?

A. Both a disability pension and a regular pension under the Canada Pension Plan are income for tax purposes and therefore taxable.

Court Upholds Tax Agreement

By I. H. ASPER

One of the cloudiest areas of tax law is the question of how far taxpayers can go in agreeing amongst themselves on the relative tax consequences of business arrangements made between them.

The situation arises frequently, because once two people reach an agreement in principle on a business deal, they will then try to implement the transaction in a manner which will cost each of the parties to the deal the least tax, or, at least in arriving at the business arrangement, they will certainly take into account the intended tax consequences and costs of the arrangement.

This is perfectly legitimate.

However, it is equally lawful for the court to upset what it considers to be a tax avoidance or artificial transaction and ignore the form in which the deal is made and look to the substance of what was actually done.

That will often produce tax consequences considerably different from what the parties really intended or expected.

One of the dangers of this power being given under the Income Tax Act, that is, the right of the courts, in effect, to rewrite the deal between two businessmen.

An example of this kind of case came before the federal court a few weeks ago. The facts were typical of hundreds of similar business transactions which occur every year and should be of interest to people who are shareholders in partnerships or small business ventures, where the situation most frequently arises.

In the case before the court, the taxpayer was a shareholder, along with three others, in an Ontario company. There had been a very serious falling-out amongst the shareholders, and the three remaining shareholders resolved to separate themselves from the taxpayer, their co-shareholder.

They made him an offer to buy his shares for approximately $106,000. The taxpayer made several counter offers, and, after negotiations an agreement was reached.

The remaining shareholders agreed to pay him $76,000 for his shares in the company, plus certain cash bonuses, and the company gave him a contract for consulting services for a fee of $15,000 per year for five years.

Although it didn't come out in the evidence, one can assume that the change in the deal was based on tax considerations. For example, if the shareholders simply paid him $106,000, it would be a nondeductible expense for them because it is money laid out to buy a capital asset, the shares.

On the other hand, the $106,000 would likely have been a capital gain for the taxpayer, and since the transaction arose before the imposition of the capital gains tax, he would wind up with $106,000 net.

The arrangement actually entered into would see him receive $76,000 as a capital gain, and $75,000 would come to him as taxable income, ostensibly for the consulting services. Because it was spread out over five years, his effective tax rate on the $15,000 per year consulting fee might be about 25 per cent, thus making a total income tax on the $75,000 of consulting fees in the amount of roughly $19,000.

In this way, the taxpayer would receive $76,000 tax-free for the shares, and about $56,000 after taxes on the consulting contract. The total, after taxes, would be $132,000, as opposed to the $106,000 he had been offered as a capital gain on the sale of his shares. Obviously, he would be much better off in both commercial and tax terms.

From the point of view of the buying shareholders and the company, the final form of arrangement would not have seen them in a much different position than had they carried out the original offer to buy the shares for $106,000.

YOUR TAXES

Assuming the company was in the 50 per cent tax bracket, the cost of paying the $15,000 per year consulting contract would be a deductible expense, and would come to $37,500. Add this to the $37,500.

Assuming the company was in the 50 per cent tax bracket, the cost of paying the $15,000 per year consulting contract would be a deductible expense, and would come to $37,500. Add this to the $76,000 that they had to lay out for the shares, and the cost was only $7,000 more than the $106,000 originally offered.

Assuming that was their reasoning, coupled with their desire to get rid of the taxpayer as a shareholder, that was the way in which the transaction was written up — $76,000 for the shares, plus a five year consulting contract at $15,000 per year.

However, the taxpayer broke the faith. He no sooner got his $76,000 and started receiving his consulting contract payment than he filed his tax return, and claimed that the $15,000 per year consulting fees weren't consulting fees at all, but were really a payment for the shares, and were thus capital, rather than income.

This has been done before, but usually it is the tax department which looks to the form in which a transaction is done and taxes it on the basis of what the real intent. It might well be argued, in the present case, that the real intent was to buy his shares and therefore any money paid, whether for the shares or under the alleged consulting contract, was really a nondeductible expense for the company, and a non-taxable receipt for the taxpayer.

Indeed, that's what the tax appeal board said when the matter first went to court. The tax consequence to be settled was this: Were the consulting fees genuinely paid for services to be rendered, in which case they were to be taxes in the hands of the recipient, and deductible by the paying corporation, or were they really a charade and another method of payment for the shares the taxpayer had sold?

If the latter were held to be the case, then the payments would be tax-free in the hands of the taxpayer, and nondeductible expenses by the corporation. That would certainly have a dramatic effect on the deal.

If a court ruled on the latter principle, the taxpayer would in effect get $150,000 for his shares, and not $132,000 as projected, and the cost of the shares to the buying parties would be $150,000, and not $113,000 as expected.

The tax appeal board ruled in favor of the taxpayer, saying that notwithstanding the form in which the agreement were entered into, dividing the money between the purchase price of the shares and the consulting contract, the real intention was to pay all of the moneys to the taxpayer in order to buy his shares, and since that was a capital purchase of an asset, the consulting contract payments weren't deductible by the company nor were they taxable in the hands of the shareholder.

There is little doubt that the court reached the right conclusion. It would be unfortunate if businessmen could not rely upon the advice they get as to the tax consequences of the way in which they do their business. The uncertainty would make it somewhat difficult and add another note of complexity to the cost of doing business.

It is conceded that where a flagrant abuse of the tax laws occurs in a business transaction, the court should have the right to set it aside, but in this case, as in most others of its kind, the court should not interfere.

In effect, the court has wisely said to these taxpayers: You are grown men, you agreed upon the tax consequences of what you were doing, everyone understood it, and someone apparently has tried to break the deal, but we will not allow the tax courts to be used as an agency for one who is so inclined.

Not-So-Merry Widow Needs to Pick Up Life

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The president of Victoria Operatic Society, Margaret Duff, reminds theatre-goers in a program message the society's first presentation in the McPherson Playhouse was Franz Lehar's The Merry Widow.

The society has done it twice before and presumably its popularity on those occasions — "standing room only" — persuaded the board to give it a third go.

But the current Widow isn't very merry.

The show opened Friday to a well-filled McPherson where it will play through next Saturday, hopefully picking up some life on the way.

There were problems from the beginning with wry sounds from the orchestra in the overture, mostly emanating from the brass. When the strings alone were playing the effect was quite lovely.

Now and then musicial director Rodney Webster achieved a full, firmly chorded choral sound but his interpretation of the score while highly romatic was, unfortunately, much too refined.

Because of this general muting of the performance there was a tendency for the music tempos to seem always a shade slow.

But the musical direction does not bear the whole brunt of what, by the middle of the second act, had become tedious to the point of boredom.

On stage there was no pace and only sporadically and very briefly, any vitality — in a couple of dance numbers, for instance, and in the male sextet, Women.

But the breezy, toe-tapping I'm Off to Chez Maxims never got off anywhere and as for the super-number, Vilia, it was stifled by that super refinement and a total lack of imagination in staging.

Nan Long who sings the widow Sonia, has a lovely, cultivated voice and charming manner but she seemed to be acting and singing behind a veil and was often placed at a disadvantage on stage, including that of an awkward and contrived first entrance.

The voices of both Marilyn MacKenize (Natalie) and William Broadhead (St. Brioche) were a decided attribute and so were the strong comedy performances of Cliff Clarke and Barry Grimshaw.

Doug Eriksen appeared ill at ease as Prince Danilo and many of his sung and spoken lines were blurred and hard to distinguish. He has nevertheless, when audible, a voice of agreeable quality.

Stage director Ted Gaskell has not worked hard enough with this cast.

If he had cracked the whip more often dialogue and movement would be crisper, and there would be less shuffling on and off in entrances and exits — no one other than Clarke made a really decisive entrance or an exit that had character all evening.

Tighter cues, a great deal more vitality throughout with a much faster more buoyant tempo is needed if this show is to pull itself up to the level of some past productions.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler congratulated a 20-year-old man as he sentenced him to five months definite and seven months indeterminate in provincial court Friday.

Paul Alfred Evans, 3798 Rowland Ave., pleaded guilty to possession of heroin.

Evidence was that Evans was checked by police on the fourth floor of Victoria General Hospital at 7:40 p.m. Dec. 7. A balloon containing five caps and one partially filled with heroin was found in his pocket.

He admitted purchasing nine caps the night before and said he used a cap a day.

Beofre sentence, defence counsel Robin Dalziel said, "He's anxious to go to a forestry camp."

"I congratulate the young man" said Ostler, "He's showing very good sense . . ."

Ostler ordered the sentence be served in the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre with a "strong recommendation" Evans be sent to a forestry camp.

Peggy Tychowsky, 21, of no fixed address, was sentenced to 45 days followed by an 18-month probationary period for 15 counts of false pretences under $200.

Police testified the woman passed NSF cheques totalling more than $500 between Feb. 21 and March 7. Her bank account had been closed by the bank Nov. 28.

During an interview at Saanich police station March 8, she admitted having a three-cap-a-day heroin habit. She also admitted knowing her account was closed.

Defence counsel Robin Dalziel told the court Tychowsky had a four-year-old child to care for and she'd been in custody since March 19.

"This young woman has a great number of problems," said Ostler.

He said he was perepared to order "an extremely light sentence."

Abraham Thomas, 17, of 2835 Nanaimo, was given a suspended sentence and six-month probationary term for pulling a false fire alarm.

At 11:30 a.m. on March 3 police and seven fire vehicles answered an alarm at Government and Pembroke. There was no fire.

A man told police he'd seen two young men pull the alarm and walk up Government Street. Thomas and a juvenile were apprehended a few minutes later.

"There's nothing either funny or smart about pulling a false fire alarm," said Ostler.

In traffic court, Stanley West, 59, of 100 Humpback Rd., was fined $350 for impaired driving and $200 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

Douglas G. Dooling, 31 of Work Point Barracks, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving for three months for impaired driving.

Derek John Yeoman, 29, of 3390 Veteran, was fined $350 for having care and control of a vehicle while impaired.

Hitachi knows all about stereo components

When you think of Hitachi, you can't help but think of superior quality and craftsmanship. And they plan on keeping that unique reputation with one of their latest and most fully equipped component stereos.

Take the receiver/amplifier. It's fully transistorized, has an AM/FM stereo tuner, FM muting circuit to eliminate interstation noises and headphone jack. All the controls are clearly visible, the dial scale is illuminated for easier reading and, of course, there's an FM stereo indicator lamp.

Next, the speakers. An incredibly compact two-way speaker system with absolutely dynamic sound quality.

Don't forget the turntable. Deluxe Garrard record changer handles your records gently. No fear of scratching with this marvellous piece of equipment.

Finally, the stand. Lustrous wood veneer in a super contemporary design. Note there's plenty of room to store your records.

By this time you're probably wondering about the price. Considering the quality and features involved it must cost a fortune, right? Wrong! The Bay believes everyone deserves Hitachi, so we've really value priced this model.

'Little Boys Don't Cry'—Maybe They Should

Why do Women Outnumber Men At Eric Martin Institute?

By DON VIPOND

Times Staff

There were 458 men and 741 women admitted to the Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric treatment last year. Why so many more women than men?

That's a question which interests Dr. Ian Kenning, head of the division of psychiatry at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"I frankly don't know what the real reasons are, I just have my own ideas," he says. But he thinks the ratio is significant, particularly when considered together with the fact that jails are occupied mainly by men.

Men are consistently in more difficulty with the law in so many ways, from traffic offences to acts of aggression, he notes.

Could it be that women are more honest in recognizing their emotional problems, asking for help?

Kenning thinks that's a factor.

"'Little boys don't cry,' that's the password of our society. And so, little boys don't get sick. But their aggression gets acted out.

"To see a 'shrink' or psychiatrist is a big thing if you're not supposed to cry or get sick."

Is there anything which renders women physically more susceptable to mental illness?

"I don't think so . . . women are more prone to depression premenstrually but I don't think that's a big factor."

Cop Out

Even though a considerable number of women are admitted to EMI just before their period, he suggests relating that hormone change to psychiatric problems "is a bit of a cop-out."

It's similar to common attitudes on the menopause, he says. The menopause has become a socially acceptable reason for all sorts of behavior changes, so people frequently don't look for the real reasons.

The menopause often coincides with a time of major change in a woman's lifestyle — the end to raising children — and that change can be emotionally hazardous.

"That's been her job, maybe for 15 or 20 or 25 years. Then, all of a sudden she's pensioned off, and she's got to look at getting a new thing that's meaningful and meeting her needs for expression.

"So I think in that sense, that time . . . is a social hazard for women."

Are women more likely to seek help for mental problems?

"I think women are more accepting to help."

Perhaps too, Kenning says, that is a tendency under stress for women to look to someone for help while men choose another outlet, maybe getting drunk.

He goes down to the beer parlor and sounds off to the guys. And she maybe goes to the doctor."

He thinks the higher ratio of women at EMI is likely paralleled in doctors' offices. He estimates he sees close to twice as many women as men.

Booze Policy

On men and booze, he notes another factor which may help shape the ratio of admissions to EMI. The policy at the hospital, "rightly or wrongly," is not to admit patients solely for alcoholic problems. And that keeps more men out than women.

If men who are disturbed tend to express themselves more aggressively, ending up in court and jail, does it follow that a number of men in prison should more properly be in hospitals like EMI?

"You're getting into the problem of medical-legal responsibility. But let me put it this way . . . I did a lot of consulting work at William Head (prison) and certainly some of the men you see there have severe emotional problems which are similar to what you see more often in women in hospital.

"I feel there needs to be a greater partnership between the law and psychiatry. This is coming very slowly, because they are afraid of each other."

Are there more young people in EMI than other age groups?

"We see a lot of adolescent problems, no doubt about that . . . but Victoria is also a city of older people and we get a lot of older age depressions . . . middle life and on."

Women get more depressions than men, he says. One group, for example: older women who have just lost their husband.

Are depressions the biggest problem among patients at EMI?

Kenning estimates depression is the diagnosis in as many as half the institute's cases. But there are many kinds of depression and a good deal of doctors don't know about them.

Depression, he says, is a symptom of other problems.

"My belief is that depression relates to lack of balance in your way of life. If you're not getting healthy expression, you may well get depressed. This is certainly one kind of depression.

"Women I think on the whole have a little greater trouble getting healthy expression"

Is that because the home environment many women find themselves in, as housekeepers and mothers, doesn't give them the same chance to express themselves?

"I think that's right. While work can be a stress on men, it also gives them responsibility, expression. A lot of people I see are better if they have a job. It makes a big differance."

Is the company, the companionship, men find at work important?

"This is the way you find friends, often through your work or your church. This business of finding friends is a big hazard in our society.

"Also, I think that children . . . are predominantly in our society the responsibility of women. And children are a major stress. I really think that bringing up children is a harder job than most guys have going to work. . .

Woman's Job

"There's a sort of thing in our society — if you're a woman you stay home and look after the kids. And it doesn't suit all women. . ."

Kenning says it's his experience that when women come for treatment during the stress period of raising children, their problems generally relate to the marital situation too.

"There are a lot of guys who feel if they bring the pay cheque home, the rest of the time is theirs. And so they have one kid every year for the last four years — 'that's her job.'

"This is not realistic, because four small children is an enormous burden, far bigger than what he's doing bringing the money home."

Another significant group among women patients are "single mothers," whether unmarried, divorced or widowed.

"Women who are bringing up children on their own have a tough life in our society," says Kenning.

They are usually financially limited, so even the price of a babysitter to give them a break takes some doing. And they need a break more because they have no one to share responsibilities.

It's one of the fields where research is needed, he suggests.

Is it possible to research this kind of thing? Will people with personal troubles be honest in talking about them?

"That's what part of the new human potential movement is about, isn't it — people being honest with people and stating their real feelings. I see this as a very constructive movement.

"The previous generation had a lot of good things about it, in terms of stability . . . but they had to go to cocktail parties to say what they really felt. And that's a sad commentary.

"I think that this new movement, in terms of people learning to come on honest, is a bright thing."

Mental illness. There's an impression it's more common now than, say, at the turn of the century. Is that so, or is it a matter of more specialists now, better diagnosis, more treatment?

Kenning says he has not examined the figures recently, but it is generally held in the profession that major mental illnesses are to be found, then as now, in the same proportion.

"One thing we are seeing, of course, is a different manifestation of stress in youth by drugs, a different manifestation of stress in young adult women of which the most common manifestation is the overdose.

"And this is one thing which brings more women into hospital . . .

"Unfortunately . . . partly because of the media . . . (the overdose) has become the non-verbal way of trying to change a lifestyle . . . and of course it's a very bad and very expensive way . . . it doesn't lead to any positive change."

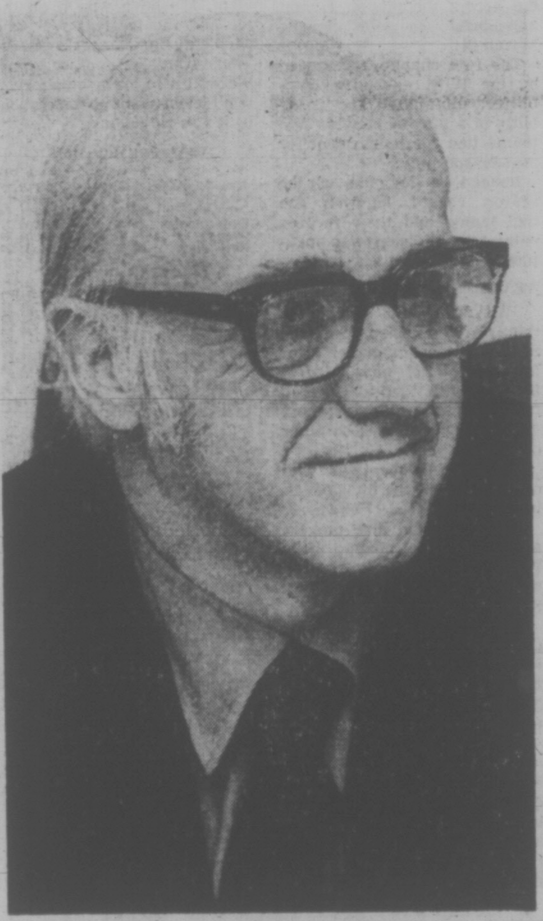
More Emotion

On the subject of stress, and women reacting to it with more emotion, he says:

"I don't know whether it's related at all but of course men are much more prone to degenerative diseases such as arteriosclerosis . . . I don't know if the two are related but it's an interesting thing to speculate on."

Could it be that if you are able to unload your emotional charge, you're less likely to be subject to these degenerative diseases?

"Maybe so. Maybe women have the last laugh, because men die sooner."



Dr. Ian Kenning

Dissidents Would Oust Board

A special general meeting of the Memorial Society of British Columbia won't be held until a report from the attorney-general's department requested by the society is completed and published, society president Clare Yarwood of Victoria said today.

The department is investigating alleged irregularities in First Memorial Service Ltd. of North Vancouver, with whom the society has an undertaking contract.

Yarwood received a letter Friday from six dissident members of the 80,000-member society asking for an extraordinary general meeting to elect a new board of directors.

Five former directors and former executive director Jean Mohart signed the letter.

Yarwood said the letter asked for the meeting to be held before May 6.

The six who signed the letter said they will seek a vote of non-condidence in the current board during the extraordinary meeting. And they said they will call on the meeting to order cancellation of the present undertaking contract with First Memorial.

The contract between the society and First Memorial was suspended for 10 days last month following allegations made about the undertaking firm on a radio hot-line show.

The five former directors who are seeking the special meeting are Charles Clapham, Garth Pither, Bert Hunter, Elve Baillie and Caryl Garden.

They all resigned from the 12-member board March 16.

Hunter said he and his fellow former directors feel the remaining board members have not acted in the best interests of the membership.

NEW LOW IN AREA VOTING

Voters throughout the Capital district appeared headed for a record—in apathy — today as they trickled to the polls to settle three questions.

Regional ratepayers are eligible to vote for or against a $22.5 million referendum to modernize and expand hospitals.

In Victoria, six candidates are seeking the city council seat left vacant by the death of Ald. Ove Witt.

And in that part of Sannich included in school district 63, voters will chose one of five to represent them on the school board.

A sample of polls at 11 a.m. showed few people cared.

"I've never seen it so slow," said Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward, who is returning officer for the trustee plebiscite.

At the five Victoria polls, 837 of about 21,000 eligible voters had made their choice for alderman and 609 of about 17,000 had voted on the hospital referendum.

At Esquimalt municipal hall, 96 out of 4,597 had voted on the referendum and at Oak Bay municipal hall, 205 of 8,770 eligible voters had cast ballots.

Price Protesters Seek 1,000 Names

A local woman who is organizing a consumer's boycott of meat next week said today she hopes to get at least 1,000 signatures on a petition supporting the boycott.

Mrs. Margaret Addis said her telephone has been ringing "non-stop" since the boycott was announced in the Times Thursday.

"I've had constant ringing . . . ," she said. "I can't get a normal meal into my son."

"I've only had one derogatory comment," she said. "That was from a farmer's wife."

Mrs. Addis, who has been organizing the boycott from her home where she is recovering from a back injury, has petitions circulating in the community asking people not to buy any meat from Monday through Friday next week.

Now she is asking people who phone her to start their own petitions in their neighborhood and mail them to her next week. By Friday she hopes to have collected them all into one petition, which she will mail to the special Commons committee on food prices in Ottawa.

Mrs. Addis said she'd be satisfied with 1,000 signatures, considering the short time in which the boycott was organized. Anyone willing to support the boycott or circulate a petition can call her at 477-1788.

The local meat boycott will coincide with a similar one in the United States and Canada.

2,200 Write in for Bill 42

A one-day advertisement in the four daily newspapers in Victoria and Vancouver brought replies from 2,200 people who support the intent of Bill 42, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club said Friday.

The response came before the controversial land control legislation was amended, presumably making it acceptable to an even larger number of B.C. residents.

After delivering the pile of coupons to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, Ken Farquharson, a director of the Sierra Club, told reporters that the 2,200 total represents one per cent of the total population of the province.

He had been told by people in the advertising business that was an excellent response to a single day's advertising, he said. Farquharson said the replies came from a good cross-section of the province, with a particularly heavy return of 650 from Vancouver Island.

Both he and Ian Hayward, treasurer of the Wildlife Federation, said they were surprised and "delighted" at the response—which also brought in enough donations to cover the cost of the advertisement.

In a covering letter to Stupich, Farquharson and Hayward said: "Please listen to those who share your concern for the preservation of our farmland and stand firm on the principle of Bill 42.

"The response to our advertisement has been from a very wide section of the community judging by the names and addresses, therefore we feel there is very widespread support for your efforts. The high proportion of donors also indicates the depth of interest of many citizens."

Be Slaves to a Garden? Never Again!

ONCE AT THE HEIGHT of a Victoria spring, my wife emerged from a flower border carrying her lady-spade in two pieces.

"What happened?" I asked her, stupid with fatigue. "Did the handle break?"

"No," she said. "It was rotted off by blood, sweat and tears."

We stood in the deepening dusk, slaves to a garden that had begun its annual mad growing spree with January's first snowdrops.

Never again, we agreed. Once we were delivered from bondage to that over-productive earth, we would choose our next home site with finicky care.

If planters were attached to the house that sat on it, we would tolerate them. Any evergreens or other perennials it might harbor could stay as long as they behaved themselves. But there would be no borders, no vegetable plot, no fruit trees demanding lime sulphur and pruning . . . nothing in the way of a garden that we couldn't neat up in a casual half hour.

A year has passed since we made that resolve. The sea-battered tract we now occupy came remarkably close to meeting the requirements we laid down.

Its perennials, I'm pleased to report, are coming along nicely, although the little Stewarti we transfered to a carefully-prepared spot by the fence line worries us a trifle. Perhaps continued doses of Epson salts and a ration of bone meal will help restore it to full vigor.

Win spends frequent half hours working on the two fron steps, and as soon as we planting areas that flank our can decide where they'll be best protected from salt-laden winds off the water, we mean to set out a couple of flowering plums.

None of this was supposed to happen. It goes against all the resolves we made in the years when a garden was too much with us. Looking back over the months since we left Canada's garden city — and how we yearn for a few cubic yards of that fruitful Victoria soil! — I find it hard to pin down the exact time when the itch to make the desert blossom sneaked up on us once more.

One day the little plastic pail that we took with us on clam-diggings vanished from its place behind a drift log. When I next saw it, the pail had acquired a lid and was half full of potato peelings, grape fruit rinds, carrot scrapings and the like.

"What's all this?" I asked.

"I hate to waste anything that would make good compost," my dear one said, adding an egg shell to her trove. "How would you like to dig a place for this stuff down past that Stewarti you moved last week?"

I dug as requested, making the pit rather larger than need be, then went in to report on my findings.

"There's a layer of stones land higher," I said, "then and sand where the beach was pushed up to make the you get down to black earth. side out so the earth is on top Well, if we turn that strip in- and the stones underneath, we'd have the makings of a flower border."

For someone who had renounced gardening, Win received this suggestion with remarkable calm. We have done a fair amount of inside-outing since them, even though the results as yet are far from obvious.

Next week, we hope, the soil will be warm enough for the Golden Delicious apple tree and the well-branched Bartlet pear sapling that we located on our last prowl through a district nursery. Also, the vegetable patch that we were never going to burden ourselves with again will soon be ready for seeding.

Naturally, we don't intend to let this renewed gardening urge get out of hand. But there are worse pursuits on a sunny weekend than sinking a spade and planning a plot.

Beets here. Carrots there. Green beans at the far end, and maybe a couple of short rows of potatoes . . .

At this point the handle of my over-worked spade broke, and just for a moment I harbored an uncomfortable feeling that history was repeating itself.

BILLY IS BACK, DIDN'T MEAN IT

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Billy Martin, saying he never really intended to resign, returned to work today as manager of Detroit Tigers after a 24-hour walkout.

"I just had to get away for a day," Martin said. "I had no intentions of quitting the ball club, even though I said I was going to quit."

Martin made an explosive exit from a Friday meeting with general manager Jim Campbell of the American League baseball team, saying: 'I''m done: Get yourself a new manager."

Campbell, who said, "Billy is Billy," admitted he never expected Martin to permanently leave the Tigers. And, Billy was knocking at Campbell's motel door at 7 a.m. today, saying he wanted his job back.

"We had a brief, very low-key meeting," Campbell said. "Billy just had a bad day. It was a lost 24 hours. I don't know what caused it, but he's anxious to get back to work."

Three hours later, Martin was in Detroit's Tigertown training camp where a sign warns: "$100 Fine for Anyone Who Is Late."

The skipper was neither fined nor reprimanded by Campbell.

Racing: 'Put Yourself In the Driver's Seat'

If auto racing is No. 1 in spectator appeal in sport, track owners may be missing a bet if they don't take a second look at the racing car's distant cousin, the motorcycle.

That was just a part of the message delivered at the Red Lion Friday noon by Les Richter, president and majority stockholder of Riverside International Raceway at Riverside, Calif.

Yes, Les is the former football star from the University of California and the Los Angeles Rams, and was the featured guest as promoter Reg Midgley unveiled the plans for Western Speedway's summer racing season.

"More people attended automobile racing last year in the U.S. than any other sport except horse racing," said Richter. "And if they didn't have pari-mutuel betting, how many people would go to the horse races?" he asked.

So, it's No. 1 just as it is here. About 100,000 fans attended Western last year, and with 31 events this year, Midgley is hopeful he will receive the same response.

Richter freely admits that he didn't know much about the auto-racing business when he first started after retiring from the Rams. But he had done some work with some of the racing directors and he thought he would like to try something new.

800 Riders in One Race

"I took the job at Riverside on three conditions," he explained. 1. There would be a hands-off policy. I would make the decisions. 2. I would have three years to make it or break it. 3. The directors would go along with my recommendations if I thought they would be economical.

"That was in 1962, and I'm still there."

"Racing is not an uncomplicated sport," he said, while explaining he had to learn the ropes the hard way — by studying, reading, and plain hard work.

"Now we have $3½ million in improvements alone," he said, "and just last week we started something new.

"We had a motorcycle scramble right in the compound. You know the type — 40 miles out, 40 miles back — Well, we tried it at Riverside.

"There were 1,267 riders who took part in the two-day show, 800 of them in one race. Ten riders took off every five seconds, and among the entries were 11 doctors (physicians and dentists) and 18 practicing attorneys. The race was 100 miles, the course seven and two-tenths miles and the average speed about 30 m.p.h."

Richter sees this initial effort as the forerunner of a fine future with spectator appeal. "Nobody ever saw the races before," he said.

"Racing is big business, bigger than people realize, he explained and "talk about your big salaries in sport — Billy Vukovich hasn't won what we consider a major race in years, and yet he pays income tax on $100,000. The Foyts, Donohues and the Unsers are making $3-4-500,000 a year, just to drive an automobile."

Affluent and Sophisticated

Why the appeal?

"Racing is a universal sport, the only one. Soccer might think it is, but it isn't. In Italy, the government inspects the racing cars; in France, the government has control of racing.

"People are far more knowledgeable and sophisticated than they were in my youth. Our sport appeals to the 18-35 age group. They are affluent and better educated and as half the population of the U.S. is under 25, we feel we have captured the market."

For the fan it's a chance to be "a Walter Mitty type — to put himself in the driver's seat."

Richter also feels that auto racing is just coming into its own. "We haven't even had live TV exposure," he explained.

What he is working on now is a Baja-type event. You've seen the TV ad — the cars running down the Baja peninsula, through the desert, snake pits, and rock-filled gullies. The tires stand the test, even if the cars don't.

What Les would like to do — "we've had people studying the course" — is to put on a race like this at Riverside. It would take some planning, but I think we could do it, within the compound; and I think the public might go for it."

About his football career, seven years an all-pro out of eight with L.A., Les said:

"The last year I played the Rams' record was 1-1-12. It is a pleasure and a honor to be remembered as a football player."

Sobchuk Named Most Valuable

SASKATOON (CP) — Denis Sobchuk of Regina Pats has been chosen the most valuable player to his team in the Western Canada Hockey league this season.

The 18-year-old centre finished second in the league scoring race behind Tom Lysiak of Medicine Hat Tigers, who edged Sobchuk in balloting for the centre position on the league all-star team. Sobchuk scord 67 goals and 80 assists for 147 points, seven behind the leader.

All five individual awards were won by players in the league's Eastern Division in voting by the 12 coaches. First-place Saskatoon Blades and fourth-place Brandon Wheat Kings won two awards each.

The other winners:

George Pesut, Saskatoon, outstanding defenceman;

Ed Humphreys, Saskatoon, outstanding goalkeeper;

Rick Blight, Brandon, rookie of the year;

Ron Chipperfield, Brandon, player combining most gentlemanly play with ability.

Pesut also was chosen to the league all-star team announced Thursday.

Humphries posted a 2.57-goals-against average over the 68-game regular season topping veteran John Davidson of Calgary Centennials although the latter was chosen as netminder for the all-star team.

Chipperfield finished seventh in the scoring race with 72 goals and 41 assists for 113 points.

Red Rum Was Strong

AINTREE, England (AP)—Red Rum, ridden by Brian Fletcher, staged a strong finish and won the 132nd running of the Grand National steeplechase today over Aintree's four and one-half mile course and 30 formidable fences.

Australian-bred Crisp, packing top weight of 164 pounds, was second with American-owned L'Escargot in third place, 25 lengths behind the leading pair.

Crisp appeared to have the gruelling race at his mercy as he jumped the last mighty obstacle well clear after leading for most of the long journey.

But Red Rum, owned by British millionaire Noel Le Mare, slowly wore down the leader on the run to the post and surged into the lead in the last few yards to win by three-quarters of a length.

Crisp, took over the lead coming to the seventh jump and went at least 20 lengths clear as survivors among the 38 starters toiled in his wake.

But no horse has carried that much weight to victory since Reynoldstown in 1936, and on the long run home the Australian horse began to tire badly.

Red Rum and Crisp were the 9-to-1 joint favorites, with L'Escargot an 11-to-1 chance.

The race was worth a total of $98,600, with the winning owner receiving $63,715.

Czechs Open Strongly In World Puck Event

Czechoslovakia, exploding for clusters of goals, opened defence of its world hockey championship today by crushing outmanned Poland 14-1 in Moscow.

The opening game of the six-team tournament that continues until April 15 was an easy one for Czechoslovakia. Nine of the Czech players scored, with Jaroslav Holik hitting three times, and Jan Klapac, Vaslav Nedomansky and Josef Palecek each scoring twice.

Despite their impressive start in a tournament which again will be without a Canadian team, the Czechs are still expected to take a back seat to Russia. Experts tag Russia as the favorites and give Sweden an outside chance of beating out the Czechs for second place.

In Rochester, N.Y., the Federal Bureau of Investigation said five persons, including three jockeys, have been arrested on charges ranging from sports bribery to conspiracy and perjury.

The charges stemmed from a federal probe of the Finger Lakes race track in Canandaigua, N.Y.

The FBI said those arrested Friday were Lee Shorter, 28, of Geneva, a restaurant owner; Harvey L. Rosenbloom, 32, of Revere, Mass., a horse trainer; Norman R. Laliberte, 50, of Miami, Fla., a jockey; and Robert and Michelle Harris, a husband-and-wife jockey team from Canandaigua.

Assistant U.S. Attorney-General Gerald J. Houlihan said an indictment handed up by a federal grand jury cited the ninth race on the racing program of last Oct. 24 as fixed.

Chicago Bulls coach Dick Motta and his players blasted the officiating in the wake of their 107-104 overtime loss to Los Angeles Lakers in the opener of the National Basketball Association playoffs at Los Angeles.

Three Bulls were out of the game on six personal fouls each at the end of the overtime period and Motta said:

"I'm getting sick and tired of seeing the Chicago Bulls pushed around this league like a bowling ball."

Chicago had deadlocked the Lakers 94-94 at the end of the regulation 48 minutes, forcing the game into overtime.

In the other openers of the best-of-seven series, New York Knicks beat Baltimore Bullets 95-83 and Milwaukee Bucks whipped Golden State Warriors 110-90.

Spoiling Seals Bounce Kings

By the Canadian Press

California Golden Seals reserved their best for the last.

The Seals, distressed by player problems through most of a year that saw their ranks depleted by the raiding World Hockey Association, played the role of spoilers Friday night.

They rang up their fourth straight win, 3-1 over Los Angeles, to eliminate the Kings from the National Hockey League playoffs.

The Kings, tied with Pittsburgh Penguins for fifth in the West Division, trail fourth-place St. Louis Blues by three points with only one game to play.

In another game, Bobby Schmautz scored his 37th goal of the year to lift Vancouver Canucks to a 3-3 tie with Minnesota. The one point picked up by the North Stars, as they finished regular-season play, padded their second-place standing in the West to two points over Philadelphia Flyers.

FLYERS PLAY 2

Philadelphia, however, has two games to play on the final weekend—tonight at home with New York Islanders and at Pittsburgh Sunday.

Butch Goring's power-play goal midway through the first period gave the Kings a 1-0 lead before more than 10,000 Oakland fans. But the Seals replied with Stan Gilbertson, filling in for Ivan Boldirev who had been ejected from the game, getting the equalizer and Reg Leach the winner late in the second period.

Pete Laframboise added insurance with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

John Wright and Richard Lemieux rounded out the Vancouver scoring as the Canucks wound up their season's home stand. Danny Grant, Murray Oliver and Dean Prentice replied for the Stars.

RANGERS EXPERIMENT

The Rangers, third in the East and preparing to open their playoff quarter-final at Boston Wednesday, plan several line experiments in their weekend games.

Emile Francis, New York coach and general manager, said Friday it was a good time to try some of his players at new positions.

Gene Carr, normally a left winger, will be tried at centre in tonight's game at Montreal between Glen Sather and Bruce MacGregor.

During Friday's workout, Francis had Pete Stemkowski pivoting Ted Irvine and Mike Murphy. The Rangers departed without two defencemen—Rod Seiling, out for the season with a broken collar bone, and Brad Park, whose right knee is ailing again.

"It's a continuation of the knee problem," Francis said of Parks' injury. "We're going to keep him off skates at least until Monday."

GOLF CLUB PRESIDENT, BOB PEERS, 73, DIES

Funeral services will be held Monday for W. J. R. (Bob) Peers, one of the district's most active senior golfers and president of Victoria Golf Club who died suddenly Thursday.

Peers was stricken while playing golf. He was 73.

A former club captain at the Oak Bay course, he was in his second term as president. Peers was a familiar figure in club and senior's competitions and last year won the Canadian over-70 championship in the national seniors' tournament played at Uplands.

His death forced postponment of today's captain's vs. president's match, one of the more popular events on the club's fixture list.

A retired bank official and veteran of two world wars, he is survived by his wife Kitty, daughters Anne and Barbara and a son, Col. R. C. K. Peers, commandant of Royal Roads Military College.

Service will be held in St. Mary's Church at 3 p.m. Monday.

Playoff-Missing Saints Protest Tie-Breaker Rule

By The Canadian Press

Alberta Oilers toppled Minnesota 5-3 Friday night to eliminate the Fighting Saints from the World Hockey Association playoffs.

Or did they?

The Fighting Saints lodged a protest with WHA president Gary Davidson after the game, claiming they never did accept the playoff format announced by the league March 21.

The rule change, announced by the WHA executive committee, eliminated the possibility of a playoff between two teams tied for fourth spot for post-season play.

Instead, a formula of the season record between the tied teams and their records within the division was instituted.

NEVER ACCEPTED

"We never did accept the thing," said Glen Sonmor, Saints' general manager after Minnesota and Alberta finished with identical 38-37-3 records in season's play and 4-4 marks against each other during the year.

However, in meetings with other teams in the division Alberta enjoyed a 21-17 edge.

"We just told the players about the rule change now. We didn't want them to think about anything but winning," Sonmor said.

In other games Friday, Cleveland Crusaders defeated Winnipeg Jets 4-2 and New England Whalers downed New York Raiders 5-4 in overtime.

Alberta and Minnesota, along with Los Angeles Sharks and the Raiders, have completed their 1972-73 schedules. The other eight teams wind up their portion of the regular season on the weekend.

Lloyd Leirdahl, Saints president, said Davidson would take a poll of WHA trustees to determine if Alberta and the Saints would meet in a tie-breaker Sunday in St. Paul.

Bill Hunter, general manager and coach of the Oilers, said:

"They can protest all they want. We have won it on the ice and the trustees will vote decidedly in hockey's favor. There won't be another game. We won it in every category. I don't even want to talk about it, it's so ridiculous."

Gorman Gains Semis

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seattle's Tom Gorman fought his way into the semi-final round of the $50,000 international tennis tournament Friday night by Downing Australia's Fred Strolle 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

Gorman broke the Aussie's serve twice in the final set, but Strolle forced the 10th game with a come-from-behind victory to make it 5-4. Gorman then gave up only one point for the win.

In other singles action, Australia's Ken Rosewall polished off Ray Moore of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia beat Erik van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., 6-1, 2-6, 6-0, and Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., dumped France's Pierre Barthes 6-3, 6-4.

In today's play, Gorman meets Tanner and Rosewall taeks on Kodes, with Gorman and Rosewall the favorites.

In doubles play, Boro Janovanoc of Yugoslavia and Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union beat Frantisek Pala and Vladimir Zekníki, both of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Janovanoc and Metreveli will play Gorman and van Dillen in the semi-finals.

Midget Cars Returning to Western

By STEWART LANG
Times Staff

"We have something to offer every year ... We know we have to work harder every year to stay number one."

Thus did Reg Midgley, track manager of Western Speedway, usher in the 1973 automobile racing season during a luncheon Thursday at the Red Lion Inn.

The four-tenths-of-a-mile long oval track celebrates its 20th anniversary this year with nine international events as well as 22 meets involving Vancouver Island Track Racing Association drivers in claimer, stock and super-stock classes.

The season is scheduled to open April 8 with a combined super-stock and stock car program. All of the four race dates in April will be at 1 p.m. Sunday before switching over to the regular 7 p.m. racing on Saturday nights.

Bob Morgan, president of the Washington Racing Association, was on hand to announce a greater involvement with Western Speedway this season.

Included on th list of WRA modified class dates this season are the 12th annual Daffodil Cup race on May 19, the Strawberry Cup on July 28 and the Billy Foster 100 on Sept. 1. This latter race also forms half of the WRA championship, being held in Canada for the first time. The second half will take place at Nanaimo's Grandview Bowl the following day.

Sanction for the International Drivers Challenge series for modifieds, which appears at Western Aug. 4, has also been obtained from WRA.

Other international-calibre competitions are the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Western Grand National circuit appearance on July 6, which should include some of the top-name drivers in the United States.

Midget racing returns to Western this year after a two-year absence with an appearance by Washington Midget Racing Association drivers on July 7 and, for the first time in Western Canada, there will be an appearance by the United states Automobile Club's midget series on Aug. 3.

The remaining International meets are the International Drivers Challenge super-stock event on July 24 and a special open super-stock race, the "Canada 200" on July 24.

Included in the 22 VITRA races, most of which will be on Saturday nights, are the super-stock championship on Sept. 3 and the stock and claimer championships on Sept. 8.

Midgley said the season will end with the Sept. 8 race because "we're opening earlier."

He pointed out that over 100 cars are registered with VITRA this year and a total of "over 500 people are involved" at the $250,000 complex in Langford.

"All in all, it looks great," added Midgley.

67 'Kinda Routine' For Aging Slammer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) —Billy Casper said he was walking on air. Lee Elder said it was a rough day. Sam Snead said it was "just kinda routine."

While the first two comments were highly believeable —Casper moved into the second round lead of the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament with a 64 and the disappointed Elder faded into the field with a 72—Snead's appraisal left a little to the imagination.

The incredible old hill-billy, still sporting that trademark Panama straw hat and the sweet, sweet swing, didn't miss a green in Friday's second round. He didn't make a bogey, didn't miss a fairway and was on in two on all three par five holes on the 7,021-yard Sedgefield Country Club course.

Heavy overnight rains delayed the start of today's third round. The precipitation followed a week-long series of showers and left half the greens unplayable.

Officials said the third round could be fully executed if players could begin teeing off by 1 p.m. (EST), but a later start would cause a shuffling of pairings with golfers beginning on both the first and 10th holes.

If today's round is washed out, officials indicated they would schedule a 36-hole windup for Sunday. The event must be completed no later than Tuesday, two days before the Masters begins at August, Ga.

Toronto's George Knudson was in contending position just three strokes back of the leader after shooting a 66 for a 36-hole score of 134. Ben Kern, also of Toronto, had a 70 for 142.

"I was pretty lucky," drawled Snead, who won the first of his eight Greensboro Open titles back in 1938. "It wasn't very exciting. Just kinda routine."

But his four-under-par 67, coming on the heels of an opening 66, left him nine under par at the midpoint of this 72-hole tournament and just two back of the leading Casper.

Casper needed only 26 putts on the wet and soggy greens as he went seven under par for the day and established the lead at 131.

Lou Graham, who has finished just one stroke out of first place in the last two tournaments, matched Casper's 64 and was again one away at 132.

Then came Snead and Doug Sanders, tied at 133.

Rod Funseth, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Ken Still were tied with Knudson at 134. That put eight players linked within three strokes of each other going into the last two rounds in this chase for a $42,000 first prize.

Clegg's Roving Backfires

By The Canadian Press

Sam Clegg shouldn't have touched that puck.

With his Medicine Hat Tigers and Calgary Centennials locked in a 5-5 tie in a Western Canada Hockey League playoff game Friday night, Clegg made the mistake of touching a loose puck in his end of the ice.

Calgary defenceman Brian Molvik had charged out of the penalty box and was chasing the puck, so Clegg attempted to clear it. But Molvik controlled it and scored from a bad angle into an open net.

But if Clegg hadn't touched the puck, the play would have been whistled dead because Molvik was offside.

The Cents went on to score another goal and dump the Tigers 7-5 to score their first victory in three quarter-final playoff games.

In other playoff action, Saskatoon Blades blanked Brandon Wheat Kings 8-0 to take a 3-2 lead in their series and Flin Flon Bombers dumped Regina Pats 5-1 to take a 3-0 edge in their round.

All series are best-of-seven affairs.

Centre Mike Rogers scored four goals to lead the Calgary victory, with Danny Gare, Mike Clarke and Molvik rounding out the attack. Ed Johnstone had a pair for the Tigers, and Boyd Anderson, Tom Lysiak and Jim McCrimmon added goals.

Saskatoon goalie Ed Humphreys recorded his second shutout of the series as he stopped 25 saves behind strong support. The Blades, who won the first two games in Saskatoon and dropped the next two on the road, were led by the two-goal performance of Danny Arndt before a packed house of 4,143 fans at the Saskatoon Arena.

Garth Dietrick, returning to the lineup after missing the third and fourth games, had one, as did Bill Laing, Dennis Abgrall, Fred Williams, Dave Lewis and Russ Walker.

The Bombers and Pats were forced to play in Moose Jaw because the Pats' home arena in Regina is occupied by a horse show. Wayne Bianchin scored twice to lead the Bombers, with Blaine Stoughton, Dennis Polonich and Duane Bray also scoring.

Mike Wanchuk had the only Regina tally.

The game was marred by a brawl at 13:04 of the third period when a fight broke out involving just about all the players on the ice except the goalies.

Saskatoon can gain a berth in the semi-finals with a win Medicine Hat is at Calgary and Regina and Flin Flon battle at Moose Jaw, while Edmonton Oil Kings play at New Westminster against the Bruins. Edmonton leads that series 2-1.

Dave Scott Leads Butlers to Crown

Dave Scott was the big gunner at Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday night as Butler Brothers added the playoff crown to their regular-season title in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Scott fired the opening goal and notched what proved to be the winning tally early in the second period as Butlers whipped Chemainus Blues 4-1 to win the best-of-five final by a 3-2 count.

After Scott had sent Butlers into a 2-0 lead, Lou Shreenan trimmed the deficit for Chemainus, but Terry Foreman and Ted Sarkissian connected for power-play goals before the second period ended.

With Butlers holding a solid edge in play, Spence Simmons turned in a sparkling effort in the Chemainus nets, blocking 38 shots for the Blues, who finished second in league play and were defending the Colony Cup as playoff champions.

Brian O'Neill was a steady performer in goal for Butlers, but had fewer close-in shots to handle as he came up with 25 saves.

COLLEGIATE CHOICE

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Brian Heaney, 26, of St. Mary's University in Halifax, has been named coach-of-the-year by fellow coaches in Canadian intercollegiate basketball circles.

ELECTED president of Hamilton Tiger-Cats this week in shuffle of Canadian Football League club's directorate was Ralph Sazio, who recently signed new five-year contract as general manager.

Rollicks Upset In Mixed Doubles

CALGARY (CP)—Semi-final play in the Canadian closed badminton championships today was to be a battle between the four top seeds in the men's and women's singles and men's doubles.

Minor upsets in the quarter-finals Friday eliminated the top-seeded women's and mixed doubles teams from competition.

Alison Ridgway and Sandra Stevenson of Vancouver lost their quarter-final match to fifth-seeded Barbara O'Brien of Ottawa and Marj Shedd of Toronto 15-10, 18-15.

Sixth-seeded Ralphi Kanchanaraphi of Calgary and Barb Welch of Toronto were the giant-killers in the mixed doubles as they bounced top-seeded Bruce and Judi Rollick of Vancouver, 17-16., 15-13.

Canadian open champion Jamie Paulson of Toronto, second seed in men's singles, met stiff opposition from Mike Epstein of Vancouver in the quarters before finally downing the former Canadian junior champion 13-15, 15-9, 15-8.

Top-seeded Rollick knocked club-mate Jan Novotny out of the running with a 15-8, 15-9 victory while Wayne MacDonnell, third seed from Vancouver handily dropped Don Smith of Calgary 15-5, 15-1.

Fourth-seeded McKee lost his first game against Vic Conley of Vancouver 7-15 but bounced back for easy 15-4, 15-3 wins to take the match.

In women's singles, top-seeded Nancy McKinley of Toronto eliminated Mrs. Rollick with an 11-4, 11-5 victory. Second-seeded Jane Youngberg of Vancouver advanced to the semis by narrowly defeating Barbara O'Brien of Ottawa 12-9, 12-10.

The third seed, Mrs. Ridgway, trimmed Sally Dakin of Toronto 11-6, 11-1.

Jennifer Dakin, Sally's sister, also was ousted from competition, losing 11-2, 11-1 to Miss Stevenson, fourth seed in the event.

Miss Stevenson had reached the quarter-final round by defeating Liz Anne Ogden of Victoria 11-0, 11-7.

A Flippin' Good Habit

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Don't tell Peggy Casselman of Winnipeg that a coin flip at the start of a curling game isn't improtant.

"It means an awful lot and without it you sometimes get in trouble right away," said Mrs. Casselman, third on the Manitoba rink, which won the Canadian mixed championship Firday.

Winnipeg a flip gives a rink last rock advantage on the first end, worth one point to skip Barry Fry in a 10-2 triumph over Doug Cameron of Charlottetown in the 11th and final round.

However, the Manitoba foursome, which also included second Steve Decter and lead Susan Lynch, added two in the second and four in the third for a commanding 7-0 lead.

P.E.I. conceded late on the seventh end, giving Manitoba its third title in the mixed tournament since it started in 1964 and the Seagram Trophy. Fry, 33, who along with Mrs. Casselman finished third in the 1970 tournament, wound up with nine wins and one defeat.

The Winnipeg rink won nine straight in the Manitoba provincial playoff "and I won all the tosses," said Mrs. Casselman.

In the 11-rink round-robin tournament, she won eight of 10. She lost the first one of the opening round to Alberta enabling the Ron Anton rink of Edmonton to score two points on the first end on the way to an 8-5 triumph.

In the second round, Manitoba also lost the toss but stole one point on Newfoundland and eventually won 8-4 to start a nine-game winning streak.

Pete Fuller Still Seeks Derby Cup

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Lawyers for Peter Fuller argued Friday the state racing commission had no authority under its 1968 rules to deprive his horse, Dancer's Image, of the winner's cup for the 1968 Kentucky Derby.

Fuller's principal lawyer, Arthur Grafton, maintained that the commission, under its rules then in effect, could do no more than deny Dancer's Image the first-place purse. That already has been done under a racing commission ruling that was upheld by the state Court of Appeals last-year.

The $122,600 first-place purse then went to Calumet Farm's Forward Pass, which crossed the finish line second.

Duncan Boys Bomb Rivals

Duncan boys had the most fun Friday night as the provincial bantam boys' basketball tournament opened at Mount View High School.

Duncan romped to an 81-9 triumph over Nanaimo while Elizabeth Fisher defeated Cordova Bay 47-27 in the other opening-round game of the tourney.

Duncan was testing its shooting power this afternoon against Vancouver, which received a first-round bye. The winner was slated to clash with Elizabeth Fisher at 5:30.

Second Martlet Win for Linda

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Linda Flavelle, a fourth-year education student with a flair for organization, won the Martlet Award for the second successive year for outstanding contribution to campus sport at the University of Victoria.

Miss Flavelle was one of three major award winners announced Friday night at Craigdarroch College on the UVic campus.

Cross-country runner Jim Thorne, a 19-year-old freshman in arts and science who placed 17th in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships in Ottawa, won the Bob Wallace Shield as UVic's rookie of the year. He was sixth in the Canada West cross-country and second in the B.C. Junior.

Ailleen Costello, who managed the UVic women's volleyball team this year, was named manager of the year.

Only Thorne was on hand to receive his award.

Miss Flavelle was in Kamloops at a conference of student presidents. In addition to serving as intramural athletic representative, she was student president of the school's alma mater society this year.

Miss Costello was in Ottawa, where she accompanied the UVic volleyball team to the Canadian championships, and is not due back until Sunday.

Miss Flavelle's major contribution was in the intramural program.

"Last year and this year she really did a tremendous job getting the intramural program on its feet," said Mike Elcock, UVic's director of athletics. "She's done a tremendous amount of work and as a result we now have a solid program."

LINDA FLAVELLE
. . . takes top award

About 400 students take part in intramural sports, Elcock estimated.

In addition to the major awards, letters were presented for outstanding performances in various intercollegiate sports and four others were singled out for their contributions to intramural athletics. They were Lois Flavelle, Jodi Sinclair, Ray Tenisci and Tony Beeftink.

Guest speaker was Alan Rees, playing-coach of Victoria Crimson Tide and a former national rugby coach.

Runners Face Champs

Reynolds Roadrunners have earned a playoff berth in the Victoria High School Rugby League and now they could be heading for big trouble.

Roadrunners downed Mount View Hornets 12-4 Friday in a special contest to decide the fourth playoff spot. Those two clubs finished league play in a tie with Mount Douglas, all with 2-8 records, and Mount Doug was eliminated by cointossing.

Runners now have the difficult task of tackling league-champion Claremont at Claremont in one of Monday's sudden-death semi-finals. Oak Bay visits Vic High for the other semi-final.

Winners advance to the Howard Russel Cup final next Friday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Scoring for Reynolds Friday were Eric Hippolt (try), Bill Beisscher (penalty goal) and Dough Klingsphon (drop goal).

Colwood Opening

Mary Butler, Eileen Eldridge and Lillian Gornall were winners of a nine-hole, best-ball competition at the annual "spring opening" for women at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Runners-up were Avis Nichol, Dolly Williamson, Edith Blanchard and Max Gleave.

Gnup Quits

VANCOUVER — Frank Gnup has resigned as head football coach at the University of British Columbia, saying he wants to devote more time and energy to teaching.

Coach of the Thunderbirds for 18 years, Gnup has always insisted football is a game and should be treated as such.

Saanich Club Wins Opener

TRAIL — Saanich was favored to chalk up a second straight victory as the six-team provincial senior "B" women's basketball tournament continued here today.

Sparked by the 18-point effort of Mary Coutts, the Saanich squad launched a bid for the B.C. title Friday night with a 57-49 triumph over Salmon Arm.

The Vancouver Island champions were to face Prince George this afternoon in the second round of the double-loss-elimination event.

STARTING APRIL 1ST ON CTV,

Canada:
5 Portraits

A series of 5 Sunday night television specials to help Canadians understand Canadians and the land in which we live.

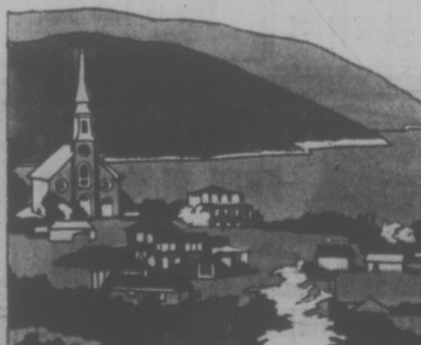
Canada: 5 Portraits is a CTV network production, narrated by Gordon Pinsent that takes an in-depth look at how we all relate to each other as Canadians. It examines the 5 geographical regions of Canada, the people of each region and how each region affects its people.

The Mountains . . . April 1

Nowhere in this land is the presence of Nature's splendor more pronounced, where thousands of acres of mighty pines sit at the foot of Canada's highest ranges. And whose people possess a restless pioneer spirit even amidst the thunder of expanding industry in Canada's Mountains.

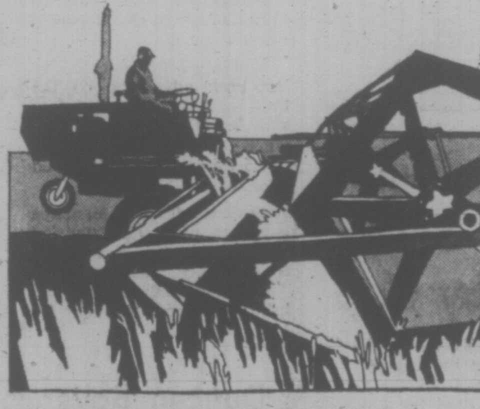
The Atlantic . . . April 15

The craggy, rock-soiled land and the seagoing tradition of this region breeds a special kind of Canadian. Hearty and traditional, where a folk-style life style lives in strained harmony with developing industry. A timeless region, whose people are establishing a strong future for our Maritimes.



The St. Lawrence . . . April 29

It is in this exciting region where the French and English cultures meet and traditional family farms live in the expanding shadow of large cities. Cut by the mighty St. Lawrence River this colorful region serves as the eastern gateway to the rest of Canada.



The Prairies . . . May 13

The heartland of Canada, where tilled fields disappear in a seemingly endless horizon. A wide-open, peaceful part of this land, whose people cherish freedom and live in unison with the land from which they take their livelihood.

The Shield . . . May 27

Jutting hard rock and harsh weather conditions leave the Shield as a mysterious part of Canada. Populated in the north by people proud of their independent spirit and bordered on the south by some of the major commercial centres of Canada that are developing the rich natural resources of the Shield. Resources that ensure a strong future for Canada.

Watch Canada: 5 Portraits from 7:30 to 8:30 P.M. Please consult your listings for the local CTV Station.

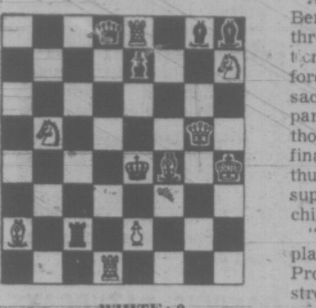
PROBLEM
By C. Gavrilov, Romania
BLACK: 6



WHITE: 9

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

Kerry K. Tatlow, Chicago, writes Chess Master: "I noted with interest an article by you concerning the 1972 ACM Computer Chess Turnament. I was disappointed that you appear to share the popular disdain for computer chess among professional players.

Admittedly, the playing algorithms which have been profusely developed by programmers to date have not shown success proportional to the time devoted to them. But two of my colleagues and I have been working on chess projects of more limited goals in order to provide a foundation for more advanced projects. In the process, we have been able to develop programs which I think are of immediate interest to human players.

"Our machine, Wisdom V, can solve any two-move problem easily. It is more than a match for any human problem solver. I am now in the process of extending the algorithm to three-movers, but will not speculate on its efficiency as yet. Computers can mean more to chess than most people realize.

"P.S. I believe that the World Champion of 2000 will be a machine."

And from Robert Uommi, Berkeley: "Here is a game three of us played in consultation, last week, at the Stanford Intelligence Project. The sacrifice on move 11 is apparently unsound, but although White had us busted, it finally blundered in the end, thus proving once again the superiority of man over machine.

"The program which we played, the Greenblatt Chess Program, is said to be the strongest in the world. It is presently about 1580 in strength (High C rating). John McCarthy, head programmer at the AI project, is confident that by 1978 there will be a program of International Master strength; in fact, so confident is he that he has bet International Chess Master David Levy of Scotland that in five years there will be a program that will beat Levy in a match. The bet is for $4,000. Prof. McCarthy must be on to something, eh?"

DANGER FLYING KITES

B.C. Hydro today urged parents to warn their children against flying kites near electric power lines, poles and towers.

"Never try to remove a kite from a powerline, pole or transmission tower," said J. V. Milburn, manager of B.C. Hydro's safety engineering department.

"Only experienced linemen have the knowledge and equipment to work near high voltage lines in safety.

"Even a damp cord can act as an electrical conductor if the cord brushes a powerline. So play safe. Better to lose a kite than risk very serious injury."

Kites should be flown with perfectly dry string, never wire or metallic string, and no metal should be use in making a kite. Kites should not be flown near or on a road or highway, and should never be flown in wet or stormy weather.

Workshop In Mime

An introductory workshop in the art of mime is being conducted next week by the Northwest Coast Institute of the Arts.

Instruction will be given in basic pantomime concepts and techniques by Paul Hooson, recently returned from two years study under various French and Middle European masters.

The workshop is limited to eight persons.

Starting April 5, for eight weeks, Dorothy Field will conduct a weaving course in the techniques of using a four-harness loom. Looms and first warp will be supplied. There is a limit of eight students and the sessions will take place on Thursday evenings.

For registration and information those interested in either course should phone 382-4843.

Placer Mine Easing Indicated

Provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick told the legislature Friday he likely will end the moratorium on placer mining licences this summer.

He said the department had stopped issuing placer licences in anticipation of legislation being introduced on the matter before the end of this session.

If the legislation is not introduced, he would permit some existing placer operations to resume work during the summer.

Placer mining uses water pressure to strip surface oil away from mineral deposits.

He said the moratorium has brought widespread complaints from the mining industry.

Nimsick said he views placer mining as an activity which can be carried out on a small scale for recreation as much as profit.

Large hydraulic placer mines, however, have left a mess in the province.

He said legislation would be forthcoming on the matter but could not indicate when.

He said his department is studying the possibility of recovering metals from existing slag heaps and tailings pools.

Nimsick said his department is looking for ways to develop more efficient means of mining.

There was no way the province could conserve minerals except by not mining. What the province had to do was to find ways of managing its resources efficiently.

Jet Crashes

BOARDMAN, Ore. (AP) — A United States Navy A-6A jet on a routine training mission from an air-station near Seattle, Wash., crashed near here Wednesday, killing its two occupants.

Bunn Favors Pool at New School

Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn said today one of the top priorities in the construction of the Saanich community secondary school should be a community swimming pool.

"I think it would be a pity if the swimming pool isn't built as an integral part of the facility."

He was commenting on a debate this week between the school board and municipality representatives over what facilities the complex should contain at the outset.

Representatives met to discuss a model and sketch plans of a proposed community school at Burnside and Acorn.

Saanich aldermen, however, argued that an auditorium was more important than a pool.

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning said the school board was entitled to its opinion, but "we have other considerations including an ice rink. We simply can't do everything."

"What we can't do now, we'll just have to do later."

She said she and Ald. Fred Severson favored an auditorium with a seating capacity for 300 or 500 people.

"If an auditorium is to be added to the plans it must be done at this time. A swimming pool can be added at a later time," she said.

The incorporation of a big auditorium would also free the gymnasium for greater use, she said, adding that the municipality had already included a proposal to build a swimming pool adjacent to the George Pearkes arena.

"The whole thing resolves itself into what financially we are able to do. One of the most important things in staging projects is making sure that a good nucleus is built that can be added on to in the future."

Bunn, however, told the Times he favors putting the pool in immediately.

In the cost-sharing agreement — yet to be approved by Saanich council — Saanich would have to pay for the pool, as well as the auditorium as part of the community side of the school.

He said the pool was one of the proposals desired most by the community.

Bunn said it would be cheaper to build the pool as an integral part of the school than waiting and adding it on later.

"I'm not saying it would be a tremendous saving but there would be some saving. Also, anything built this year is cheaper than the next."

He said a provincial grant equalling one-third of the cost is ready to be used. The cost of building the pool and the gym will be $750,000 but the provincial grant will make the cost to Saanich only $500,000.

The new community school, named the Saanich community high school, has been in the planning stages for some 21 months, and is scheduled to open in September 1974.

Mrs. Gunning said architects Lester and Peterson were asked at the meeting to come up with specific cost estimates on various design proposals to be ready for discussion at Saanich's council meeting April 16.

Driver Blamed In Fatal Crash

NANIAMO (CP) — A coroner's jury Thursday night blamed Murray R. Woodward of Qualicum for a traffic accident March 9 two miles outside Nanaimo in which Glen Patrick Callow, 33, Ucluluet, was killed.

The jury said Woodward was driving his car on the wrong side of the road at the time. Woodward testified under the protection of the Canada and British Columbia Evidence Acts.

King Taufa'ahau with royal family

Biggest King Thinks Big

NUKUTALOFA, Tonga (AP) — The world's biggest king, ruler of its smallest kingdom, wants to unite China, Japan, Southeast Asia — and Tonga — in a super-alliance.

"If we don't see this as the ultimate aim, disunity will continue in the state, where something really dangerous might happen," the Polynesian monarch says.

Asia and parts of the Pacific are linked ethnically and historically, he notes.

World peace is but one concern of King Taufa'ahau Tupou IV, latest of a royal line dating back a thousand years, master of the abacus, retired surfer, keen astronomer, voracious reader and compulsive watcher of his own weight.

Once 400 pounds, he trots up stairs in a weighted vest to try to keep his weight down.

The king can learnedly argue a point of English law and recite the succession of husbands of most Hollywood film stars.

Taufa'ahau Tupou reads Greek, Latin, French and some Japanese besides, of course, English. A retired Australian law professor remembered him as one of the sharpest students he ever had.

NO IDLE PLAN

The king's plan for an Asian and Pacific grouping, for example, is hardly an afternoon's musing.

"I have been hoping that some opportunity will arise to allow me to go around Southeast Asia and talk about this with leaders," he said. "If I am invited, I will certainly come."

He said it could be along the framework of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), but more practical, with co-operation in marketing and industrial projects.

"We would have to discuss what must be done," he said. "Maybe, like the NATO countries, we could standardize our armaments so that we can use each other's guns and tanks.

"Its time the people of these countries get together and make these things happen . . . small differences can be put aside in favor of something better."

The Australian prime minister has made a similar proposal, but King Taufa'ahau said he believed that approach was too flamboyant. Australia and New Zealand should be included later, under the King's plan, "but it should first start with those that feel a kinship . . . we must begin step by step and build."

SEES NO OBSTACLE

Tiny Tonga's location, deep in the South Pacific along the international dateline, is no obstacle to its being part of the group, he said. If other Pacific nations wanted to join it would be up to them.

Tonga is made up of three groups, 150 islands altogether, totalling 270 square miles of land. It has 95,000 generally large and friendly inhabitants.

In a 90-minute audience with an Associated Press reporter, Taufa'ahau discussed team handball, anthropology and Indonesian cooking.

"He is quite a man," said one foreigner with regular access to the king.

"I think the difference is that he has time to sit down and think. Not many statesmen do."

Salmon Curbs Proposed

SEATTLE (AP) — "An excessive harvest of Puget Sound Chinook salmon by the Canadian troll fleet" has led to proposals for severe restrictions on king salmon fishing in Puget Sound, according to state fisheries director Thor Tollefson.

A meeting has been set for Thursday at the Seattle centre to discuss alternatives, Tollefson said.

He said one proposal would ban sport fishing for king salmon from July 16 to Sept. 7 and would close the fishery to gillnetters and purseseiners until September. Another proposal would require that sports anglers release all king salmon 28 inches or longer. Still another would allow sports fishing only for Coho salmon.

Savage French Documentary Film Shows De Gaulle to Be a Liar

PARIS (AP) — The French documentary that won an Oscar last year by ridiculing the myth of the country's valiant resistance to the Nazis has an angrier sequel. It paints Charles de Gaulle as a liar and the French people as weak and misguided.

Called Francais, Si Vous Saviez (Frenchmen, If You Knew). The film runs for nine hours in three segments. Despite its intense bitterness and a series of critical reviews, big crowds keep coming.

The film was made by Andre Harris and Alain de Sedouy. Harris, with Marcel Ophuls, won an Academy Award in 1972 for The Sorrow and the Pity, his 4½-hour documentary on the Nazi occupation of France. The French government television network financed it but refused to show it.

FLYERS ABUSED

Francais, Si Vous Saviez uses the method Harris developed for the first film. The cutting and juxtaposition are again merciless, contrasting films of the events with the halting of recalcitrant memories of the people involved. The scope of the new film is wider, running from the First World War through the end of the de Gaulle era.

Harris and De Sedouy begin to hit hardest after they have shown how the French government was unable to prepare the country for the Second World War. Sequences taken from German footage show crowds in eastern France offering flowers to Nazi troops and French men and women in Paris punching and spitting at downed American and British flyers being led handcuffed through the streets.

Scenes of millions of Parisians cheering Marshal Philippe Petain in Paris are followed by millions cheering Charles de Gaulle at nearly the same spot four months later.

A Gaullist officer comments: "Unless the city doubled in size in the interval, they were the same people."

De Gaulle is depicted as having sought personal power from the beginning of his period in exile in London. Once returned to France, de Gaulle, says a young underground leader of Toulouse, showed no interest in incorporating the resistance into the new leadership of the country and decided instead to turn it back to the political class of the pre-war era.

SACRIFICES LACKING

Former premier Pierre Mendes-France criticizes de Gaulle for making no attempts to install an austerity regime in France after the war. He suggests—and film clips back him up—that there was no desire on the part the country to make necessary sacrifices during the rebuilding years.

De Gaulle is treated even more harshly during the Algerian war episode when he seems to promise to keep Algeria French, then abandons the territory. The film directly accuses him of lying and suggests that he is responsible for torture tactics in the army and police.

The film spares no one, not the Communists who are shown collecting gifts for Stalin, or the Gaullists, or the average Frenchmen.

Food Poisoning

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — All but one of 17 Canadian National Railways workers taken to hospital here with suspected food poisoning had been released by Thursday evening. The Golden Boy Goes Sour

By GEORGE OAKE

Strange freedoms budded briefly in the sixties, dissolving into the gray wooded soil of the seventies with nary a bloom.

The marijuana cigarettes have been butted, trembling hands reach for whisky instead.

And Leonard Cohen, the golden boy, is no longer smoking along the open road.

In the sixties he convinced some of us that our country was not made up of a hockey game rye-and-ginger mentality. There were people who dreamed of Suzanne and oranges that came all the way from China.

THE ENERGY OF SLAVES, by Leonard Cohen. McClelland and Stewart. $2.95.

But it was all a dress rehearsal rag if this latest collection of poems is any indication.

There is less of the wistful humor and the glowing celebration of sensuality. The spice box of the earth is almost empty, except for the odd bit of advice for his phlegmatic countrymen.

> the 15-year-old girls
> I wanted when I was 15
> I have them now > it is very pleasant
> it is never too late
> I advise you all > to become rich and famous.

Apparently riches and fame have given Cohen only a deep sense of foreboding. The poems have taken on a gloomy texture, full of hate, violence and torture.

> War is no longer needed > to teach you > about torture and pain . . .
> It's the old arrangement
> the old party
> the one that deals in slavery.

Nor does he seem to have much confidence in his verse or music.

> Perhaps it is because my music > does not sing for me
> I hate my music
> I long for weapons.

Melancholic ambience is not new to Cohen's work. But critics have seized on the new themes as proof that the poet is lost in his own introspection.

Who isn't in this age of terrorism as we wait for the latest war in a brown-out? It's just that poets see further than politicians.

So Cohen isn't Gerard Manley Hopkins. No one will argue that. But Hopkins didn't have to poetically resolve defoliants, atom bombs, vaginal deodorants or lemon fresh furniture polish — the cultural artifacts of our enlightened age.

Mitchell Sharp, Pierre Trudeau, Richard Nixon, Leonid Brezhnev, and the distance between governed and governments, flashed through my mind reading these lines:

> One of these days
> You will be the object > of the contempt of slaves
> Then you will not talk so easily > about our freedom and our love
> Then you will refrain > from offering us your solutions
> You have many things on your mind
> We think only of revenge.

Such viciousness is almost outside poetic realms yet even poetry must learn to live with the times.

On the back cover a stark Cohen with close-cropped hair leans against a white-tiled wall thoughtfully smoking a cigar. Is the scenario a public washroom, an insane asylum or a prison?

We don't know.

Leonard sucks on his stogie and stares out at us with those large thoughtful eyes. Perhaps he's sizing up the energy of the slaves.

Riding Old Trail

By JAMES McCOOK

Douglas Hill has walked few new trails in his study of Western Canadian progress. He has used apt quotations from familiar sources and is generous with tidbits of information — the railway crossing the prairie required 2,640 ties to the mile and boots in the Cariboo cost $50 a pair in gold-rush days, about as much as we may expect to pay in these less exciting days.

THE OPENING OF THE CANADIAN WEST, by Douglas Hill. Longman. $2.25.

The author's cool and judicious study goes briefly into the area of personal opinion in examination of Louis Riel. Hill believes Riel was an honest man who sought to lead the downtrodden in a fight against "imperialism." This opinion is widely shared today. The author admits Riel made "errors" but he might have gone further in explaining the widespread terror among settlers created by the violence of Metis and Indians inflamed by Riel. In 1885, if not today, there were many in the West who thought justice was done when Riel was hanged.

Hill, a native of Brandon, returned to Canada from London to research and write this book with the aid of what he calls "a generous research grant" from the Canada Council.

This suggests that the council felt existing books on the subject were inadequate and federal funds should be used to help fill the gap. Yet this reviewer feels that Hill's undoubted skills as a writer and researcher, plus the Canada Council money, might have been used in fields less thoroughly explored than the trails West.

G. F. G. Stanley's "The Birth of Western Canada", for example, did a good job in this area 13 years ago. The fascination of close examination of lesser-known events is illustrated by "The Battle for James Bay, 1686" by W. A. Kenyon and J. R. Turnbull, published, and reviewed on this page, in 1971.

The writers of that book examined journals nearly 300 years old, explained the journeys involved in a French assault on English posts on Hudson Bay, described the energetic assailants and the drowsy custodians of the forts, dug up cannon balls that may have been fired in 1686, and brought to life a thrilling episode which had not received a fraction of the ink and paper expended on the North-West Mounted Police march West in 1874.

Hill's sureness of touch in re-writing the stories of the West shows how effective he would be in a new area. So much of the Canadian story remains to be told in detail that authors should be encouraged to get off the well-travelled highways and on to the trails beside the muskegs.

Getting Mad With Mordecai

By PAT BARCLAY

After a week of steeping in the lumpy prose of Mordecai Richler I have come out amused, annoyed, and impressed. It's not that Richler writes awkwardly: he writes simply and well, with no stream-of-consciousness gimmickry or verbal mannerisms (unless you count his frequent use of four-letter words) to distract. By lumpy I mean his habit of spotting his books with passages that stick in the craw. If you're going to read Mordecai Richler, be prepared to be made uncomfortable.

This, of course, is quite deliberate on Richler's part. He wants us to froth and sputter; he takes a perverse delight in being perverse. (See Hunting Tigers Under Glass, where he reviews a book by Norman Mailer: "An American Dream, as John Coleman, Christoper Ricks, and Al Alvarez have already written, is a big bad novel, a novel so obviously appalling, that after reading what they had to say I reread the book, hoping to find a hidden vein of genius somewhere.")

Richler's native contrariness has been deepened and accentuated by the circumstances of his birth. The Jews have suffered; Richler himself is personally acquainted with affliction ("To be a Jew and a Canadian is to emerge from the ghetto twice"); therefore, by God, the reader can at least be made to squirm a little. (e.g.: "I didn't want to be taken for that pathetic provincial, the Canadian writer . . .")

What keeps us coming back for more in spite of ourselves is Richler's very real gift for satire. The Incomparable Atuk, admittedly only a slight entertainment at best, is nonetheless funny and packs an adequate moral punch. It lacks the more fully developed characters of Cocksure, but has the advantage of being less aggressively Jewish.

Atuk is an Eskimo poet who sets out to seek his fortune in the fleshpots of Toronto. His encounters with white liberals, Negroes, clannish Jews, etc., enable Richler to spread his observations of racial prejudice over a broader target. Naturally, Atuk is prejudiced too: "A lady in Regina had sent Atuk a pair of knitted socks. They looked dreadful. Flashy. Negroid, he thought. Atuk held them over the wastepaper basket and then had second thoughts. Treated properly this was just the kind of heart-warming story that would make a big splash in the western papers. 'Develop,' Atuk wrote on top of the lady's letter, 'Hickvillewise'."

The Incomparable Atuk is in the process of being made into a film, with script by Don Harron and direction by Norman Jewison, the Canadian who won an Oscar for In the Heat of the Night. That's one prospect that ought to give the censors a few sleepless nights.

Hunting Tigers Under Glass is a collection of pieces written for magazines in Canada, the U.S., and Britain. "These essays and reports . . . are knit with three themes: Jewish experience, a concern with literary matters, and the changing Canadian scene. More often than not, the themes are entwined, which is only natural. After all, I'm a Jewish writer from Canada."

The book was inadvertently given its title by comedian Zero Mostel. The owner of the Concord Hotel, "largest and most opulent of the Catskill resorts," once asked him, "What else can I do? What more can I add?" Mostel replied, "An indoor jungle, Arthur. Hunting for tigers under glass."

Big-game hunting is an apt description of much of Richler's work. He likes to bait Canadians, defend or attack Jews, shock and infuriate prudes. But the twin chips on his shoulder (he is both Jewish and Canadian, remember!) can have a crippling effect.

How refreshing it is, then, to read The Street and meet Richler at his ease! The street is St. Urbain, the scene of his childhood in Montreal. We come to know his parents, his pals, the boarders who come to stay when his grandmother dies. It's so real we can almost smell the salami and taste the Kik cola.

This side of Richler, the positive, humanist side, reappears in his major novel St. Urbain's Horseman, I am told. I don't know for sure because so far I have been unwilling to read past the first few suffering-hero chapters.

But The Street has given me new hope. Maybe someday it'll even be possible to read a book by the tormented and talented Mordecai Richler, and discover it actually has a happy ending.

FISCHER

Back To the Board

By WALTER DOBRICH

The summer of 1972 will be remembered, perhaps for centuries, as the initiation of the North American public into the fascinating world of chess. Bobby Fischer, who one journalist described as "grabby Bobby, the boor from Brooklyn" convincingly defeated Boris Spassky of Leningrad to become the first-ever American world champion.

Three books dealing with the match, both on the board and off, are available in paperback.

Fischer-Spassky, by Richard Roberts with Harold Schonberg, Al Horowitz and Samuel Reshevsky (Bantam, $1.95). This book, by the chess experts of the New York Times, was rushed into print immediately following the match and as a result, the quality has suffered. The content, however, excellently conveys the drama and tension of the two months of the grand encounter.

The emphasis is on the match as a news event with all the details of the behind the scenes diplomacy presented:

Fischer vs. Spassky: The Chess Match of the Century, by Svetozar Gligoric (Simon, Shuster, $1.95).

International grandmaster, Svetoszar Gligoric has been a chess professional since the early '40s and until recently has been considered a candidate for the world championship. He is one of the few people in the world who is on speaking terms with Bobby Fischer and, in fact, might loosely be described as his friend.

His book follows the match on an analytical level with 90 pages devoted to theoretical analysis. The introduction emphasizes the psychological and emotional preparation which went into each of the players training for the ultimate encounter.

Fischer vs. Spassky — Reykjavik, 1972, by C. H. O'd. Alexander (Penguin, $4.25). This version of the match would appeal to a collector of chess literature. The introduction includes a history of the world championship and biographies of both Spassky and Fischer illustrated both by games they had played prior to the match, the tournament chronologies, and about a dozen photographs.

Of the three authors, Alexander is easily the most talented writer. His style is intelligent and literate and most clearly conveys the competitive psychology and the addictive fascination of chess.

When the years begin to gallop up behind you, when your behind begins to fit tighter in a narrow chair, when the knees complain on the grades — that's the time for comfortable travel.

Confessing some of these handicaps, I have discovered the perfect way to travel. Get a book by a man who has been on rough rivers and rougher trails, one who has canoed, dog-teamed and footslogged away from the stink of gas fumes into the air perfumed by balsam fir and cottonwood. Fit yourself into a comfy chair near a good fireplace with, maybe, a snifter on the side-table.

FAR PASTURES, by R. M. Patterson. Gray's Publishing. $1.95.

Let the book be, say, one of R. M. Patterson's. I have done some of my most enjoyable travelling with him: "Dangerous River," "Trail to The Interior" and "Far Pastures". You can cover and re-cover ground with this fine Canadian author. Patterson can take a man into some of the most alluring country within the vast boundaries of Alberta and British Columbia.

All this enthusiasm because the book page editor sent me a soft-cover reprint of Patterson's "Far Pastures", a book that carries you to Peace River from 1924 to 1927, northward into the Liard and Nahanni country in 1927-29, into the Alberta foothills of the Rockies for seven years and a return to old trails up to 1955.

No matter what happened to Patterson and his friend Gordon Mathews, regardless of danger and discomfort, they always had fun.

It was fun at a Peace River "moochigan", which is (or used to be) a gathering of high social significance. With the whine of fiddle and the stomp of feet, with an occasional shot of something to keep a man cheerful, men dancing with men to make up for the paucity of women, formality went up the red-hot stove-pipe and homesteaders leading lonely lives had a brief taste of fun.

Recommended for reading and re-reading for comfortable home travel with no danger of hijacking.

Reviews by TORCHY ANDERSON

There were three McLean boys, sons of an Indian-hating father who died from an Indian bullet. The boys were half-breeds: Alan, 24, Charlie, 17, Archie and his friend Alex Hare, just into their teens. They were bad boys who made a horrible but brief effort at being bad men on the pattern popular in the American west in the year 1879.

"WE'VE KILLED JOHNNY USSHER!", by Mel Rothenburger. Mitchell Press. $3.75.

They began by stealing — horses or anything else lying around — and had whisky-inspired ambition to kill Constable Ussher and burn the pioneer village of Kamloops, then a community on horseback with only the hope of a railway. Before they were hanged in New Westminster in 1880 the boys achieved murder but failed to inspire an Indian uprising.

The McLean story, often told in brief form, is not a pretty one, nor is there much to laugh about. Whisky-inspired youths who boasted they could terrify a community finally roused ranchers and town men to form a large posse which brought about a showdown at Douglas Lake. Deprived of water, cut off from escape, the young bad men eventually staggered out of a log shack, stinking and filthy, in December 1879. They were all hanged in the following year.

The author is frank about "some fictionalizing".

This little book might have been sub-titled "History of a T-bone Steak." Into its 200 pages this veteran of the range has packed much of his own history as a rancher, some of other peoples' histories and a good deal of the story of the big spreads.

CARIBOO COWBOY, by Harry Marriott. Gray's Publishing. $1.95.

From the time he was hired at the Gang Ranch to his eventual sale of his own OK ranch, with the First World War as an absent interval, Harry and his friends fought summer drought and 30-below winter blasts to raise beef. There were no heroics about their emergency rides in the days before highways — or even roads — were built. Their hardships were just part of the business of sending good beef to the market.

In Harry Marriott's days on the Cariboo range most of the ranchers were lucky to make enough for grub and clothing. The occasion of breaking out a bottle of rum was an event. So were the dances at Howling Dog Hall. Even occasional church attendance had its lighter moments, such as the performance of one worshipper who managed to chew tobacco right through the service and never once spit. Men were good in those days!

A good book to take on a journey and bring home to your history shelf. It demanded rawhide tough men and women with courage and understanding to love the high country.

When a women embarks in a 25-foot boat with her five young children she expects, and meets, about everything the coast of British Columbia can offer — up to this side of total shipwreck. M. Wylie Blanchet and her clan experienced adventure, danger, rapture and meetings with interesting people.

This family of hardy mariners listened to the roar of the Skookumchuck, saw the fog enfold the dark majesty of Louisa Inlet, saw the hissing, heaving of the mighty Yuculta Rapids. Reading charts that were not always precise in detail, with the advice of loggers and Indians, they poked into inlets where mountains rise vertically from the sea, where the threat of sudden winds makes every tiny cove welcome haven.

THE CURVE OF TIME, by M. Wylie Blanchet. Gray's Publishing. $1.95.

This re-issue of family adventure is permeated with a love of six people for a coast that offers as much grandure as any in the world.

Yes, the engine did break down and the skipper had to use all her know-how and ingenuity to keep out of trouble. The northern coast is not a place for crazy chances. Its towering mountains, racing tidal rivers, wild winds that fool the barometer, offer at once magnificence and disaster.

There were times when anxious Mommy rushed after straying offspring. There were moments in climbing expeditions when blinding fog left them on a narrow ledge with death a thousand feet below.

They took the warm sunshine, driving rain and wool-thick fog in stride. Their little oil stove produced meals from the sea, the hillside — and from cans. They visited old Indian villiages and felt the ghostly presence of medicine men long dead. It was a glorious summer.

Nice people to voyage with!

Quebec Chronicle

By MICHAEL HUGHES

No other province has undergone such dramatic social, economic, religious and political change in the past decade as Quebec.

Many French-Canadians have cast off their rural, clerical shackles and flung themselves into an era with a sensitivity to their unique culture and background, coupled with an awareness of their basic human rights and freedoms.

QUEBEC: A Chronicle 1968-1972, edited by Robert Chodos and Nick Auf der Maur. James, Lewis and Samuel. $1.95.

Too often the incidents that were symptomatic of the inner rebellion and revolution in Quebec, such as the strikes, the bombings, the October crisis of 1970 and the unions' show of strength in 1972, are misunderstood outside Quebec or interpreted in isolation rather than as part of an over-all quilt of history.

The value of Quebec: A Chronicle 1968-1972 is that it attempts to accurately report the more significant events that have taken place in that five-year period and relate them to the wave of change that is sweeping the province.

The book is a collection of articles written for Last Post, a radical monthly magazine published in Toronto and Montreal.

The editors, Robert Chodos and Nick Auf der Maur, have attempted to follow the natural development of events such as the uprising of the taxi drivers and the Lepalme mail truck drivers to show the serious concern for a new society being expressed by those in the trade union movement.

The editors follow groups like the Mouvement de Liberation du Taxi (MLT), which was formed to help militant taxi drivers fight poor working conditions, injustices and taxi monopolies. They also narrate the story of the Lepalme truck drivers' fight "against governments' preference for cheap, non-union labor."

These movements were often looked upon in isolation by those outside the province but were actually part of a general dissatisfaction within Quebec society and an indication of a new mood sweeping through large sections of the Quebec working class.

The Funny Side of Madness

Few writers have let it all hang out like Frederick Exley in this wildly comic "fictional memoir." When it first appeared in 1969 it became known that the book was close to autobiography and that Exley had put in everything, his fixations, alcoholism, mental breakdown.

This is the story of Exley's failure to fit in with the American Dream, and the irony is that his telling of it in an award-winning book allowed him to triumph in the end over the system.

A FAN'S NOTES, by Frederick Exley. Ballantine. 95 cents.

His disability is that he is "self-destructively romantic." He sought escape in football and booze.

He drank because "after a month's sobriety my faculties became unbearably acute and I found myself . . . having insights into places I'd just as soon not journey to." Unlike most he needed it not to acquire boldness or wit but as a depressant for unbearable mental exhiliaration.

As for football, it was "an island of directness in a world of circumspection." He identified totally, neurotically you might say, with Frank Gifford and the Giants. His attachment to the handsome, dashing Gifford was "a desire to escape life's bleak anonymity."

But neither liquor nor his fantasy life could keep him from twice slipping over the deep edge of what passes for sanity. He went into a kind of Cuckoo's Nest institution but unlike Randle McMurphy who tackled his tormentors head-on, Exley found the way out through passivity, "leaving the mind malleable as mush and letting them impose any inanities upon it they wished."

In between these bouts he met the honey-blond girl of his dreams: "On my first breathless vision of her, I wanted to bury my teeth, Dracula-like, into her flanks, knowing that she would bleed pure butterscotch."

But he couldn't make it with Bunny Sue. She was the fantasy come true, and for the romantic that's deadening. He was impotent, despite Bunny Sue's diligent research on The Frigid Male, and so he moved on to other, less perfect girls.

Exley made a try at the advertising business but needless to say he was temperamentally unsuited to the demands of that trade, so he went and lay on his mother's couch for six months.

And so it goes in this contemporary saga of mixed-up youth. It could all be very depressing except that Exley is never self-pitying. He looks back on those turbulent years with unsparing honesty that is leavened by real humor and warmth. There's humanity in his madness.

Someone tried to make a movie of A Fan's Notes last year but went broke in the middle. It's no loss; film could only diminish the richness of the book as in the case of Catch-22. The two books can stand comparison, which says a lot for this one.

Music Thriving In the Valley

Musical activity in the Cowichan Valley is increasing and gaining support from the public in a trend that is showing up on Vancouver Island from Victoria to Campbell River.

Last week the Cowichan Symphony Society had over 500 people in the senior secondary school auditorium to wind up its most successful ever series of concerts by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

With Laszlo Gati conducting and soprano Ricki Turofsky as guest artist, the program was identical with the Victoria concerts of two weeks ago.

Considering the substantial audience increase, the society and its associate sponsor, the Duncan Business and Professional Women's Club, are definite about continuing the arrangement which brings the Victoria Symphony and guest artists to Duncan four times during the season.

"We were told that we would need to raise $4,000 for the Victoria Society if the concerts were to continue," publicity chairman Valerie Gervais says.

"The task looked almost impossible to begin with but we have more than met our quota already, exclusive of this last concert."

Among the audiences are large representations from the private schools in the area, particularly Cliffside and Queen Margaret's, according to Cowichan symphony committee chairman, Mark Thornton Sharp.

At the final concert, the devotion and long association with the society of Mr. and Mrs. M. Munsell and of Mrs. P. C. Boiston of the BPW Club, was acknowledged with presentations.

The society also has other musical undertakings in hand such as two concerts scheduled for Wednesday and Friday in the secondary school of Lake Cowichan and Duncan in which musicians from the Cowichan Valley and Victoria will join forces.

The Polyphonic Singers under their director, Peter Yelland, and the newly formed Vancouver Island Symphony Orchestra directed by Bob Cooper with both local and Victoria soloists, will present a classical program.

Plans are completed for making a 12-inch stereo record of parts of the program. Proceeds of the sale of this record will be held in trust by the Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council for the purpose of building a theatre in the Cowichan Valley.

Former principal oboe with the Victoria Symphony, Ian Franklin, left here last summer seeking to broaden his experience and increase his earning capacity as a professional musician.

He had been an outstanding student and musician throughout his school life and a leading player with the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony Orchestra before being accepted as a student player in the Victoria Symphony and subsequently taking the lead chair.

Now, according to a recent Canada Council released, the Regina Symphony has received a special grant of $3000 to appoint Franklin as musician-in-residence for nine months.

Lauritz Melchior, considered to be one of the greatest Wagnerian tenors of his time, died this month at 83.

The Danish-born giant, 6'4", blonde, massive-chested, made his operatic debut in 1913 as a baritone. Advised that his voice was in the wrong register in five years he retrained himself as a tenor.

Melchior visited Victoria once, about 20 years ago, singing a recital in, of all places, the Bay Street Armory. I recollect his thrilling performance of Wagnerian arias — especially Siegfried — but his Verdi lacked emotion and that a lieder group was a definite disappointment.

I recall also that after the concert autograph seekers who had purchased expensive souvenir programs were rewarded with a hand-scrawled signature. Others were sent on their way with slips bearing facsimile signatures tucked into their free programs.

At the time that Ezio Pinza, another opera great, was making it big as the star of South Pacific, Melchoir was asked in an interview if he contemplated emulating Pinza with a Broadway musical role.

His lofty reply: "For Pinza that sort of thing may be necessary. It is not for me."

Nobody likes to be mis-called or have their name misspelled but Melchior's sensitivity on this score gave rise to a widely publicized Ogden Nash-like doggerel.

Maybe it was authored by Nash. I'm not sure but it was something about nothing rousing the singer's ire like having his name pronounced "Melchoir."

Paintings Stolen

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Thieves stole paintings valued at $860,000 Thursday from a monastery near here. The works were by the 16th-century master Defendente Ferrari. Since Sunday, almost $3 million worth of paintings have been stolen from Italian churches and museums. The Ferrari paintings were four wooden panels depicting different saints and were part of a polyptych kept in the monastery of St. Anthony of Ranverso.

Wendy Hiller as Queen Mary

Stage Royalty Bar Broken

LONDON — Crown Matromonial — a play by Royce Ryton — is currently making British theatrical history at the Haymarket Theatre in London. The play deals with the abdication in 1936 of King Edward VIII who later became Duke of Windsor, and for the first time portrays on stage two living members of the British royal family — Queen Elizabeth, mother of the present Queen, and her aunt, the Duchess of Gloucestor. Before the abolition in 1968 of censorship in the British Theatre, it would have been impossible for this play to have been staged.

The play is a true dramatic romance and tells of King Edward's love for the American divorcee, Mrs. Wallis Simpson, and how his stubborn determination to marry her led to a consitutional crisis which rocked many of the countries of the then British Empire. As King, Edward VIII was also Defender of the Faith and the secular head of the Church of England. For this reason it was considered impossible that he should marry a divorced woman. Torn between duty to his country and love for Mrs. Simpson, the King finally decided to abdicate.

Royce Ryton presents his play as a family crisis. Even Mrs. Simpson does not appear although she is the centre of discussion throughout and Ryton has endeavored to portray her sympathetically. The then Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, and the Archbishop of Canterbury — who were important personalities in the crisis — do not appear either.

The action takes place in Marlborough House, home of the King's mother and widow of King George V, Queen Mary. It is a conflict of wills between mother and son. Queen Mary, a woman of high principles, certain that duty and tradition must stand above all other considerations, begs her son to give up Mrs. Simpson, while the King maintains that, though he wants to "take his country into the 20th century," he cannot carry on without the woman he loves.

Inevitably, the dialogue contains many cliches of that period and, because the outcome is known, there is little suspense. Yet the actors manage to breathe life into the historic figures they portray. Windy Hiller, one of Britain's finest character actresses (she first made her name as Eliza in Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion), gives a remarkable representation of the late Queen Mary — regal in her posture, straight as a rod, hiding her anguish under a rigid facade and convinced that her beloved son must do his duty as King. Peter Barksworth (a popular television actor) presents Edward VIII as an eloquent, determined man, labouring under great emotional strain and conveys much of the charm which made the King an idol of the nation.

However, it is the scenes in which the author has had to use his imagination that the play reaches its dramatic peaks; for instance, when the King's brother, the Duke of York — a shy and retiring man afflicted with a painful stammer — realises with horror that if the King abdicates it is he who must ascend the throne. In a passionate outburst his wife (the present Queen Mother) accuses the King of selfishness: that he is ready to cede his place to his brother who has had no opportunity for preparation to assume the heavy responsibilities of a monarch, and who has no desire to do so. The most moving moment in the play is after the abdication, when this new King — George VI — is persuaded by his mother that he has all the qualities of a good monarch.

Festival Program

Vocal, piano and speech arts classes start the action for Greater Victoria Music Festival on Monday at 9 a.m.

First United Fellowship Hall on Balmoral Road will house the vocal sessions with adjudicator Roger Stalman officiating.

Also in Fellowship Hall, in room 119, speech arts classes will take place with Vancouver actress Gay Scrivener as adjudicator, while across the road in St. John's Hall, beginning Tuesday junior pianists will perform.

Adjudicator for the juniors this year is Carol Jutte, also of Vancuver, while intermediate and senior level pianists will be involved in sessions at Newcombe Auditorium with commentary from Clyde Lythgoe.

Stalman and Lythgoe are the two British adjudicators from the Federation of Canadian Festivals team.

Morning, afternoon and evening sessions will continue through the week.

On Wednesday there will be organ classes at St. John's church in the afternoon.

Thursday evening's program will include the vocal championship Rose Bowl contest and on Friday evening the speech arts honor performance will take place.

Piano championship contest for the City of Victoria Medallion is scheduled for Saturday evening.

Programs listing all times are available from Western Music, Blanshard Street, Hall and Fairfield, Fort Street, or at any of the performing centres.

The festival office where additional information is available will be in the Fellowship Hall.

Second week of the festival — April 9-14 — involves all school classes in dance, instrumental and choral work, and Highland dance, ballet, strings, winds, accordion and guitar.

Adjudicators for this section are Francis Chaplin, Brandon, Man., strings; W. E. Cole, Western Washington State College, bands; Miss Marilyn Perkins, Calgary, choral; Ted Komar, Winnipeg, accordion and guitar; Professor J. Belford, Winnipeg folk dance; Mrs. E. J. Jolley, Burnaby, highland; Miss Dolores Kirkwood, Burnaby, ballet.

Organ, Trumpet Recital

Music of the baroque will be highlighted in a recital of organ and trumpet works, Saturday at 8 p.m. at St. Matthias Anglican Church.

Artists are Boyde Hood, principal trumpet with Victoria Symphony Orchestra and a music faculty professor at UVic, and organ Frances Carter, newly appointed director of music at St. atthias.

Also assisting is Lanny Pollet, UVic music graduate and member of the Pacific Wing Quintet.

Compositions by Bach, Purcell, Albiononi and Corelli will be featured.

There is no admission charge.

Oratorio at UVic

There are 350 musicians involved in next week's presentation by the University of Victoria Chorus and Orchestra of the Handel oratorio, Judas Maccabaeus.

The performance is being given, Friday and Saturday, as the annual Taylor Music Scholarship benefit concert. It will take place in the UVic gymnasium at 8 p.m.

Director is Dr. George Corwin of the music department faculty.

Members of Victoria's musical community featured will be soprano Erika Kurth singing the part of the Israelite woman; mezzo soprano Elinor Bertram, the Israelite man; tenor Arthur Wiebe in the title role and baritone Garth Gislason as Simon.

Leader of the orchestra is John Loban of the University of British Columbia music department.

The plot of Judas Maccabaeus concerns the Syrian invasion of Israel. It was a popular oratorio in England when first introduced and became a political symbol for the revolutionary spirit abroad at that time.

This is the fourth annual presentation of major choral-orchestral works given for the scholarshp fund.

Tickets are available from the UVic music department office and from chorus members.

SYLVIA LEPMANIS . . . to be soloist

Music Camp

The seventh season of the Courtenay Youth Music Camp will take place between July 22 and Aug. 26.

Sponsored by the Junior Symphony Society of Vancouver with the support of the B.C. Cultural Fund, this year's camp will provide a total musical experience for students enrolled in any phase.

This year, for example, there will be an advanced opera group preparing concert performances of at least one complete opera. This will be under direction of Dr. Jacob Hamm, experienced vocal coach.

Students in the group will receive specialized voice training in art song and opera repertoire.

Concert violinist Steven Staryk will join the faculty to give individual lessons and master classes for senior students.

Another featured artist will be Ray Still, principal oboist with the Chicago Symphony and well-known as a performer and conductor of chamber music. Besides teaching oboe at Courtenay, Still will prepare, with faculty and student ensembles, the major large chamber works of Mozart.

Associate conductor of Vancouver Symphony, Simon Streatfeild, will conduct the B.C. Summer Youth Orchestra and others returning to continue their work of the previous season are Canadian composer Harry Freedman and choral director Bruce More.

A guest faculty recruited from around the world will join resident faculty members, including the Purcell String Quartet and other B.C. musicians.

Among the latter will be Vernon Bryant, music co-ordinator for the Vernon school district, who will offer orchestral training for wind instrumentalists.

Director of the camp, Robert Creech, stresses that all students from age eight to 25, are welcome to attend for a minimum period of two weeks.

For brochures and further information contact should be made with the registrar, Mrs. Sharon Kanke, 557 West 12th Avenue, Vancouver.

Concert Aids First Aid

A resident concert pianist and a vocal ensemble will join in providing a concert in aid of specific St. John Ambulance funds, April 8.

Sylvia Lepmanis, who was Jascha Heifetz' accompanist up to the time of his death and now has won many awards and scholarships, came to Victoria four years ago, lured by her love of nature.

She is a member of the Outdoor Club and has climbed 100 peaks in the Rockies.

She has been a soloist with the New Orleans Symphony, California Youth Orchestra and Santa Barbara Academy Orchestra. She has also performed in New England, Texas, Bermuda and the West Indies.

Boston-born, she gave her first recital at the age of 11 and subsequently studied at the Juilliard School and the Music Academy of the West.

For the April 8 concert which will take place in Newcombe Auditorium at 2:15 p.m., she has chosen a Debussy Sarabande, Chopin's Fantasie Impromptu Op. 66, the Ritual Fire Dance by de Falla and Tarantella by Liszt.

The Newcombe Glee Club, directed by D. R. Sheppard, shares the program with groups of spirituals and gospel hymns.

The ensemble was formed in 1967 and has been singing Christmas carols in the rotunda of the legislative buildings each year since then.

It is composed of civil servants selected for their vocal ability from a wide range of government departments. The group has sung at many church concerts and is making a record of the Christmas music.

Proceeds from the event will go to defray expenses for teams of young people from Victoria and elsewhere entering competitions throughout the province, in first aid and home nursing.

Tickets are obtainable from Hall and Fairfield, Fort Street and St. John Ambulance, Pandora Avenue, or at the door.

Drama Workshop Revived

For 20 students of B.C. secondary schools talented in drama the University of Victoria campus will once more prove an inspiring place to be this summer.

A seven-week summer theatre workshop will take place from July 3 to Aug. 17. This is the first of its kind since the 1968 workshop was directed by England's Martin Jenkins and concluded with a memorable performance of Romeo and Juliet.

The campus workshops for high school drama students were suspended after 1968 as Victoria Fair activity absorbed the energies of the theatre department.

Dr. Barbara McIntyre, theatre department head, says the students will be selected from Grades 11 and 12 throughout the province and that each will receive a $250 bursary to defray living and travel expenses. This assistance has been made possible through a $5,000 grant from the B.C. Cultural Fund.

Out-of-town students will stay at David Thompson Hall on UVic campus.

A further award of $100 may be available to help with the workshop tuition fee of $140.

Bursary winners will be chosen by schools and the UVic theatre department, working in conjunction with provincial secondary school drama festivals.

Classes in acting, mime, speech, design, costume and stagecraft will be conducted by such prominent faculty members as Esse Ljungh, former CBC drama director, and Kaz Piesowocki, mime artist.

The workshop activities will culminate in a production of Ibsen's Peer Gynt, directed by Ljungh.

There will also be a Phoenix Players summer festival of one full-plength musical and two plays. This festival will be under the direction of John Krich and the company will include graduate and fourth-year theatre students.

According to Dr. McIntyre the theatre workshop student activity will be co-ordinated with the Phoenix Players' festival.

Festival of Crafts

A festival for artists and craftsmen whose work involves the use of fibres has been planned for Open Space April 6 to 22.

The event will bring together a diversified collection or work in the fibre arts and crafts and create an opportunity for people working in the medium to meet and encounter each other's work.

Open Space, 510 Fort, is looking for displays of knitting, macrame, weaving, batik, block-printing, silkscreen, rug-tying stitchery and also wants participation by loom-builders and makers of other craft tools.

The festival will include exhibitions, individual and consignement sales areas, and a variety of workshops open to the general public.

Participants can submit work for exhibit, conduct or attend workshops or set up shop to sell their own work, at a commission.

Festival hours will be from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday to Wednesday and 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday.

Deadline for submissions is April 4 and participation fee is $2.

Those interested in the workshop schedule can contact Open Space for times at 383-8833.

Canadian Pianist Coming

An outstanding Canadian painist who has performed extensively throughout Canada and the United States, with leading orchestras and on radio and TV, will give a recital at the McPherson Playhouse, April 8.

Mari-Elizabeth Morgan will come to Victoria after performing with Arthur Fiedler and the Vancouver Symphony at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre.

Miss Morgan was guest artist with the Victoria Symphony in January 1970, the same year in which she won the Young Concert Artists Auditions in New York. Her New York debut followed at Town Hall.

Her 1973 season includes a recital at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Radio Pioneer Dies

MIAMI (AP) — Niles Trammel, 78, a former president and board chairman of NBC, died here Wednesday. He was responsible for such programs as Fibber McGee and Molly, Ma Perkins, and Today's Children during his years with the network. He left NBC in 1952 to build and operate radio and television stations in Florida.

JOYCE MENTING

TOP STUDENT

Last of Series

Music is an all-absorbing interest for 16-year-old Joyce Menting. At the age of 10 she started taking lessons on cello with Hans Siegrist and in 1970 achieved the Grade VIII Royal Conservatory of Music Toronto certificate.

Since Siegrist left the city she has been a pupil of James Hunter with whom she is now preparing to take her Grade X exam in June.

For Joyce exams and music festival classes are very much a means to an end for it is her ambition to be a professional orchestra player. At present she is getting great satisfaction out of performing with the Conservatory of Music orchestra.

She comes of a muscal environment, her father being well-known flutist Jan Menting. Her mother has taught Joyce piano and will prepare her for piano examinations which will be necessary as she proceeds to diploma standard in cello.

COMING UP IN THE ARTS NEXT WEEK

Tonight's choice of live stage entertainment is bright and light with, at Langham Court, some food for thought as Victoria Theatre Guild and UVic theatre department present the musical play-cum-rview, Oh What a Lovely War. It continues nightly through April 7.

At McPherson Playhouse, also continuing through April 7, Victoria Operatic Society offers The Merry Widow. There's a special matinee Sunday at 2:30 p.m. No show Monday.

Monday through Saturday, day and evening events, Victoria Music Festival. For location and other information, see programs on sale at music stores.

Handel's oratorio, Judas Maccabaeus, will be performed Friday and Saturday by UVic chorus and orchestra at the gymnasium, 8 p.m.

Ecole de Paris book illustrations are on view at Greater Victoria Art Gallery through April 15. Also, from the collection of Montreal architect Peter Dobush, a gift of more than 40 Canadian works of art has been presented to the gallery and will be shown through April 15.

An exhibition of watercolors entitled English Gardens, by Flemming Jorgensen, will be on view Monday through April 14 at the Backroom Gallery, Frames and Things, 2019 Oak Bay Avenue.

Breweries Aid Production

TORONTO (CP) — David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said Thursday Canadian Breweries Ltd. has contributed $10,000 towards the production costs of a film being produced by the OFL to change the public's image of the trade union movement.

Mr. Archer said there were no strings attached to the donation.

PLAGUE MAKES COMEBACK

GENEVA (AP) — Plague, the dread illness that has been sharply reduced in the last 100 years, appears to be on the way back, says the United Nations World Health Organization.

It says more areas considered clear of the disease have recently become active again and hinted the incidence of plague is likely to be well above the official statistical reports.

The organization's statistics, compiled from reports of its member countries, show 1,738 cases, 103 of them fatal, last year—75 in Africa; 392 in the Western Hemisphere, mainly Latin America; 1,271 in Asia, and none in Europe.

The totals comare with 829 in 1970 and 958 in 1972. Forty-seven cases were fatal in each year.

The current disease level is far from the most infamous plague of all, the Black Death, that wiped out an estimated quarter of the population of Europe in 1349 and 1350.

Plague kept recurring in Europe up to the late 17th century and in 1665 wiped out whole villages in Britain and a tenth of London's then population of 400,000.

Most types of plague begins with a fever and chills, followed by extreme exhaustion, often with delirium, vomiting and diarrhea, then sometimes death. The disease is carried by rats and other rodents and transmitted to humans by fleas.

The report says traditional plague areas where the disease appears to be reviving are in Libya, on the Yemen-Saudi Arabian border, Cambodia, Burma, Indonesia, Nepal, Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, Peru, Lesotho, Madagascar, Tanzania and Zaire.

THE FIRST 50 YEARS

SUNDAY, APRIL 1st, 1973

"a nostalgia spectacular!"

FROM THE ROARING TWENTIES
TO THE JET AGE!

FROM 9:00 A.M. TO 5:30 P.M.

Sunday April 1st, CJVI has pre-empted its regular program schedule (except for newscasts) to present:

A NOSTALGIA SPECTACULAR . . .
THE FIRST FIFTY YEARS!

The history of CJVI begins exactly 50 years ago on Easter Sunday, April 1st, 1923, when the Centennial Methodist Church opened a radio station just in time to broadcast the Easter Sunrise Service conducted by Dr. Clem Davies.

Two of the original operators of that station, manager Jack McKay and operator Frank Hall, will be in our studios to celebrate our 50th birthday!

OPEN HOUSE
SUNDAY 12 - 5

Some listening highlights from radio of yesteryear —

- ★ 9 - 10 a.m. — PIONEERS OF RADIO: Victoria's first broadcasters — Bing Crosby's first radio broadcast — Amos 'n Andy's first shows — Premier Duff Pattullo speaking on this station (CFCT) in 1935.
- ★ 10 - 11 a.m. — CHARLIE McCARTHY/EDGAR BERGEN PROGRAM with Mae West and W. C. Fields. Orson Welles "War of the Worlds" 1938 broadcast. Vaughn Deleath, the original "radio girl."
- ★ 11 - 12 noon — FRED ALLEN with JACK BENNY. The famous broadcast of the Hindenburg Disaster, 1937.
- ★ 12:15 - 1 p.m. — THE HAPPY GANG. FIBBER McGEE and MOLLY.
- ★ 1 - 2 p.m. — CJVI's HOMETOWNERS. Lux Radio Theatre. Lonesome Gal.
- ★ 2 - 3 p.m. — INNER SANCTUM. BURNS and ALLEN. LONE RANGER.
- ★ 3 - 4 p.m. — ABBOTT AND COSTELLO and their famous "Who's on First" sketch. LUCKY STRIKE HIT PARADE. HENRY MORGAN SHOW.
- ★ 4 - 5 p.m. — OUR MISS BROOKS. BABY SNOOKS. MART KENNY.
- ★ 5 - 5:30 p.m. — FOSTER HEWITT: His 50 Years in Hockey Broadcasting.
- ★ PLUS — Many of CJVI's former staff members dropping in throughout the day, including: Tippy O'Neill, Stan Peters, Hugh Curtis, Walter Cownden, Maurice Cownden, M. V. Chesnut, Maury Gwynne, Fred Usher, Ted Reynolds, Al Smith, and many SURPRISE GUESTS!

You are invited to tour the CJVI Studios at 817 Fort Street April 1st, between noon and 5 p.m. Enter the contest to win dinner for two at the Empress Hotel, share our Anniversary Cake from Fairfield Bakery, and win long playing recordings.

BRIDGE BUILDERS AT KWAI RETURN

KANCHANABURI, Thailand (AP) — Some of the British prisoners of war who helped build the bridge on the river Kwai for their Japanese captors during the Second World War returned to the span Monday as tourists.

"Forty-nine prisoners died for every mile of the railway," said Peter Dunstan, captured in Singapore after surviving the sinking of the battleship Prince of Wales in 1941 off north Malaya.

"I was beaten and forced to walk from Singapore to this horrible place," Dunstan said as he stood on the railway tracks crossing the bridge northwest of Bangkok.

"My friends and I were prisoners here for two full years building the railroad line and prison camps. We were treated very badly."

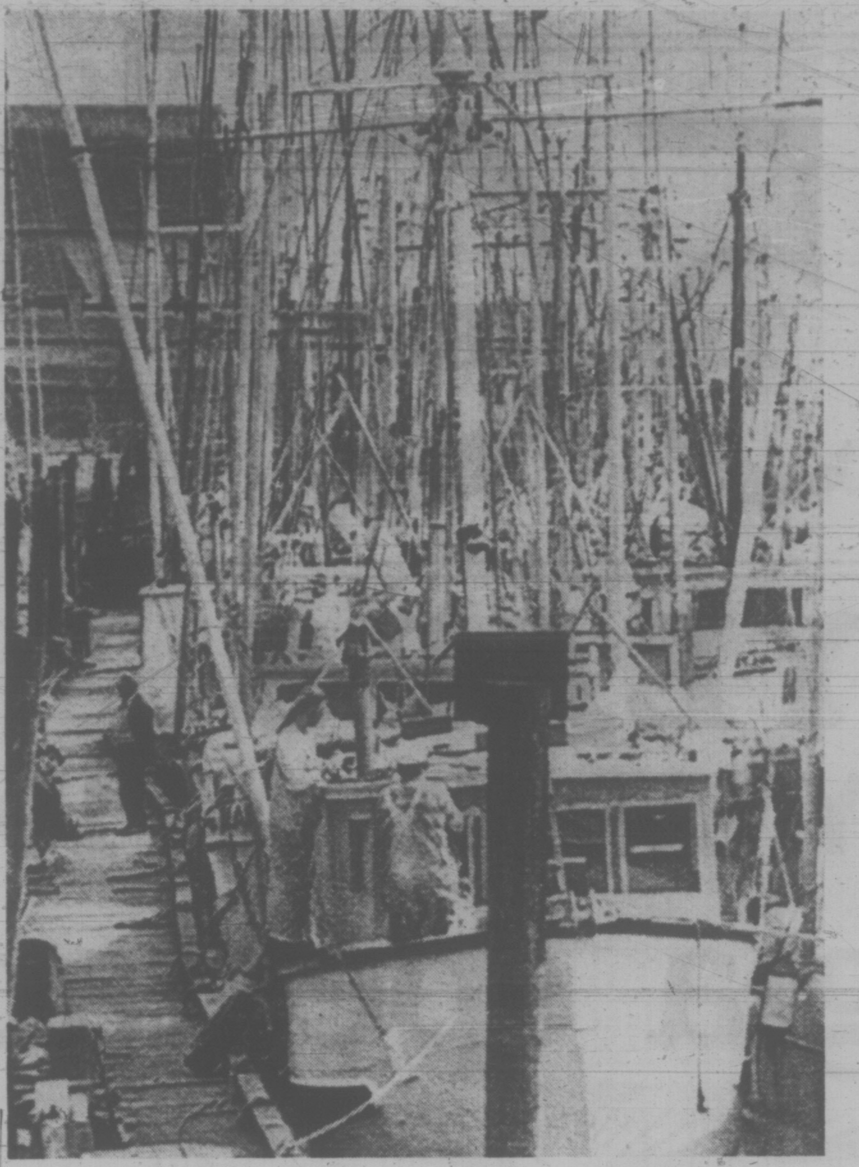
Dunstan is leading a group of 23 former British PoWs on a two-week tour. It is the second group from the Far East Prisoners of War organization to make the pilgrimage.

"It's a journey of a lifetime," said James Sanderson, 72, who spent most of the day looking for the names of friends in Kanchanaburi's two war cemeteries. About 6,000 Allied prisoners died building the "Death Railway" from Thailand to Burma.

Chinese Way Costly

EDMONTON (CP) — Michael John Neilsen, 31, of Edmonton, was sentenced to eight years in prison Thursday for possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Nielson said he bought by parcel post 428 capsules of heroin from Vancouver for himself and two other addicts in anticipation of kicking their habit by a Chinese method of gradual withdrawal.



ENDLESS CHORES face commercial fishermen whether they are out on the ocean or tied up on the north arm of the Fraser River near Vancouver. With the arrival of good weather, the fishboats are getting their annual scraping and painting.

'Clown of the Orchestra' Shows Signs of Revival

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec's cultural affinity with France may contribute to the revival of the French bassoon as an important orchestral instrument in North America, says the lead bassoon player of the National Arts Centre Orchestra.

Gerald Corey of Ann Arbor, Mich., who joined the orchestra here last fall, has introduced the French instrument to his associate, Michael Namer of Montreal, and they played them in arts centre concerts this winter.

The bassoon is often called the clown of the orchestra, a name that most bassoonists don't like. It is, in effect, a bass woodwind which spends most of its time tooting low notes for the flutes, oboes and clarinets.

But occasionally — as in The Sorcerer's Apprentice of Peter and the Wolf — it has well-known solo parts which earn it the title of clown.

The bassoon is an instrument dating from the middle ages. Mr. Corey says most classical composers had the sound of the French bassoon in mind when they composed their important works, particularly French composers like Debussy and Ravel.

EASIER TO PLAY

But in the present century, the German bassoon has become more widely used. It is easier to master. A furore was created in France recently when a French military band started using the German bassoon.

In appearance there is little to distinguish them, but the German-design instrument has a swelling just before the ivory-ringed bell, where the sound comes out.

Mr. Corey says the French bassoon is a smoother-sounding instrument, which blends well with other woodwinds in the orchestra and with the French horn. It is also more lyrical, with greater agility in the higher notes.

He now teaches bassoon at the University of Ottawa and says there are not many other players of the French bassoon in Canada.

"I'm intrigued by the possibilities in French Canada, and I'm hoping that in time I can influence some of the better players of the German bassoon in French Canada to take up the French instrument.

"If they would play it and teach it, and let it grow there in Quebec, I think it would be a very natural thing."

STUDIED IN FRANCE

Mr. Namer said there is a great affinity in Quebec musical circles with French music.

He studied at the Conservatoire in Montreal, and like many Quebec musicians went to France for further study.

"So there is good reason to believe the potential is there to interest other players."

Mr. Corey says he doesn't mean that the French bassoon should supplant the German instument. The latter still is best for music by German or Austrian composers like Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven.

"But since it is possible to play them both, it gives an orchestra more versatility when bassoon players have both instuments at hand."

Mr. Corey owns two, one made in 1966 which he bought from the late Norman Tobias, Toronto bassoonist, and the other about 50 years old, which he has loaned to Mr. Namer.

"I'm tickled with Michael because I've been interested in the French bassoon since I was in high school, and now he's playing it.

"I heard the last player of the French bassoon in North America play a beautiful solo in the Stravinsky Fire Bird Suite 20 years ago and decided then that some day I'd like to play it."

Saigon Relaxes Some

By PETER SHARROCK

SAIGON (Reuter) — The old man who sells ice in the Mekong Delta town of Cai Lay planned his annual trip to Saigon in February.

But then he heard about the Jan. 28 ceasefire on the radio and decided to stay home until next year.

In 30 years of civil and international war, truce has often meant an offensive in Vietnam and the ice-seller might have found the 50 miles of road between Cai Lay and Saigon threatened in several places if he had made the trip in the first two weeks of the ceasefire.

But after several weeks of ceasefire the people of Saigon show the first signs of relaxing a little.

Combat deaths among South Vietnamese soldiers since Jan. 28 are nearing the 2,000 mark and the number wounded is climbing towards 10,000, but the fighting is dying down.

The jukebox in Givral's, the fashionable coffee shop opposite the National Assembly, has been rejuvenated with its first new discs since the early 1950s.

SIP DRINKS SLOWLY

The customers sip their drinks slowly because all prices have soared since the ceasefire offensive coincided with the Tet lunar new year holiday.

Le Van Huong, a 55-year-old cycle rider lounged back, out of business, in the hot sun. "They're still fighting in the countryside," he said. "The price of ice has gone up and I'm making less money than ever."

Nguyen Thi Chuyen, 24, the wife of a government pacification official on duty in the Mekong Delta, was selling coconut milk from a bicycle nearby.

"The ceasefire has made no difference," she complained. "The price of everything has gone up—rice, sugar, fish, fruit, vegetables. And my husband is still with the army."

Nguyen Duc Thuan, 61, a civil servant who brought his four sons and wife south in 1954 said that since the United States began pulling out, the economy has been on the down swing.

"Everything is unstable at present but when peace really comes, the economy will begin to show results and there will be stability."

SUPPLIES ILLEGAL

Saigon and many other towns get soap, cigarettes, electric fans, television sets and liquor illegally through the U.S. Post Exchanges (PXs) which supplied the American armed forces.

The last PX closed March 14. The government has clamped import bans on such luxuries as silk and velvet. A rumor sweeping through the Chinese retail shops is that all alcohol imports will be banned next.

Undistinguished Algerian wine bottled in a Saigon suburb already costs up to $7 a bottle in the city's French restaurants because of high import tariffs.

U.S. intelligence estimates the North Vietnamese are infiltrating men and arms into South Vietnam at approximately half the rate of this time last year.

Officials describe the new infiltration as building up their military option. They do not think the option is likely to be taken this year but some of Saigon's shrewdest businessmen and financiers are laying bets on another military push next May, when the last U.S. soldier is back in the United States.

Hawaii...
coming and going should be half the fun.

Begin your holiday being pampered "British-style" on a P&O cruise ship, all the way to Honolulu. Then after long, languorous days of sun, sightseeing and sandy beaches, you'll board a sleek CP Air jet for home.

Or you might prefer to reverse the order. Fly down and cruise home.

The choice is yours and there's a wide selection of cruises to choose from. Some are direct between Vancouver and Honolulu; others also include a cruise of the Hawaiian Islands.

During your stay in Honolulu relax at either the deluxe Holiday Inn or the Outrigger East Hotel — both in the heart of Waikiki.

The next of many frequent departures leaves Vancouver May 18. Call your travel agent for complete details. You'll find even though our Hawaiian holiday is out of this world — the prices aren't. Minimum price, including air and sea passage and hotel accommodations, is only $386.00.

Immediate Future of China Lies in Hands of Chou

By PETER GREGSON

LONDON (Reuter) — Who will rule China after Chairman Mao Tse-tung?

This intriguing Chinese puzzle is the subject of a recent book by veteran reporter Dennis Bloodworth and his Chinese wife, Ching Ping.

In the book, Heirs Apparent (Secker and Warburg), the authors concur with most informed Western observers that the immediate future of China lies in the hands of Premier Chou En-lai.

But the premier is 74, only five years younger than Mao. Who will assume his mantle when he dies?

This is the theme of Heirs Apparent. For, although China has emerged from a largely self-imposed isolation in the last two years, the men who guide the destiny of one-quarter of the world's population are virtually unknown to the other three-quarters.

The book puts faces to the names of China's topmost hierarchy, and names to the men who are just under them, ready to take over in the not too distant future.

TELLS OF FOUNDING

Heirs Apparent also gives a colorful account of the events that led to the founding of the People's Republic in 1949 and what has happened since then to make Communist China what it is today.

The authors chart the shifts in the balance of power that caused Mao to launch the cultural revolution of 1966-69 and the changes brought by the resulting struggles for control —the downfall of President Liu Shao-chi, the current strength of Chou, the meteoric rise of Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, and the political demise of his long-trusted private secretary, Chen Po-ta.

The Bloodworths are qualified commentators. He has been the Far Eastern correspondent of the London Observer, a Sunday newspaper, since 1954, has made two extensive visits to China, and has written two previous books about the country.

Ching Ping was born to an actively political family in Peking and has drawn from much first-hand knowledge of the country and people in the book.

ANALYZES LIN'S FALL

Heirs Apparent examines the implications of the downfall of former heir-apparent Lin Piao and outlines the power and influence of the semi-autonomous regional military commanders.

It also cites significant precedents to show the possibility of a comeback by the 20 or so top military men, including Chief of Staff Huang Yung-Sheng, who have not appeared in public since Lin's downfall in September, 1971.

But, inevitably, it comes back to the "moderates" of China—Chou, his deputy Li Hsien-nien and their supporters—who stand between the military on one flank and the fading power of the left-wing cultural revolution faction, led by Chiang Ching, on the other.

MOBUTU LOOKS TO REDS

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — President Mobutu Sese Seko is doffing his leopard-skin cap to new friends in the Communist world that once tried to topple him.

In recent months, Mobutu has visited Guinea's Marxist leader, Sekou Toure, restored relations with his old enemies in neighboring Congo-Grazzaville and recognized East Germany, North Korea and North Vietnam.

The climax of the dramatic shift in foreign policy was a 10-day visit to China in January. He formally recognized Peking last year after secret talks in Paris. Taiwan's small mission has been booted out.

At home, he is beating the drums of national unity and pursuing his controversial "authenticity" campaign aimed at eradicating colonial influences such as foreign street names and European dress.

Mobutu is using the campaign in an attempt to forge a sense of national unity in an unwieldy land of many tribes and languages.

FIGHTS WITH CHURCH

A rift with the Roman Catholic Church, which runs most of the schools and claims the religious faith of more than a third of the nation, began early last year when Mobutu banned citizens from using Christian names and ordered everyone to adopt African names instead. Babies, he said, would have to be baptized with African names in future.

The president led the way, switching from Joseph-Desire Mobutu to Mobutu Sese Seko-kuku-Ngbendu-wa-za-Banga, or Mobutu Sese-Seko for short.

This provoked a published attack against the authentic city campaign in the Catholic newspaper Afrique Chretienne, put out by Joseph Cardinal Malula, Archbishop of Kinshasa. He opposed the installation of youth branches of the Popular Movement of the Revolution or MPR, Zaire's only political party, in Catholic schools and seminaries.

An angry Mobutu banned the paper, accused Cardinal Malula of subversion, ordered that he be deprived of his country's highest honor — the Order of the Leopard — and evicted the prelate from his official residence.

The cardinal fled to Rome to consult the Vatican, which eventually decided to bow to Mobutu's policies.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING SELLS THE MOST

$23,000 Buys Haunted House!

Living in Haunted House Is Attractive to Some

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Want to buy a haunted house?

With enough courage and for a mere $23,000 you can become the owner of a stately home in this Fraser Valley community, complete with six bedrooms, three floors, a brand-new roof and, if the stories are to be believed, a very old ghost.

The house is a famous one in Chilliwack. It was once one of the town's stately homes and it hit the headlines back in 1966 when the woman who owned it painted a picture of the ghost which, she claimed, haunted the old place.

She sold the house when she moved to Vancouver Island and now, its up for sale again.

And according to Chilliwack real estate man Harry Chatry, there are dozens of people who want to live in a haunted house.

"I expect to sell the property within the next few days," Chatry said. "Since the house went on the market, I have had dozens of inquiries from people interested in buying.

"It used to be that selling a haunted house was a real estate man's nightmare. But not any more. Today, haunted houses seem to attract more interest than those that are not, judging from the interest that has been shown in the Chilliwack mansion."

The house enjoyed country-wide notoriety in 1966 when Hetty Fredrickson, a tall, willowly blonde with a considerable talent as a painter, announced that she had painted a portrait of the ghost.

People flocked to Chilliwack to see the house and it was several months before the furor about the ghost died down.

Local journalist Frances Pollard recalled those hectic days when the sight-seeing was at its height.

It all began, she said, with a story she wrote and ran in the Chilliwack weekly newspaper.

"But other papers picked the story up and everything seemed to go wild," she said. "Mrs. Fredrickson told me about the painting and I went over to the house to interview her.

"She told me the painting would put Chilliwack on the map. It certainly did that for a while."

Mrs. Pollard said she interviewed Mrs. Fredrickson many times and spent many hours in the old house.

"But in all that time, I never saw anything or heard anything to suggest the place was haunted," she said.

The house was sold when Mrs. Fredrickson moved to Vancouver Island to James Kipp. Now, Kipp has put the house up for sale having lived there for a little more than a year.

The reason is unknown and Kipp was unavailable for comment.

So if living in a haunted house doesn't scare you and if you have a fondness for a large, old house with a turret on one corner and three floors of huge, high-ceilinged rooms, the Chilliwack house is the place for you.

And if you start hearing odd sounds, or seeing strange things after you have bought the place, pick up the telephone and call Chatry.

He doesn't believe in ghosts.

Greek Captain Denies Mutiny

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — The captain of the 557-foot Greek tanker, Michalakis denied Thursday that a mutiny had broken out on his ship, leading to violence and bloodshed.

Capt. Konstantinos Koutsautakis contradicted a report given earlier by the ship's first mate, who was not identified.

Store Best Known For Weighing People

New York Times

LONDON — Berry Bros. and Rudd, a liquor store at 3 St. James's Street here, is one of the oldest establishments of its kind in the world. It goes back at least to 1699. The company originated and still owns Cutty Sark Scotch. Princes, statesmen, poets and American gangsters have been among its customers. And yet, for some reason, the store is best known for its peculiar practice of weighing people.

Not just anybody, of course. tomer. But for several hundred years, being weighed on the huge scale of No. 3, ilke receiving the Order of the British Empire, has signified acceptance and accomplishment to many an Englishman.

Berry Bros. and Rudd was founded as Bourne's Italian Warehouse around the end of the 17th century. William Pickering married the Widow Bourne's daughter in 1703 or 1704 and soon was in charge of the business. At the time it was also known as The Old Coffee Mill and a replica of a coffee mill still hangs above the front door.

The first Berry came to work at No. 3 in 1803 and the managing director today is Anthony A. Berry, his direct descendant.

The low-ceilinged salesroom with its wooden floor, high desks and comfortable old chairs is more club-like than businesslike. The only bottles visible are tucked away in breakfronts and are obviously not for sale.

The room is, in fact, much the same as it was in the 18th century when Frederick, the Duke of York, was a steady customer. Indeed, the old books show that he weighed himself some 50 times on the scale that still dominates the shop.

No one is sure when or how the custom came about of having the establishment's steady clientele weigh themselves on the big scale that, up until about the middle of the last century, was used primarily for weighing sacks of coffee and bales of tea.

Frederick, a son of King George III, last stepped on the scale at No. 3 in 1800, when he weighed a hefty 14 stone 8½, or 204½ pounds. He died 27 years later, deep in debt, which may explain why he is not listed in the company's books in his last years.

Here in London, where wine has become everyman's drink far more rapidly than it has in New York, Berry Brothers, with its elegant Georgian façade and Regency prints on the panelled walls is something of an anachronism.

"Perhaps," said James Anderson, an aide to Anthony Berry, "but the feeling is that there will always be a need for true wine merchants, men who taste wines at lunch every day right here in the boardroom as their fathers and grandfathers did before them, men who visit the vinyards and who offer very personal service to their customers.

Perhaps the most poignant visit to the little shop on St. James's Street was made during the Second World War when wine, like every other commodity on this fortress island, was in pitifully scarce supply.

It was some time after the occupation of France. A French officer entered the shop and asked if there were any of the 1933 Chateau Mouton available.

A clerk was explaining that whatever wine the store had was reserved for old customers, when the late H. Warner Allen, who was working in the shop at the time, recognized the officer: It was Baron Philipe de Rothschild, the owner of Mouton, which was then in the hands of the Germans. Whatever 1933 Mouton could be rounded up was shared with the proprietor-in-exile.

Incidentally, the current wine list at Berry Brothers lists the 1963 Mouton at £13 or around $34 a bottle, up from about $23 just six months ago.

REPORT ON RETREAT

Six local people who attended a week-long conference retreat in Naramata in late February will give a report on the retreat Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Centennial United Church.

Key figure at the retreat, which was organized by the Roman Catholic Church, was Jean Vanier, who runs a school for the retarded in Paris.

Giving the report will be two sisters of St. Ann's, two lay Roman Catholic delegates and three members of First United Church.

Rise and Shine, a group of young singers from First United, will also be there.

Dr. Sam Parsons will be in charge of the event.

Doggie Care

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council's environment committee suggested a new health-care wrinkle Thursday — doggie care.

The committee called on the city to provide free or subsidized spaying of female dogs. The SPCA says the cost of spaying a female dog ranges from $35 to $55.

Examine Problems

VANCOUVER (CP) — An institute for the examination of problems of public policy has been set up at Simon Fraser University.

Known as the Institute of Public Policy Analysis, it will be headed by Dr. John Hogarth, professor of law at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

No Stars for Spanish Cuisine

MADRID (UPI) — Michelin issued its first "red guide" of Spain today awarding no stars to any restaurants—nor to Spanish cuisine.

"There are no doubt very fine Spanish restaurants," said a spokesman for the company that also publishes the more famous guides to European hotels and restaurants. "But Spanish cooking is different. If we awarded any stars, tourists would expect the wrong thing."

In its introduction, the new guide was less diplomatic.

"Spanish cuisine is more copious than refined," the guide said. ". . . Spanish table wines are generally of high alcohol content and very fruity."

Michelin conceded that Spanish food is 'wholesome and tasty", even though it turned up its nose over it being "nearly always cooked in olive oil."

The spokesman said the company hoped Spanish restaurants might some day receive stars under the same system that selects the best cooking in France, Belgium, West Germany, Italy, Switzerland and other countries.

"We are still trying to figure out a system under which Spanish restaurants might be awarded stars, despite the peculiarities of Spanish cooking," the spokesman said. "We may find the solution in a few years."

The guide gave the Ritz the top billing among Madrid hotels and the Puerta de Moros a starless first place among restaurants, with five fork symbols for top luxury.

The Botin, often called the favorite eatery of the late novelist Ernest Hemingway, received a two-fork mention.

Bible Famed Town Chases Tourist Trade

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The two mayors of Nazareth, a town in lower Galilee, were in this town last week, plugging their old home town.

They're getting a lot of tourists, they said, but they want more. And they'd also like more American investment in Nazareth, which they said is a very good place, not only to live in, but to visit.

They figure they had the world's most famous carpenter, and Mary and her son, Jesus, have given the town a certain fame.

Nazareth sounds like quite a place to hear them tell it (and they'll be telling it in one U.S. city or another until mid-April.) The town is loaded with racial and religious harmony, for one thing.

Mayor Seif-El Deen Zuabi, for instance, is an Arab Moslem, and Mayor Mordecal Alon is a Jew. Traveling with them is Antoine H. Shaheen, director of Nazareth's tourist bureau. He is an Arab Roman Catholic.

Alon and Zuabi are socialists, members of the Labor Party (and they have been prominent in Israeli politics for a couple of decades. Alon is mayor of upper Nazareth, the new city, which has about 20,000 residents, and Zuabi is mayor of Nazareth, the old city, which has about 40,000 residents.

The population of the towns break down into approximately 20,000 Jews, 20,000 Arab Moslems and 20,000 Christians, and they get along well, the two mayors said.

"I say that if one wants to see what peace will look like in the future, come to Nazareth," said Alon. "You will see it there."

Israel hopes to make Nazareth a bustling tourist town and seeks large amounts of foreign investment to provide more industry, hotels and other facilities.

The largest plant now is an auto assembly plant. "It is the only place where you find Ford and Dodge under one roof," said Alon.

Nazareth, the town where Jesus grew to manhood, is built in tiers along the inside of an immense natural amphitheater. Women still draw water from Mary's well, moustached patriarchs still wear their flowing robes and many women are clad in long brocade dresses worn over pantaloons. Donkeys, loaded with baskets of fresh fruits and vegetables, eggs and hens, walk nimbly up the steep steps to the old market.

The Church of the Annunciation stands above the grotto where the Angel Gabriel is said to have announced to Mary that she was about to have the world's first virgin birth. Pilgrims from all over the world come to pray at the alter in the grotto below the church.

But, though there is much that is old and historic in Nazareth, there is much that is not. In the old city, the 17-member council has seven communist members. In the new city, the 11-member council contains eight socialists, members of the Labor Party.

There are about 100 factories, most of them small, the mayors said, making textiles, chocolate, plastic and other products.

In this cradle of Christianity there are now, the publicity releases said, two three-star hotels. Also in or nearby the town are a number of places where Christian pilgrims can lodge inexpensively at hospices within easy reach of the holy sites they have come to visit.

Inexpensive it is, Alon and Zuabi declared. "Yes," said Alon, "in Nazareth the tourist can live for six dollars a day for room and board. You should come and see."

TITLE QUITE A MOUTHFUL

WASHINGTON (WP) — What's in a title? Plenty, at the department of housing and urban development, which has just made the following name change for a job: "From private secretary to the executive assistant to the secretary to administrative aide to the executive assistant to the secretary."

Steelworkers Not Bound

TORONTO (CP) — The 150,000 Canadian members of the United Steelworkers Union of America won't be affected by the decision made by United States members to accept binding arbitration in future contract negotiations, a spokesman said Friday.

Information officer Ray Stevenson said the U.S. locals make their own policies and Canadian members aren't committed to follow suit.

Nader Urges Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader's health research group has urged the United States government to order immediate surgical replacement of thousands of implanted cardiac pacemakers. It said a design defect could lead to "abrupt power failure."

"More than 30,000 Americans have heart pacemaking devices which could potentially, without warning, stop working and subject their owners to fainting, shock or even death," the consumer organization said.

Casper Weinberger, secretary of health, education and welfare, was urged in a letter to order Medtronic Inc., of Minneapolis, Minn., to bear the full expense of recalling five models of pacemakers produced before April, 1972.

Earl E. Bakken, president of the firm, said he had not seen a copy of the Nader report, but that they believe their "devices are the most reliable pacemakers available today."

The Nader group said batteries fail in at least three per cent of the models before the normal 24-month replacement, and battery-life indicators fail to operate "in many of these pulse generators."

Edmonton Newspaper Hikes Price

EDMONTON (CP) — The Journal announced Friday it is increasing cost for home delivery of the newspaper to 75 cents a week from 60 cents a week, effective Monday.

The Journal said the cost for a single copy will be 15 cents. The newspaper's 2,500 carriers will receive one-third of the increase.

The paper said the increase is the first in three years and has been prompted by continuing increases in operating costs.

Presto! He's Music Teacher

Pick any musical instrument, learn a few tunes, hang a shingle on your door, and presto — you're a music teacher.

That's all it takes in British Columbia.

If a doctor told you his training consisted of administering band-aids in boy scout camp you probably wouldn't allow him to remove your child's tonsils.

Yet parents continue to send their children to so-called music teachers who qualify themselves with a certificate cut out of the last page of the A to Z novelty accordion course.

Unqualified teachers have destroyed many children's musical interests and are continuing to do so.

Everywhere

"They're everywhere," says Phillip Young, chairman of the University of Victoria's music department, "I'm sure they do incredible damage in some instances."

Austin Scott, public school band teacher and flute teacher at Victoria Conservatory of Music, says unqualified instructors may teach beginners numerous bad technical habits.

"You get to a point where you want to play, you're frustrated, and you can't," he said.

If the child doesn't quit, he or she may go to anothr teacher. The new teacher might spend months untangling the mess made by the first one, said Scott.

"A lot of incompetent teachers get into the act because there is no standardization," he said.

Key: Standard

That's the key word — standard.

In 1960 the government passed the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Act, under which an association was formed.

The objects of the association are to "raise the standard of the profession of music teaching in B.C." and "to promote the interests of music teachers in B.C."

But there is no provision in the act which prohibits nonmembers from teaching.

Jean Nordstrom, president of the Victoria Registered Music Teachers' Association, said, "You have to meet certain minimum requirements before you become a member."

Exam Needed

If a prospective member does not hold a recognized certificate or degree — Associate of the Royal Conservatory of Toronto (ARCT), Licentiate of the Royal Schools of Music (LRSM), or Licentiate of the Trinity College of Music (LTCM) — entrance examinations must be passed.

"There have to be some professional standards," said Nordstrom.

Without some form of standardization "the public doesn't know what it's getting," said Austin Scott, "it's a question of let the buyer beware."

Winifred Wood, Victoria Conservatory of Music registrar, says organizations such as the RMTA act as a "safeguard."

"on the other hand, some teachers with degrees are lousy," said Wood, "Teaching is an art and you don't get it by degrees."

But "lousy" teachers are not accepted at the conservatory or by the RMTA.

More Progress

Children who study at institutions like the conservatory may progress better because they're "mingling with other kids who are doing the same thing," said Wood.

Asked if parents shy away from the conservatory because they feel their child doesn't need qualified instruction or simply because it's too far from home, Wood replied "You don't know how many people are put off by this . . . If we can't take them, we refer them to a qualified teacher."

Of 51 music teachers employed in six downtown music studios, fewer than 10 hold a recognized certificate. However, prices of lessons range from $3 to $4 a half hour.

Lessons at the conservatory, with 65 fully-qualified teachers, begin at the same price. RMTA members, giving private instruction, charge about the same.

But teachers without recognized certificates can be good.

Conscientious

"The fact of the matter is," said Austin Scott, "at least two out of three (downtown studios) that I know, have conscientious teachers."

A teacher may not have a degree to prove his worth, "but you don't know that they're not good either," he said.

Scott agrees teaching is an art.

"It's a question of putting over what you know — not just what you know."

Before sending a beginner to any teacher, that teacher's background should be "thoroughly investigated" — diplomas, experience, teaching success, said Scott.

"There's no standard you can expect. Some of them are really crackpot and you don't know," he said.

Many parents are more concerned with keeping their youngster occupied rather than learning, so the friendly neighborhood music teacher will suffice.

The RMTA refers parents to qualified teachers in their areas, said Jean Nordstrom.

"If you're serious about music, or if it's anything more than a child's game," said Phillip Young, "you have to study with a qualified teacher."

Until some uniform standards are set by law, music teachers' qualifications will be questioned.

Do you know the value of goods you are allowed to bring back to Canada duty-free after an absence of over 48 hours of more than 12 days?

The 10-page bilingual folder I Declare explains exactly what you may and may not do.

And do you know that everyone, even a babe in arms, is entitled to an exemption? Parents of guardians may sign the declaration for such tiny tots and others who are unable to read or write. Just remember, when you calculate an absence of 12 days, don't count the day when you leave Canada.

Send your request to: Information Services, Customs and Excise, Department of National Revenue, Ottawa, Ontario K1A OL5. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

The 24-page Consumer Credit handbook will help you to understand how credit works and what kinds of credit are available to you. It also warns you of certain pitfalls you may encounter if you use credit unwisely.

Among the dangers of buying on credit is over-commitment of payments. In such a case any unexpected reduction of your income, through prolonged illness or unemployment, could spell disaster.

Consumers also tend to forget that credit buying increases the cost of the goods, often very considerably.

To avoid any unexpected problems, the booklet presents a ten point credit guide which you would be wise to consult if you are a potential credit user. You will also find advice on what details to look for in an agreement or contract BEFORE you sign.

The most important part of this booklet is probably the appendix which lists federal and provincial laws regarding consumer credit protection and where relevant inquiries should be directed. This information should be available in every Canadian home.

Send your request to: Information Division, P.O. Box 99, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 009. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

In whichever Canadian city or town you live, you won't be very far from the American border!

The 28-page illustrated Come Visit Us — Nine Driving Tours Through the Eastern United States describes nine fascinating trips by car which will take you as far south as Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. Each tour features special attractions for children.

Although every tour is outlined on a map, the booklet suggests you ask your automobile association or oil company travel bureau for more detailed maps which indicate the route to take. You may also want to consider combining parts of several tours to suit the special interests of your family. In either case you will find this publication very useful.

It points out, for instance, that the United States can boast over 4,000 camping grounds and that Canadians are admitted free into national parks, forests and monuments.

Tourist information offices in every state are also listed.

ONLY DEATH COULD STOP BROTHER TAKING DRUGS

HAMILTON (CP) — A 17-year-old Hamilton girl, who three hours earlier had attended the funeral of an older brother, had some advice for young drug users — STOP.

Michele Lamouroux said she stopped taking drugs a year ago after a bad "trip" but was unsuccessful in convincing her brother, Michael, 21, to stop.

Michael . . . horrible death

He died this week after becoming violently ill at what police describe as a drug party. His body was cremated after a brief service.

"I was into them heavier than he ever was," Michele said about drugs.

"I warned him what could happen. I kept telling him to stop but he didn't listen."

Police say that a number of persons at the party became violently ill, apparently after taking contaminated MDA laced with strychnine.

Michele said she believes the bad trip she had last year also might have been caused by the same thing.

"It was horrible — like someone was tearing your stomach out and wringing it around. After that I stopped. I was so glad I did. I just wish he (her brother) had taken my adivce."

She said she has learned that most persons at the party swallowed drug capsules, but that her brother likely used a hypodermic needle to shoot the drug into his veins.

"It could have gone right into the blood," she said. "The stomach wouldn't have been able to reject it like it did with the others. He must have been burning up. The headaches must have been awful."

Michele . . . quit last year

Embalmed Chicks Tested; May Contain Salmonella

OTTAWA (CP) — Embalmed chicks sold by a Montreal firm as Easter gifts are being tested to determine whether they contain bacteria which might poison children who accidentally eat the chicks.

James W. Black, chief of the consumer and corporate affairs department's hazardous products division, said the chicks may contain salmonella.

"There's suspicion that it might be there but we won't have the final results until Monday."

Black said sample chicks were given to health department pathologists who found "some areas weren't completely mummified by the embalming fluid — they were somewhat soft and fluid."

He said a child could become ill if any parts of the chicks were eaten.

The chicks were first brought to federal government attention by the Montreal social affairs department following tests in six Montreal laboratories.

Montreal suspended for eight days the distribution of 12,000 chicks prepared by Frontenac Versatile Regd. while the tests were being conducted.

The firm was allowed to resume distribution this week because the city does not have jurisidiction over taxidermy and legally cannot prevent the sale of the chicks.

Painted pastel colors or left their original color, the chicks are sold by two Montreal stores for $6.50 a pair.

The birds are killed a day after hatching and then bought by Frontenac Versatile. Male chicks often are killed by chicken farms because they cannot be raised profitably.

Paper Closed

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Morning and evening editions of the opposition Bengali newspaper Ganokanthu did not appear Thursday. The editor, Aly Mahmud, told a news conference the paper did not come out because a new government administrator sealed the press and forced the staff out of the office with police help.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Boutique fashions most reasonably priced . . .

When you think of boutique fashions you think not merely of exclusiveness, but often of pretty fancy prices too . . . Not true though at Bastion Boutique . . . the fancy prices we mean . . . We were enchanted with the distinctive dresses Bastion Boutique designer Bonita showed us this week . . . and downright incredulous when we glanced at the price tags and learned how very reasonable they all are! . . . Bonita herself has designed and made many of the dresses now in stock . . . so it's possible to walk right out of the shop wearing something unique, subtly different and, of course, beautifully made . . . And if, perchance, your size in your choice is not on hand . . . Bonita will make it up for you in jig time . . . We saw some lovely hand-screened English cotton with individual and quite striking designs in the process of being made into charming long and short dresses . . . Ready-made and really lovely are the new dresses Bastion Boutique is now importing from Finland . . . These are polished cottons, printed jerseys, etc. . . . distinguished not only for their fascinating designs but for cleverness of cut . . . A very good selection of these Finnish dresses both long and short . . . in a good range of sizes . . . If you'd like a dress to make you stand out in a crowd, drop in and see the collection at . . . Bastion Boutique, 18 Bastion Square, 384-6421.

In seven years Israel's fashion and textile exports have grown from $41 million to $1[illegible] million.

Ram Shack now in two locations . . .

Well, it certainly proves that people appreciate good quality merchandise at good value . . . the fact that the Ram Shack has not only doubled its own floor space in the past months but also has now taken over another store . . . Garry Andrews Men's Wear in the Hillside Mall! . . . So now you'll be able to get all the smart men's clothing we tell you about at two locations! . . . (You might pass the word along to the males in your family) . . . Among the new things we saw on Monday were Caramy T-shirts in a banlon knit which keeps its shape beautifully . . . They may be had in beige, navy and grey, with contrasting overstitching trim . . . covered buttons closing the front placket . . . And two makes of golf shirts . . . one by Jantzen with placket front, breast pocket and maple leaf emblem . . . white, red, yellow, navy and green cotton and polyester blend . . . and the other by BVD . . . much the same style but with a little dressier collar . . . These latter come in navy and white and brown and white patterned body and white collar and placket front . . . Also plain blue, brown, navy and red . . . All the new spring ties from Abbey, Louis Feraud and Christian Dior are in . . . saw some terrific plaid seersuckers . . . Also "Country Squire" suits for spring . . . and just about the biggest selection of slacks we've ever laid eyes on! . . . Ram Shack, University Hgts. Mall, 477-3314 and Garry Andrews, Hillside Mall, 386-0724.

For summer it's shirts and shirt jackets . . . loose and easy . . . over pants, skirts, bikinis.

Donald Brooks now at Eaton's . . .

For years we've been reading about the beautiful couturier clothes by Donald Brooks of New York . . . but not until the other day did we actually see a Donald Brooks model in the flesh, so to speak . . . It happened in Eaton's Import Room which, this season for the first time ever, has been fortunate enough to acquire a number of this top designer's creations . . . What struck us in all these things was their understated simplicity . . . like the long shirtwaisty gown of cream crepe . . . with flat pleats starting from the yoke and continuing all around . . . buttoned down the front . . . or the short shirtdress of brown and white patterned cotton with high smocked yoke running right over the shoulders and top of sleeves . . . Again the ubiquitous shirtdress in beige crepe with pleats in front of the skirt and on the bodice . . . A very elegant dress indeed! . . . A 3-piece summer pantsuit has blue-linen pants, a flowered long-sleeved blouse and short sleeveless jacket banded with the blue linen . . . Another casual pantsuit has pink and white candy striped seersucker pants and halter top, and a loose pink duck jacket lined with matching seersucker . . . Also saw a red and white gingham long skirt . . . bias-cut and very full, with black patent belt and white angora halter top . . . These Donald Brooks things are very exclusive indeed . . . sold, we're told, by only the very best shops in the world! . . . See them at . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141, local 242.

Look for blouson dresses and blouson jackets with shirring, drawstring or elasticized waists.

Souffles are great Lenten dishes . . .

One good thing about Lent, it enables you to cut down on meat dishes without feeling guilty . . . and with meat prices what they are . . . you can be thrifty and righteous all at the same time! . . . Indeed you might even use this Lenten season as an excuse to experiment with new dishes you've never tried before . . . You'll find there are lots of things you can use instead of meat and still keep the family happy! . . . Delicate souffles are a case in point . . . and to ensure their success, there's a fine selection of souffle dishes of all sizes at the Wooden Spoon . . . One 2-qt. dish, ideal for the average family, is dark brown with fluted sides . . . Then there is the F. G. Green English stoneware which comes in a complete range, and includes souffle dishes in three sizes . . . It's two-toned brown and beige . . . and you just know anything cooked in it is going to be delicious! . . . Same stoneware souffle dishes may be had in a dark brown, half glazed, the other half unglazed . . . This fine stoneware is new to the Wooden Spoon, who order it directly from the factory in England, and carry it exclusively . . . We spied a fabulous little cook book called "Souffle Spectacular" which contains recipes for all sorts of main dishes and desserts . . . Don't see how anyone could fail, armed with this cook book and a souffle dish or two from . . . The Wooden Spoon, Midtown Mall, 726A View St., 384-8823.

Pedal pushers are another revival for summer '73.

Glamour in the bedroom . . .

We've noticed that most women have pretty definite ideas about what they like to sleep in . . . Some wouldn't be caught dead in anything but a long gown . . . Others opt for short nighties . . . Still others swear by pajamas . . . And then there are those who sleep in the buff . . . which seems a pity when there's all that downright glamorous night attire to be had at Saba's! . . . Some new nightwear just arrived is by Classic . . . a silky blend of cotton and polyester, so soft and easy to keep fresh and pretty . . . For pajama lovers there's a really feminine p.j. with short sleeves, round neckline, embroidered yoke and little covered buttons . . . plus a pocket to tuck your hankie in . . . Mint green, maize and a delicate shade of pink . . . $15 . . . Same colors in a dainty short gown tagged at $11 . . . A lovely long negligee set caught our eye . . . The cotton and polyester blend looks like old fashioned dimity, but it's actually completely drip dry . . . Bodices of both gown and negligee are white eyelet embroidery over the fabric which comes in shades of lilac and sunburst yellow . . . Sleeveless gown has low V neckline with drawstring at the high waist . . . Same line followed in the negligee with ¾ length eyelet sleeves . . . Nighttime glamour aplenty in this delightful set which costs only $30 at . . . Saba's 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

Lace-trimmed knickers, belonging to a 1920 "flapper" girl, have been donated to an English museum.

Say "hello" to Spring in a Wilson coat . . .

Perhaps the most important item in any well-planned wardrobe is a handsome topcoat . . . judiciously chosen to complement your dresses . . . give you that elegant costume look . . . Or again, a more casual model to pop over your suit when it's not quite warm enough for the latter alone . . . the kind of multi-purpose coat which will see you through just about anything . . . anytime, anywhere . . . Wilson's have as fine a collection of spring coats as you're likely to find in a month of Sundays . . . and still more coming in! . . . This week we saw a gorgeous tweed in tones of hot pink, green, gold and white . . . Buttoning to the neck in front, half-belted in back . . . Another in the same style is pale pink, grey and charcoal tweed . . . Either of these beauties is bound to win compliments for its eventual lucky owner! . . . You'll find plenty of camel-hair coats this season . . . and what could possibly be more versatile? . . . as well as dreamy pure cashmeres, llamas . . . and mohairs in sunny colors, so light and airy they look as if they might float away . . . solid colours too . . . Smooth-textured wools in bright reds, greens and yellows . . . as well as navy, black and various neutral shades . . . The knit coats are smart, comfortable and easy to wear . . . Styles include fitted coats, wraparounds and loose tailored models . . . Many imports as well as finely-tailored Canadian coats . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

The smart bride registers with Eaton's . . .

We don't want to be crass about it, but the fact remains that every bride knows she is going to receive wedding gifts of one kind or another . . . and this being the case, she's missing a really good bet is she doesn't register with Eaton's . . . The thing about Eaton's Bridal Gift Registry which makes it different from others . . . it's all-inclusive . . . Takes in everything a couple could possibly want from silver to china to crystal to linens to electric appliances to furniture . . . with many gradations in between . . . This means a gal can select and register her preferences in all these categories, and by the simple expedient of letting it be known to family and friends that she's registered with Eaton's, be sure of getting gifts that fit in with her tastes and the decor of her future home . . . as well as avoiding duplication . . . thus saving herself the trouble of exchanging same . . . and maybe bruising the donor's feelings! . . . Family and friends will appreciate this too, because a quick consultation with the Gift Registry will make selection easy in any price range they have in mind, and they'll know for sure that their gifts will please . . . If you're getting married soon, register with Eaton's . . . And be sure to fill in a coupon to receive your free Bridal Shower Gift Pack . . . Eaton's Gift Registry, 382-7141, local 373.

Exotic Animals Turn Up In the Darndest Places

CHICAGO (NYT) — An eight-foot python emerged from under a car in downtown Peoria, Ill., recently, then went into the basement of a post office, creating panic among the postal workers.

The snake, no native of Central Illinois was just seeking some warmth. But its plight illustrated a growing phenomenon across the United States, including British Columbia. Exotic animals and reptiles are turning up loose in society either as escapees or as pets abandoned by disenchanted owners unequal to providing the special care they require.

The result is some bizarre circumstances that carry a potential for serious injury to passersby, to some regions' ecological systems and to the creatures themselves.

But in recent years, experts say, affluent North Americans have acquired a record number of exotic animals like ocelots, margays, monkeys, wallabies, hermit crabs, lions, land snails, gorillas, boa constrictors, raccoons, crickets, llamas and piranah fish.

This development has paralleled increased national interest in ecology. And springtime, when many of these animals are born, is the most popular time to buy.

"There's no question that the problem of exotic pets is growing, especially in places like New York City, where so many people are concerned with 'trendy things,'" said Edward Ricciuti, a writer on animals formerly with the New York Zoological Society.

In New York, one of an increasing number of cities where exotic pets are now illegal, officials reported that 162 people were bitten last year by such pets as ocelots, monkeys, lions, baboons and wolves. Health Commissioner Joseph A. Cimino estimated that the reported total was one-fifth the actual number.

Last year, his men seized 30 such animals and captured several scorpions left behind in vacant apartments. They also subdued a 50-pound chimpanzee when it turned on its owner and recovered eight deadly snakes — six South African vipers and two Indian cobras — from a parked car.

"You've got a lot of crazy people in this town," said Stuart Salenger, a 24-year-old man who worked his way through Columbia selling unusual animals. "They will buy anything. I've got a guy upstate who wants to buy a camel," said Salenger. "I've got orders for zebras and giraffes, and I just sold two bison to a man in Rye, N.Y.

"Raccoons are a very big item these days, and so are foxes, skunks, humming birds and timber wolves. I had a wolf myself until he ate my parrott."

Salenger said that he was very careful to screen his customers, would not sell illegal animals in the city and required each customer to study animal care before a sale.

"It's not a problem with the animals," said Mrs. Vaynor McNeill, president of the Washington Humane Society. "It's a problem with the people. The pet shops don't educate the new owners, and it's an awful business trying to find a place for an unwanted unusual animal."

The 15-Year-Old Knockout Should be in Bridal Party

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and am planning my wedding. I want sorority sisters and cousins about my age in my wedding party as I have no sisters. My fiance has one sister, 15, and she is my problem. I hardly know her because she lives far away, but I have seen her and she is a raving beauty. Please don't think I am a terrible person, but every bride wants to be the star of her own wedding, and if this 15-year-old knockout is in the wedding party, she will make me look like a dog.

I can't begin to describe this girl's beauty. She has a beautiful figure, long blonde hair, and big blue eyes. She does some professional fashion modeling. When she walks down the street, heads turn.

I could use the excuse that she's too young, but she doesn't look young. I want to do the right thing, but I don't want to spoil my own wedding by inviting this kind of competition. Please help me decide. — Jealous.

DEAR JEALOUS: No matter how beautiful others in the wedding party are, the bride's glow of happiness comes shinning through, giving her a radiance no professional model can match. Remember this, then make a decision you can live with.

DEAR ABBY: Between you and me, the people who write you are either morons, or they're just plain stupid. — Harry.

DEAR HARRY: Which are YOU?

DEAR ABBY: My husband of four years has just announced he plans to attend his first wife's funeral. (She is nearing the end of a terminal illness.)

My husband divorced this woman to marry me. So far I have been too stunned to talk about it, but I would like to know what you think of the idea, and what I should do if he expects me to attend? — Second Time Around.

DEAR SECOND: I think the fact that he plans to attend her funeral is to his credit. Since he divorced her to marry you, he probably will not expect you to attend. But if he does, if you think your presence there will compound the sorrow for her family and friends, stay home.

DEAR ABBY: Our family likes to get together once a year for a reunion.

Since I'm the one with the largest house, I always have it at my place. This year a nephew called and asked if he could bring his wife's parents and also some of her other relatives. They live right in town. I said I was sorry but this is a family reunion and those people are strangers to me. I also considered how out of hand it could get if everybody started including their relatives by marriage.

Well, this nephew said, "Gee, what am I going to do? I already invited them."

I told him he could make me the heavy. To simply tell them that he invited them before clearing it with me, and I said no.

The day of the reunion this nephew and his wife called and cancelled out.

Don't you think this nephew was cut of line? Or was I wrong? — Auntie.

DEAR AUNTIE: He was out of line — and you were not wrong.

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: Well said, but let's hear it from another animal lover:

DEAR ABBY: Those meat eaters who throw a fit about harvesting wildlie have got to be some of the biggest hypocrites of all time.

Just where do they think beef, pork and mutton come from? Anybody who's raised a 4-H calf, or nursed along a runt pig or an orphan lamb knows that these animals are every bit as lovable as the majestic buck or graceful doe.

How much kinder is death from a hit on the head with a sledge hammer than from a bullet? All meat eaters are guilty.

In case you're wondering — yes, I eat meat. And no, I don't hunt. And yes, I love animals (present population, one dog, four cats, six horses, and one pig).—Mrs. K.

BUSY LINE-BUSY SEARCH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Because his family telephone was ringing busy when he called his Gabriola Island home at 11 p.m., salmon fisherman Ron Williams didn't try again.

And that busy line started off a chain of events that involved hundreds of men in an air-sea search of Georgia Strait for Williams and his 32-foot boat.

At 11:30 p.m. Wednesday — as earlier arranged — when Mrs. Williams received no word from her husband that he had tied up safely at Steveston she phoned the rescue co-ordination centre in Victoria to report him missing.

Police made a thorough search of fishing vessels tied up at Steveston but couldn't find the boat.

At first light Thursday the search got under way with two Labrador helicopters, a Buffalo aircraft, the coast guard hovercraft and the cutters, Rider and Racer.

While the search was going full blast Williams was tracked down at his mother's home in New Westminster.

"I was calling from a pay phone and got a busy signal. I got fed up and didn't bother trying again."

By mid-afternoon Thursday someone called RCMP at Richmond to say he had had a beer with Williams late Wednesday and his boat was tied up.

RCMP said they made another search of fishing vessels at Steveston and this time found the white boat with blue trim. Previously they'd been looking for a white boat with orange trim.

A search and rescue spokesman said the search probably cost somewhere in the region of $30,000.

Laos Village Burns Its Link to Heroin

New York Times

BAN NA KONG, Laos — Tribal women wearing their best silver jewelry stood in rigid formation, American and Laotian flags fluttered bravely, and a village headman put the torch to a huge pile of dried poppies representing about 356 pounds of raw opium.

The new village of Ban Na Kong had officially come into being, and in so doing, theoretically deprived the world opium, morphine and heroin markets of one more source of supply.

United States efforts to stop the flow of heroin into America, initially aimed exclusively at catching smugglers, are increasingly directed at halting production at the source.

Whether a campaign to curb production can succeed is the question American narcotics specialists hope will be answered in part by the experimental program begun here.

The Ban Na Kong pilot project, accordingly, has had the attention of American experts in social welfare, agriculture, community development, public health and narcotics control, among others.

RIP FORESTS

American bulldozers in the last few months have ripped virgin forest from about 500 acres of land here to allow for rice-growing, and other American projects will include the building of schools and dispensaries, and the provision of almost every kind of economic assistance.

Since it is almost impossible to force Laotian tribesmen to abandon the cultivation of poppies, the idea here is to persuade them to do so, offering every kind of material incentive.

One of the richest sources in the world of the opium from which heroin is manufactured is the area encompassing this settlement — the so-called Golden Triangle, where the borders of Laos, Burma and Thailand meet.

The Yao tribesmen living here are typical of the region. Of 98 families in the community, only three were not engaged in poppy production before the Americans moved in.

Poppy-growing is hard but remunerative work. A kilogram of raw opium — a little over two pounds — brings about $50 here. It brings twice that in Vientiane. Processed into heroin and shipped to the United States market, the product increases in value astronomically.

On Aug. 10, 1971, Laos promulgated a law prohibiting the cultivation, consumption, sale or possession of any opium product, and, during a transitional period, offered to buy up remaining opium stocks for about $26 a kilogram. Needless to say, there have been no sales at that price by the tribesmen.

American experts hope to convince the tribesmen that it will be more profitable in the long run to move down out of the high hills (and hence, from the high, cool slopes where poppies can be grown) to cleared valleys suitable for the cultivation of rice, tobacco and sesame seeds.

So far, Ban Na Kong is the only village of its kind in Laos (the name made up for the community means "straight rice paddy village" — implying no more poppies). Hundreds of other settlements still grow poppies as they have since the dawn of history, and most, unlike Ban Na Kong, are not accessible to the outer world, except by clandestine opium caravan.

"The Yaos and Meos are among the best businessmen in the world," a Laotian official said, speaking of the two tribes in the region.

"They will co-operate with the Americans up to a point, just so long as the Americans go on pouring in gold, and not one minute longer. It will be interesting to see how long Washington will be willing to pay the Yao and Meo price."

Power Shift Debated

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

AMSTERDAM — An oil consultant's warning of a frightening shift in power to Middle East nations touched off a lively debate at a meeting here this week of trans-Atlantic notables.

Walter J. Levy, an adviser to oil companies, told the Europe-American conference that the fast growing energy needs of rich nations will produce "tremendous and lopsided shifts in the balance of power of a potentially explosive character."

In the 1980s, Levy forecast, the United States, Western Europe and Japan will be forced to rely heavily on oil from Arab states and Iran. These nations, in turn, he argued, will have so many billions of dollars flowing in that they could cut off supplies to achieve their aims or at least threaten the stability of any monetary system.

The view of Levy, whose New York office is in the headquarters of Jersey Standard, was sharply disputed by former government officials engaged in energy policies. Key oil industry men, however, made clear their eagerness to get rid of the new ecological restraints on the business and gave Levy's argument guarded support.

Major oil companies are well represented at this meeting and the leading report posed a dilemma. As one important figure put it, "we want to hot it up at home but keep it cool abroad."

By that, he meant that the industry is anxious to stress the energy "prices" in the United States to gain support for higher prices, removal of environmental curbs and the safeguard of tax advantages. Abroad, however, it does not want to appear threatening towards Middle East governments lest they take away the enormously profitable concessions the companies still control.

Perhaps the world's single most important oil executive is Emilio Collado, executive vice president of Jersey, Now called Exxon. Collado said that over the course of the century, nuclear power, oil from tar sands, oil from shale and the liquification of coal would all ensure that the world had enough energy for its growing demand. But he foresaw a serious short run probable, between 1980 and 1985.

He complained that consuming nations had "wasted" the last five years by imposing "man-made restrictions" on supply, a reference to the ecological curbs on refineries and other oil interests.

Collado also supported Levy's monetary concern, explaining later that smaller oil kingdoms like Abu Dhabi especially would be receiving oil revenues far beyond their capacity to invest at home. One of Collado's subordinates, vice president of Jersey, now of Imperial Oil, a Jersey subsidiary in Canada, differed only in detail with his boss. Oil and gas will be more costly, he said, and the rich world must depend on the Middle East for the next 10 or 20 years.

Like almost everyone else, Ritchie favored "consultation" among oil consuming governments but he would not endorse Levy's "drastic" proposals.

The Levy arithmetic went like this: By 1980, the Atlantic nations and Japan will import 41 million barrels daily compared to 23 million last year. The Middle East will supply most of this, 35 to 40 million barrels. Its oil revenues will reach about 40 billion dollars a year against 9 billion in 1972. The great international oil companies who have run one of the world's most famous cartels will, according to Levy, be reduced to "junior partners," compelled to yield to Middle East demands on price and all other oil matters.

The only way to redress the balance, he argued, is by close coordination among oil consuming governments. He specifically urged them to collaborate on "incentives;" to find new energy sources; to map emergency plans to stockpile, ration, share imports and provide financial aid in case of a Middle East shutdown and the elaboration of schemes to cut off Middle East nations from food, industrial goods and arms as a countervailing bargaining weapon.

The sharpest attack on Levy's thesis came from Philip Tresize, former U.S. assistant secretary of state for economic affairs. He decried Levy's attempt to "mesmerize" with large numbers. If, for example, Saudi Arabia is earning 20 billion dollars by 1980, Tresize said, that would still add only 3,000 dollars per person to the country's low standard of living. In sum, Tresize contended that Middle East nations will have no trouble findingd omestic outlets for their enlarged wealth.

Arctic Dog Teams Back in Harness

EDMONTON (CP) — Eskimo hunters in the Arctic community of Grise Fiord are considering abandoning their snowmobiles and once again harnessing up dog teams.

Snowmobiles, which provide hunters with a quick means of crossing the Arctic wastelands, have within the last few years had almost as much effect on the Eskimo's way of life as did the introduction of guns.

Now, the noisy tracked vehicles are used almost everywhere and dog teams are rare.

Those considering rejecting the snowmobile are not simrevitalize their cultural heritage by returning to the old ways.

They are looking at economic realities.

It can cost Eskimos $900 a year to operate a snowmobile, compared with $12 for a dog team.

"Since they adopted snowmobiles in the late 1960s, their ply responding to a desire to hunting costs have soared in relationship to their revenues," says Rick Riewie, a zoologist who lived for 14 months at Grise Fiord, on the south coast of Ellesmere Island in the High Arctic.

HUNTERS' COSTS RISE

Dr. Riewie, now a teacher at the University of Manitoba, says the total costs of the Eskimo hunter there climbed to $1,846 during 1970-71 from $572 in 1967 when dog teams were used.

Eskimos normally have to use snowmobiles so intensively the machines need to be replaced every two years. Annual costs break down to $400 for gasoline, $250 for repairs and $300 in depreciation.

Dr. Riewie said the $12 cost to operate a dog team goes for rings, snaps and other harness. The Eskimos breed their own dogs and feed them on waste meat.

Revenue from the sale of pelts almost covered the hunter's total costs during the presnomobile days, Dr. Riewie said. Even if the hunter did not quite break even, he was still a success because the meat he obtained fed his family and others for the year.

Now, however, despite inflation and a slightly greater catch, his revenues are only about half his total costs.

WORKED AS JANITORS

"To help cover these higher costs, some of the hunters had to take employment in the village on government makework projects like taking out the garbage from 16 homes, acting as janitors for the school teacher or moving the garbage pile," Dr. Riewie said.

He said the snowmobile at Grise Fiord is an example of how southern technology and culture can be detrimental to the northern people in an economic sense.

If they could afford it, Eskimos would almost always choose the snowmobile over dog teams. The old ways, though cheaper, made for an incredible hard life, most say.

But Dr. Riewie says the new technology of the snowmobile is apparently not suited to a frigid wasteland like the Eastern Arctic where the 16 hunters of Grise Fiord must search 100,000 square miles and go on hunting trips of 1,000 miles to feed the 96 people of that village.

A study made on Banks Island concluded the snowmobile was economical for hunting in areas of heavier concentration of wildlife, particularly when rapid inspection of trap lines prevented the loss of pelts, said Dr. Riewie.

"But at Grise Fiord, some of the hunters are saying that the snowmobile is no friend of the Eskimo. When it breaks down you can't eat it or sleep with it like you can with dogs.

"They also find dogs offer them company on a long trip."

Grise Fiord still has lots of sled dogs because the first snowmobile did not arrive until 1967 and it was 1970 before everyone started to use them.

"They can turn back to using dog teams if they want to and can quickly breed more dogs," Dr. Riewie said.

"In other communities, the dog team has been set aside for a much longer period and the cost of buying new dogs will be extremely high."

Judges Get Raise

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario government has raised salaries of provincial judges by up to $4,000 a year.

The increases were reported in the Ontario Gazette.

The chief judge of provincial courts has a new salary range of $27,850 to $31,500 compared with the old scale of $24,000 to $27,000.

A senior provincial judge has a new scale of $26,250 to $29,500 an increase of $3,750 to $4,000 over the previous range.

A provincial judge with less than five years experience receives a pay boost of up to $3,600 with the top salary in that bracket pegged at $24,650.

AIRLINES ACCUSED OF FARE KICKBACKS

TORONTO (CP) — Many airlines are reported offering travel agents "kickbacks" of between $5 and $35 for every passenger they book on the airlines under Canada's new charter flight regulations.

John Stafford, president of the Central Canada Chapter of the American Society of Travel Agents, said Thursday: "It's common knowledge in the trade that if you shop around certain airlines are offering inducements and incentives over and above the regular commssion to agents to push their particular line."

The standard commission for travel agents is 10 per cent of the fare paid by an air passenger.

Major airlines entered the charter business, previously confined mainly to smaller lines, when new federal regulations came into effect last January.

Under the Advanced Booktions, anyone may travel on a charter by booking their flight 90 days in advance and making a non-refundable deposit of 25 per cent of the fare.

RULES CHANGED

The new regulation eliminated previous requirements limiting charter flights to members of groups or organizations.

With many more plane seats available for charter, particularly on the Atlantic route, the airlines are forced to compete for passengers.

Henry Moos, president of Kennedy Travel Bureau Ltd., defended the "kickbacks" or bonuses.

"It's nobody's business what we (the agents) as retailers pay for our merchandise. The only thing that concerns the customer is what he pays and whether the price is right for him."

Dennis Gill, president of Sun Tours Ltd., said incentives were standard practice between major airlines and large travel agents.

A spokesman for the Canadian transport commission said airlines offering kickbacks run the risk of having a flight or series of flights cancelled by the commission's air transport committee.

Flowering Quince Has Tasty Fruit

GARDENING
jack beastall

The Flowering Quince has been with us so long no authority seems willing to guess when it was first introduced to northern gardens.

It is a close relative of the true quince, a small, much branched tree from Persia and Turkestan, cultivated in Europe for its edible fruits, and for its rootstock to which pears are often grafted.

This relationship, plus its popularity with generations of gardeners, has provided the flowering quince with several names. Also, it has been reclassified botanically, a necessary procedure in the light of increased knowledge, but somewhat confusing to the gardener who grows mainly for pleasure.

The common quince of Europe was originally considered a species of pear, and named Pyrus cydonia. Later it was changed to a genus of its own, Cydonia, in which it remains today.

Both these names were incorrectly applied to the flowering quince which came to us from China as Cydonia cathayensis (Cathay, the old name for China) but was later transferred to Chaenomeles (shy-nom-el-ees), the name under which it is listed in catalogs.

Later a very good form was discovered in Japan, and was introduced under the name of Cydonia japonica, literally the Japanese Cydonia. This is the plant which became so popular in English gardens and acquired the common name of Japonica.

Japonica means "of Japan". Gardeners in general are reluctant to discard this incongruous name. To many it is annoying to hear someone talk at length on their beautiful "Of-Japan".

Fruits of the flowering quince vary considerably in size. The Chinese species range from one-and-a-half inches in diameter, while the Japanese selections are as large, or larger than top grade apples.

Unlike its close relative, the apple, flowering quince fruits are not attached to the branches by long stems. Botanically the fruits are sessible (clasping), growing like a bump on a log, the larger fruits often extending part way around the branch as they increase in size.

This clasping of the branch prevents the fruits from falling when maturity is reached, as is common with pears and apples, therefore the fruits are often left too long and spoiled by severe early frosts.

The addition of flowering quince fruits will lift apple jelly from mediocre to supreme, give a piquant flavor to apple pies and sauces, and provide a form of Quince jelly.

Just as enjoyable is the excellent flower display these plants provide in the garden, as winter retreats and the equinox heralds Spring. Rarely do we see this display exploited to the full in home gardens as it was when the shrub plantings were first made at the Hydro Building on Pandora Avenue.

In that planting the flowering quince was used as a color feature while the magnolias were small, resulting in an unprecedented demand by home gardeners for good flowering selections.

Most of the plants purchased by gardeners at that time are still flourishing, but their flowers display passes unnoticed because pruning has been neglected.

The flowering quince, unlike most of its relatives in the Rose Family, bears flowers on wood that is three to four years old. The flowers are always low down on the old growths, often completely covered by vigorous young shoots.

The illustration attempts to make this clear. It depicts only one stem of a beautiful named variety with clusters of two-inch flowers massed on the old stems and a confusion of long whippy growths made last season.

This shrub has been pruned every year, the cuts made in the past being evident if you follow the old stem from the ground up.

Actually, the long growths shown in the drawing were removed in late February as soon as the flower buds could be seen, cutting back to about four to seven inches from their point of origin on the old stems.

The straight shoot from soil level to the top of the drawing is a new growth made a year ago. This, and others like it, are cut back to about 18 inches above soil level to encourage branching, and will later be used to replace very old growths that are past flowering.

By doing this each February, the flowering portions are in full view, and a good display for the following season is assured because light and air can reach the older portions of the shrub.

An overgrown specimen should not be severely pruned in one season. The work is beter spread over two to three years starting with the reduction in length of last season's young shoots.

Next February, when the flower buds can be seen, open up the base by removing some growths that are low down and again shortening all the previous season's growths. Continue each year until the flowering portions are clearly visible, always reducing all the young shoots regardless of whether old growths need removing.

The insert in this week's drawing is a shoot from an Aldenham Purple crabapple with a band of tent caterpillar eggs attached.

These bands can be broken apart and removed with the thumb nail, which is the safest way of controlling this pest. It is not necessary to burn the eggs because any larvae that come from them cannot survive without the succulent young leaves of the host plant.

When a web appears on a shoot, rip it open with a long stick and expose the larvae to the elements and the birds. Frost, sunshine or rain will eliminate them almost immediately.

Before killing a mature tent caterpillar, look for a white spot on the head. This is the egg of the predator that kept the caterpillar population under control. Do not kill these as they are already doomed.

WORK FOR THE WEEK

Prune the bush roses if not already done.

Prune the hydrangeas which flower in summer on this year's growth — Hydrangea arborescens and H. paniculata grandiflora, H. serrata. Also the late summer buddleias, the hypericums, and hardy fuchsias.

Nip off flower heads from daffodils or other narcissi which have bloomed, to prevent seed formation. Allow leaves to mature naturally. Treat hyacinths and tulips in the same way.

If evergreen shrubs must be moved for space reasons, do this now with large rootballs. Remember to water well, and spray foliage with water if weather is dry.

Sow seeds of dwarf dahlias indoors. Prick out into separate pots or plant bands to grow for balcony tubs or planters.

Bulbs in pots finished blooming, turn out to finish growing in border.

Sow onions and leeks in cool greenhouse or covered coldframe for transplanting to garden later.

Mustard and cress as a quick indoor salad sowing will fill in for many meals until lettuce are ready from coldframe.

$ Drop Nips West Aussies

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Devaluation of the United States dollar casts a long shadow: in Australia it spurs talk of secession.

The seceding area would be Western Australia, one-third of this continent. The state has a million people and millions of dollars worth of iron ore, nickel and other minerals, as well as a fair-sized farming and industrial economy.

Talk of secession has been cropping up every decade or so for a half-century. The people feel to some extent cut off from fellow citizens in the east, 2,000 miles across the desert plains.

Many think they often get a raw deal because the easterners outnumber them 12 to 1.

In a 1933 referendum, the people voted 2 to 1 in favor of going it alone. A deputation went to London and presented a petition on secession to Parliament. A select commission appointed to consider the petition decided it was "not proper to be received." The matter lapsed.

Now, the U.S. dollar is worth 70 Australian cents compared with 90 cents in 1971. Most of Western Australia's iron ore contracts are written in U.S. dollars.

Heading the current movement, 70-year-old Tom Indeman has set up the WA Secession Steering Committee. He says it includes 50 men in the 27-35 age group.

Iron Ore king Lang Hancock has lost millions in the change in the Australian value of U.S. currency. He is strongly in favor of "an independent government in Western Australia."

Referring to the failure of the petition nearly 40 years ago, he said that today "it only needs a strong leader for Western Australia to follow Rhodesia's example and make a unilateral declaration of independence."

He said an independent "Westralia" could value its dollar the same as the U.S. dollar, put up tariff walls against the other states, and make a most favored nation treaty with Japan to supply goods.

BUICK BOOSTS PRICE OF OPEL BY $247

FLINT, Mich. (UPI) — The price of General Motor's Buick motor division's West German imported Opel is going up an average $247 per model, to reflect the recent change in the value of the dollar.

Buick announced the 8.7 per cent increase Friday. The freeze on 1973 car prices by its parent company, General Motors, does not affect the Opel, as it applies to only domestic-built models.

Athe same time, Buick disclosed that its soon-to-be introduced compact Apollo models will carry suggested retail prices of $2,604 for the two-door coupe, and a $2,627 price sticker on its four-door sedan.

A two-door Apollo hatchback coupe model will go for $2,753, Buick said, and they will include the standard six-cylinder engine and three-speed manual transmission placed in all the new compact models. They go on sale April 12.

Obstruction Trial Set

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Two men have been remanded to May 24 for trial after entering not guilty pleas Thursday on charges of obstructing a police officer on the Quadra Island ferry slip March 21.

Melvin Bland, a truck driver, and Edward Longland, a partner in the firm which owns the logging truck, were charged after they refused to move their logging truck from the Quathiaski Cove ferry ramp.

Scientists Seek To Exhume Couple

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scientists at the Argonne National Laboratory sought Thursday to exhume the remains of a doctor and his wife who lived into their 80s despite having injected themselves with radium over a period of 38 years.

The doctor, Findley Dayton John and his wife, Josephine, began injecting themselves in 1922, according to Dr. Andrew Stehney, of Argonne's Centre for Human Radiobiology.

"Dr. John wrote that he believed the injections would increase a person's longevity," Stehney said.

"Our position, however, is that the radium injections actually reduced his life span, even though he and his wife lived to a ripe old age."

John was 88 when he died in 1960. His wife died in 1968. At 82.

CATHOLIC?

Our Lady of Mt. Carmel would have you hold in your hands Her Rosary, for She knows it to be a sure means of salvation. The devil would have you hold in your hands the Blessed Sacrament, for he knows well that only the priest's hands are consecrated for this great privilege. Our Lady would have you kneel to receive the Blessed Sacrament, for She is continually beseeching for more respect, honor and devotion to be given to the Holy Eucharist. The devil tries desperately to prevent you from reaching the conclusion that it is a simple matter to change the "standing station" into a "kneeling station". Our Lady would have you offer prayer and acts of penance for the benefit of priests and bishops, for She states as a fact, that many are going into "eternal perdition" and taking many poor souls with them. The devil would fill your hearts with feelings of animosity, for he knows only too well, that offerings of prayer and penance, and only prayer and penance can make available the "grace" necessary for the return of the "prodigal son", be he of the "religious" or the laity. — Our Lady needs your help, and to join Her Cause you need only the Rosary, the Brown Scapular, and the desire to work for the Intentions of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel for the Greater Glory of God.

EDNA VINCENT

PAULINE DICKINSON

Ex-Bishop Lobs Theological Bombs

Washington Post

RICHMOND, Va. — A former Anglican bishop who hit the best seller list 10 years ago with a book that sought to scrape the pietistic barnacles off modern man's concept of God, is currently performing the same kind of radical surgery on the image of Christ.

In a three-part lecture series by Rev. Dr. John A. T. Robinson, Jesus emerged as "a genuine human being who in his lifetime exhibited — and overcame — racial prejudice, probably had his share of sexual hang-ups and may not have known who his father was.

Far from the image of the perfection found in much Sunday school literature, said Robinson, "Jesus was not the average level - headed man that parents would welcome for a son-in-law."

On the contrary, he was by the standards of his day "a lawbreaker, an outcast, a sinner," Robinson pointed out.

If the audience at the Southern Baptist-Related University of Richmond where Robinson spoke was distressed by the speaker's observations, few gave any sign of it.

Most of his hearers, which included a heavy contingent of Richmond clergy of various denominations, seemed bent on preserving in their tape recorders and notebooks the thoughts of the world-famed visitor.

Robinson, now dean of the chapel at Cambridge University's Trinity College, was plummeted to world renown 10 years ago by a 141-page paperback, Honest to God.

The Anglican bishop of Woolwich at the time — he has since resigned to return to the academic life — he wrote the work in an effort to chop away out-dated language and concepts of God and stimulate a more contemporary approach to him.

His forthcoming book, on which the lectures here were based, has a similar objective. Titled The Human Face of God, Robinson holds that Christ offers "the clue to, though not the exclusive embodiment of, God ... the Christ is God with a human face."

While asserting that Christ is both "truly God and truly man," Robinson put greater stress in his lectures here on the humanity of Jesus.

In the process, he lobbed a few theological grenades into the doctrinal underbrush that has long been a sanctuary, particularly for conservative Christians:

Saying the doctrine of the virgin birth of Jesus as merely "one possibility" of Jesus' origin, he declared: "If the virgin birth story threws doubts on the humanity of Jesus, then it is very much better that you should not believe it."

An era that is "post-Marx, post-Freud and post the cracking of the genetic code" requires different understandings from that of previous generations, he insisted.

"To be a man is to be a member of a species with all the prehistory of that species in our genes," he said. If Jesus is to be seen as a human being, "he must be a product of that species and not just a cuckoo inserted in the human nest."

"But what does it mean to say Jesus was human like us?" Asked a troubled student at the Southern Baptist University. "To be like me is to be a sinner ... immoral ... with all these sexual fantasies."

Robinson nodded sympathetically but stuck to his thesis. If Jesus is to be understood as fully human, "we've got to assume that he did not suffer from arrested development," he said adding that to assume Jesus was sexless "is today about the best way of saying he wasn't fully a man."

To be sure, he went on, there can be no definitive answer to questions such as this one, since the gospels are not biographical but present selected aspects of Jesus' life and work.

"He was remembered as a supremely good man, but there is nothing in the gospels to suggest the kind of goodness that Christian pietists have ascribed to him."

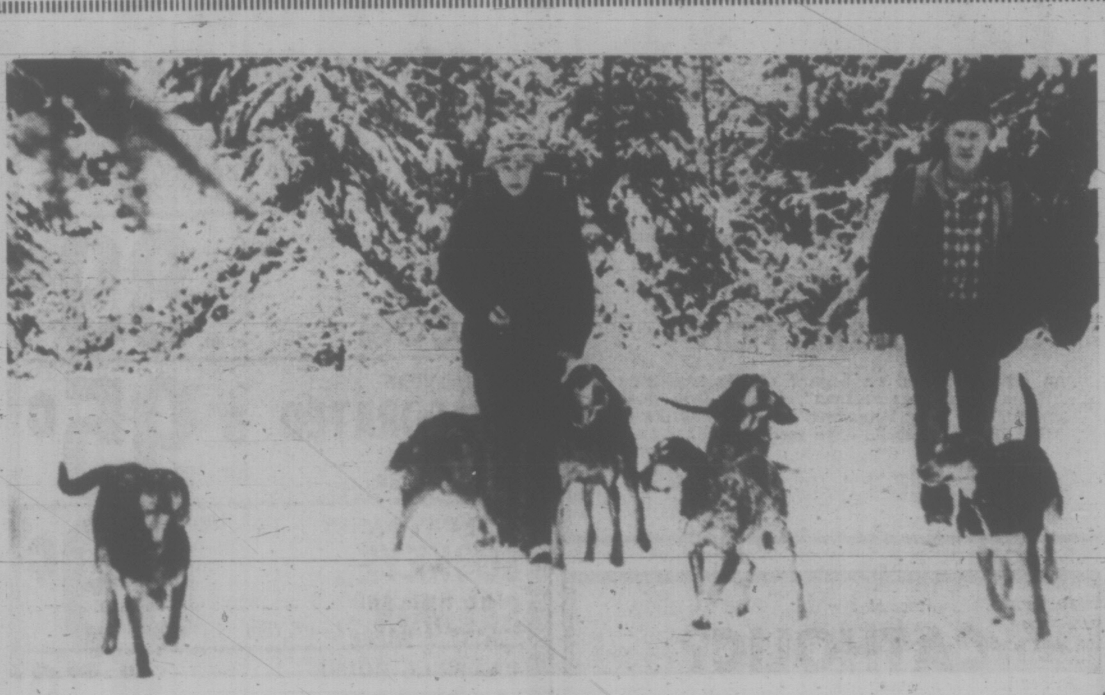
Careful study of the gospels, Robinson continued, gives "every reason to believe that Jesus was a man of like passons with ourselves, sharing the same unconscius drives and libido with a temper, intolerance, anxiety and fear of death as strong as anyone else's."

He was neither the "cardboard Christ" of much Christian literature nor "a sort of batman — a God-man with two natures which he could switch on or off,"' the theologian said.

The epistle to the Hebrews, which Robinson noted is the only New Testament document to speak of Jesus' perfection, says that he was "made perfect" not by becoming better and better, but by achievig indiduation or integration, through temptation and suffering, in the only way that a man can grow."

If mankind is to know about God through Christ — a key element in Christian doctrine — then it is essential that Christ be one with whom man can identify, the theologian insisted.

Such a Christ, he said, "is a completely normal human being who has never been anything else, a common man born and bred, who is yet the carrier of the divine disclosure—the one in whom the self-expression of God, shaping the whole process of nature and history from the beginning finally breaks through in all its fullness."



The Dewars with their hounds

Easy to Tag Cougar—in Theory

PARKSVILLE, (CP) — In theory, tagging a cougar is ridiculously easy—just chase it up a tree, tranquillize it with a dart gun and affix the tag.

"Somehow, it never seems to work out that way," said Penny Dewar who spends her days looking for cougars with her husband Percy in a forested area near this community.

The cougar-tagging program was started by Penny last June as a research project for a thesis that she hopes will eventually lead to a master's degree from the University of Alberta.

The project is to tree, tranquillize and tag cougars to determine the size and mobility of the cougar population on Vancouver Island.

"Everyone thinks the island has more cougars per square mile than anywhere else in the world but no one has done any research on it before," said Percy. "Of course, that's not surprising because the research is so difficult to do. You have to be strange to want to tag cougars."

Penny, 24, became interested in cougars—and Percy —after graduating in marine biology from the University of Alberta. She moved into a cabin in the Englishman River area south of Parksville to study animal behavior and obtained some cougar kittens from the B.C. fish and wildlife service.

"Percy came out to visit me when I had the kittens because he'd been working with cougars as a hunting guide," she said.

The mutual interest in cougars led to marriage last June and full-time partnership in the tagging project, which they are financing themselves with some equipment help from the wildlife service.

"Actually I'm enrolled at the University of Alberta but I've never been there," Penny said. "I told the university it would take me 10 years to do the field work for this project but they still accepted me. I don't know why."

The Dewars hunt the cougars with the aid of specially trained Bluetick hounds. The idea is that the hounds tree the cougar and the Dewars tranquillize it with a dart fired from a special pistol, then tag the animal as it falls unconscious out of the tree. In practice it rarely works out that way.

"We've treed 20 cougars since we started the project but we've only tagged two of them," Penny said.

The problems start after the Dewars catch up to their hounds and the treed cougar.

"We have to tie up the dogs and fill the tranquillizer dart with the drug," she explained. "Then Percy has to climb another tree to get into position to fire the dart. The pistol only has a range of 60 feet so he has to get quite close. And the trees around here are so bushy it's often hard to see the animal."

While all this activity is going on, the cougar usually leaps from the tree and takes off. Then the chase starts all over again.

"We've had some rotten luck but we're not really discouraged," Penny said. "We plan to stay in this location for at least another year."

Pet Pill In Food?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carnation Co. is planning to add a birth control compound to its pet foods but Fido and Kitty may not have to worry about the moral issues of such a plan for quite some time.

The dairy and food products company confirmed Thursday that a form of "the pill" may be added to pet foods, but a spokesman for the firm said the idea is "still in the planning stage. We are working with a drug house but it's really quite premature now to talk about anything definite."

Robert D. Kummel, senior vice president of Carnation, said: "A pharmaceutical company is investigating supplying an active ingredient and we are exploring incorporating it into a finished product."

He noted, however, that any additive would have to be approved by the federal food and drug administration.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS FACE CUTBACKS IN SERVICE

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundlanders were told Friday there could be tax increases or cutbacks in government programs later this year if the province is unable to get by on record expenditures of $674,525,400 outlined in a budget introduced by Finance Minister John C. Crosbie.

Mr. Crosbie told the legislature no tax increases are necessary now because the federal government has raised equalization payments this year by $24.2 million.

But Mr. Crosbie said "that if demands for increased social services and if the demands for increased wages in the public service are in excess of those presently provided for in the 1973-74 budget, it will be necessary for this government to contemplate, before the end of the coming fiscal year, an interim budget requiring tax increases or reductions in existing programs."

The government plans to spend $448,302,700 on current account and $226,222,700 on capital account.

Tax equalization payments and other federal aid are expected to provide $171.4 million of the estimated current account revenue of $361,625,500 while $45.3 million will come from Ottawa for capital account.

OUTLINES BORROWING

The province will borrow $218.5 million during fiscal 1973-74. Capital markets will be tapped for $165 million.

The minister said $36.4 million would come from the Canada Pension Plan and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE) with the rest from other sources.

Last year, the Progressive Conservative government spent $599.6 million.

Mr. Crosbie said the tax equalization formula was renegotiated with Ottawa to remove complicated arrangements about tax rebates that previously worked to the detriment of the province's economy.

He said the new formula, among other things, made feasible the development of the 2.4-million horsepower potential of the lower Churchill River in Labrador.

Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp., which built the $950-million Churchill Falls power facility, has been negotiating with the government for development of the lower Churchill.

The site, near Goose Bay, is 120 miles downstream from Churchill Falls and would cost at least $500 million to develop.

The budget also included a tightening of government purse strings with regard to Memorial University, the province's only degree-granting institution.

Crash Kills Seven

ROME (AP) — Seven persons were killed Thursday in the crash of a Cessna 421 light plane north of here near Lake Bracciano. Police said they found the bodies of four men, two women and a child in the wreckage. Police said the twin-engine plane was probably hit by lightning.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

What's Become of Satan?

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

In Marc Connoly's play, The Green Pastures, the Slender Angel says to the Stout Angel, "Po' ol' Satan. Whutevah become of him?" I'll tell you what become of Satan. We have explained him away. We are intellectually beyond belief in a personal devil. We can enjoy the tongue-in-cheek use of the Devil in a dramatic way by a novelist or playwright, but no one in this sophisticated age can be expected to take him seriously. I must say that I do not believe in the Devil as a supernatural personage. But it bothers me that we tend to assume that having explained him away we have also explained away what he symbolizes in biblical thought.

The biblical figure of Satan is primarily a symbol of temptation. The biblical notion of temptation declares that man, because of the inner freedom with which God has endowed him, lives in a state of tension, tension between contrary urges. Temptation is in the conflict between conscience and impulse, between ideas and inclinations. Temptation is a psychological fact.

In biblical thought temptation is not deemed necessarily reprehensible. It is accepted simply as a fact of human nature, as a reality in every persons's life. We have no grounds for thinking that by the exercise of a strict piety or by some kind of psychological calithenics we can get ourselves beyond temptation.

No man can know the strength and subtlety of another's temptation. No man can know the struggle that goes on in another's heart. No man can know exactly where and how anther's shoe pinches. As Robert Burns put it,

"What's done we partly may compute,
But know not
what's resisted."

Opportunity and provocation are always important elements in temptation. As one of Bernard Shaw's characters says, "It's easy to be respectable with nobody offering you a chance to be anything else." Satan is very flexible in his operations. He can adjust his methods to fit any personality and adapt himself to any situation. He is as efficient in the affluent suburbs as he is in the slums. Education is no defence against him, and prestige and power often open special doors for him.

Often when we pride ourselves on our respectability, on our capacity to resist the grosser temptations, it is more a matter of timidity of fear or social pressure or lack of opportunity than a matter of inner strength. A psychiatrist reports the one one of his patients said to him, "I wonder what I would do if I were sure no one would find out." Well?

Imprint of Jesus On Shroud: Cleric

By PATRICK WORSNIP

ROME (Reuter) — A Vatican prelate has revived the debate on the authenticity of the "holy shroud," in which Christ's body is supposed to have been wrapped, by asserting that it does indeed bear the imprint of Jesus.

Monsignor Giulio Ricci, archivist of the Vatican Congregation of Bishops, told the Roman Catholic news agency Asca that his 20-year study of the shroud, one of the most precious Catholic relics, showed that all the details fitted with New Testament accounts of Christ's death.

The shroud, which was brought to the West by crusaders in 1353 and is housed in a special chapel next to Turin Cathedral, is a sheet of stained linen, 14 feet four inches long and three feet 11 inches wide.

Its authenticity has never been historically proved, but for many years doctors and scientists have been mystified by marks on the linen apparently showing the form of a 30-year-old man who died from crucifixion.

Ricci, who has already written five volumes on his findings, said the flagellation marks proved that the man in the shroud was a Jew who was flogged by the Romans.

Romans were lashed only with rods while this man had been scourged. In addition the number of strokes—at least 121—was more than three times the maximum allowed by Jewish law.

Marks on the shroud also showed that the plaque bearing the sentence had been attached above the man's head and not nailed to his feet as was normal practice, which bore out the account of the crucifixion given by St. Mathew, Ricci said.

Another unusual feature of the execution which corresponded with the Gospel version was the spear wound in the side, which judging from the shroud was about 1½ inches wide—about the width of a Roman spearhead.

The shroud is said to be the winding sheet in which Joseph or Arimathea laid Christ's body after it was taken down from the cross. To the naked eye it discloses only the outline of a human figure.

But in 1898 the shroud was photographed and the negative revealed, as though printed in positive, the form of a man showing marks consistent with crucifixion, scourging and crowning with thorns.

Apparently the imprint had remained for centuries fixed on the cloth, probably through the absorption of oil and spices used in embalming, as well as of blood.

CIA AGENT 14 BECOMES TOO POPULAR FOR RUSSIANS

By VINCENT BUIST

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Gene Green, CIA Agent 014, has gone underground in Moscow with Yevgeny Yevtshuenko, once the angry young man of Soviet literature, in deadly pursuit.

Green is the invention of three Soviet authors who teamed up to produce a parody of Western life-styles using the late Ian Fleming's licensed-to-kill hero, James Bond, as the target of their satire.

Green, heroic survivor of a hundred clashes with international crooks and agents—including male and female Soviet operatives—is the central figure in a parody of the Western thriller - detective-criminal-science fiction popular novel.

Unfortunately, the team of Soviet authors, who embarked on their anti-Western parody with official backing, became so entertaining in their portrayal of the worst aspects of Western culture—striptease, muggings, marijuana, knuckle-dusters and racial violence—that they made Green a fascinating figure for large numbers of Russians.

BLASTS AUTHORS

Yevtushenko, now an establishment figure, writing in the Soviet Literature Gazette, poured scorn and sarcasm on the Gene Green epic:

"How can you fight Fleming using Fleming's own brand of ethics? This is some kind of aberration . . . readers may develop the same kind of aberration. How will they know what is parody and what is not?"

"Let's hope this inexcusable skit, this unjustifiable work, is a unique product of your pens", he wrote to the authors.

A Moscow publishing house produced 100,000 copies of the book but all these Gene Green originals have vanished into the literary underground.

It sold out in days, long before foreigners got wind of the sale. Russians who have a copy are holding on to it. Foreigners have put out feelers in a dozen different channels for weeks but have failed to unearth one. The value of the book on the Moscow black market is going up rapidly.

Russians are great readers. They while away commuting hours with heads plunged in books or magazines and there is an inexhaustible demand for amusing writings as well as good serious literature.

READ AVIDLY

Apart from the classics—French, American, English, Italian among them—Russians like modern translations, and anything which strips away a little of the veil of secrecy at the top of the Soviet establishment.

A recent bestseller is a book entitled Siege, which describes some aspects of Stalin's life during the war years. It shows the old dictator in a more lenient light than has been customary since his death in 1953.

The Soviet underground press, Samizdat, has a hit on its hands with illicit typewritten copies of Cancer Ward by the banned author Alexander Solzhenitsyn which pass from hand to hand.

The English mystery thriller writer Agatha Christie, is often at the top of the ordinary Russian's personal list of favorite authors. Arthur Hailey with Airport is also becoming popular.

Desert Fish Is Back

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California scientists are acclaiming the return of a tiny desert fish thought for 20 years to be extinct but now flourishing in three carefully guarded pools.

The Owens pupfish survived for eons in a changing environment—from a vast inland lake to a string of shallow desert pools where water temperatures may vary between freezing and 100 degrees—but it nearly did not survive its brief contact with modern man.

The Owens pupfish—whose natural range was only about 70 miles along the bottom of the narrow Owens Valley, northwest of Death Valley—is less than two inches long.

Plentiful as recently as 50 years ago, the fish were virtually wiped out by the intrusion of modern man, who drained their habitats and introduced alien species of fish that ate both the pupfish's food and the pupfish.

The fish was considered extinct until 1956, when several hundred were discovered in a pool fed by overflow from a spring-fed drainage ditch.

Now the state has established a pupfish refuge in the area with a pupfish population of more than 1,000. The refuge has furnished stock for two more pools. Plans call for reintroduction of the pupfish throughout its former range.

Loaded Barge Beached

GALIANO — A 90 foot barge loaded with wood and steel, plus the material for a new ferry slip destined for Port McNeil, was beached Friday on rocks at Sturdies Bay at the north entrance of Active Pass beside the ferry dock.

The barge, owned by Pacific Piledriver Co. Ltd. of Victoria, was travelling from Vancouver to Victoria, when the captain noticed it was sinking.

The load was transferred to another barge today.

Islanders May Be Forced To Sell Second Yacht

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — If people don't buy more spaceships and corkscrews soon, many families on this French Pacific island may have to sell that second cabin cruiser.

The gigantic mining concern which supports New Caledonia — Societe Le Nickel — is hurting badly. And the economy, one of the most inflated and improbable in the world, is feeling it.

"Le Nickel pays its people too much and has too many employees," said one qualified observer. "That's the main problem."

Europeans and Melanesians receive generous salaries, often with housing and car allowances. Even New Caledonians get an annual paid "home leave" to France. No one pays income taxes.

Now a depressed market, coupled with dollar devaluation, has caught Le Nickel while it struggles to pay for an expansion that allows production of 30,000 tons more nickel than it can sell.

"Yes, we lost $14 million last year and it'll probably be twice as much this year," said one director, explaining the forced cutbacks. "If there's another devaluation, it'll finish us."

As Le Nickel goes, so goes Caledonia. The company hires 4,000 people directly, and the other 18 independent mines follow its fortunes. The colony's work force is only 35,000.

In past years, workers have streamed in from France, from neighboring islands and even from the Caribbean to mine and refine nickel or to drive taxis for people who do.

For most Europeans, recession means drinking less mineral water from France at $2 a bottle. Bread cost $1 a loaf. Native Caledonians, now closer to Pierre Cardin than to loincloths, have to scratch harder.

And the public treasury feels the same pressures.

Le Niclel's $15 million in export duties made up more than a fifth of the budget last year. It pays no income tax. This year, rather than paying more, the company wants a tax break.

Although New Caledonia has an estimated 43 per cent of the world's nickel reserves, the territorial government had to borrow about $16 million last year from a private bank at 10 per cent interest for schools, roads and public works.

"With our resources, we should be rich," says Maurice Le Normand of the leading Union Caledonienne party, which wants a greater say for the colony in running its internal and budgetary affairs.

One industry man grubled: "Le Nickel has been sitting on top of those deposits for 90 years, with ore almost twice as rich as is mined in Canada, and look what they've done so far. For years they were producing only 6,000 to 8,000 tons until International Nickel Co. Inco showed an interest in the mid-1950s, and then they panicked."

Inco has been trying for French permission to eventually produce 50,000 tons of nickel a year, just under the present Le Nickel level, but the project is stalled. Another plan is under way for two French companies and the Swedish Granges to build a 36,000-ton-a-year plant in the north.

For the moment, Le Nickel is the sole producer of metal — the 18 other simply ship ore to Japan — but the lack of competitors has hardly left it in peace.

Kaiser Aluminum is apparently unhappy over its partnership arrangement with Le Nickel in the recent plant expansion project, and that makes the French company nervous about its access to the American market.

Also, Le Nickel says it is spending more than it can afford in battling pollution from its smelter in Noumea and around its open pit mining centres. Directors say they plan to spend $23 million more to reduce dust and smoke, but they just haven't got it at the moment.

Ugly scars from open pit mining and the murky rivers and lagoons have strained Le Nickel's energetic public relations department.

Independent "petit mineurs," with total concessions larger than Le Nickel's, aggravate the problem. Even if they do more to damage the environment Le Nickel is apt to get the blame.

The government hasn't enough inspectors to advise miners on how to protect villages, water supplies and rare vegetation even though companies may want to comply. One government biologist said several unique plant species have disappeared under heaps of tailings.

"The mines and Le Nickel are a political matter . . . what can be done?" he observed.

Still, this remains almost the most prosperous corner of the South Pacific.

The Cercle Nautique counts 800 pleasure boats around its eight wharves, with an enormous waiting list. The key club where a bottle of Scotch costs $40 is full every night. Junior executives nip down to nearby Australia or across to Tahiti with hardly a twist of the arm.

New Caledonia has nothing but nickel. The island is too expensive for ordinary tourists and too dull for the jet set. High prices for feed mean Australian eggs cost less than local ones, and the cattle industry isn't catching on.

With the inflated economy, it's a long way down to the bottom. But, if there's no turnaround, the local gentry may be drinking Australian champagne with their smoked salmon.

Canada to Give $100,000 to Iceland

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will give $100,000 to a disaster fund to help resettle residents of Iceland's Westman Island, the external affairs department announced today.

About 5,300 residents of the island were evacuated to the mainland during volcanic eruptions early this year.

The eruptions first broke out Jan. 23 and again March 22. It is estimated that between $20 and $30 million will be needed to resettle the people.

The federal government's contribution supplements donations from the Icelandic community in Canada, a $25,000 donation from the government of British Columbia and an expected $25,000 from the Icelandic National League in Winnipeg.

Duncan Hospital Accredited

DUNCAN — Engagement of a qualified anaesthetist for Cowichan District Hospital, is recommended in a report to the hospital board by Dr. L. O. Bradley of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation.

The report awarded the hospital accreditation status, but said an anaesthetist is needed because of the "volume and complexity of surgery."

LIGHT YOUR OWN FLOWER!

How many times have you seen a beautiful flower with lighting too poor or at the wrong angle for pictures?

If you have a flashgun and a large white card or card covered with crinkled aluminum foil about 8"x10" you can reflect the light wherever you need it.

With the flash on or off the camera aim it directly at the flower, or bounce it off the card or foil reflector, or a combination of both. When using the reflectors make certain they are out of the picture area.

Set your shutter speed to synchronize with the flash. Take a meter reading to set the lens opening. If the lens opening is too large for a flash picture so close, cover the flash with 1 or 2 layers of white linen handkerchief.

Now, if you are well on your way to confusion come in to JUS-RITE Photos. Your Certified Photographic Counsellors can show you how easy it really is to take striking flower pictures.

The New Day Care.

Effective April 1st, the new day care program means no child will be denied the benefits of day care because of lack of family funds. The program has been expanded to include nursery schools, private kindergartens (where no public ones exist) and out-of school care. Families can now shop around for the service that best suits their needs. In addition, more families will be eligible for government-paid contributions whether the parents are working or not.

Any family participating in the day care program can tell you the benefits . . . reliable (and if need be — special) care for your children, more resources available to the family, as well as a wider choice of day care services.

The cost is calculated on the number of persons in the family "group" and the total family "take home pay" plus income from any other sources.

The Provincial Government will subsidize the cost of day care to families on a simple sliding scale. (See the chart below.) For example, in a three person family, (two parents and 1 child or 1 parent and 2 children) if the total take home pay is $460, the chart shows that that family group would pay a total $5 a month for day care for the children and the government would pay the balance of up to $100.00 per child. The DECLARATION OF INCOME FORM (for those who qualify on the chart) must be completed in order to qualify for Provincial Government contributions, and is available from the Day Care Information Centre in each area. It is processed by mail, so no interview will be necessary.

People who are not eligible for government contributions according to the chart, but will still have difficulty meeting the cost of day care, may request the APPLICATION FOR ASSISTANCE WITH DAY CARE FEES from the local Day Care Information Centre or district office of the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement.

The day care information centres are set up by the Provincial Government to provide information to parents looking for care for their children, about where day care centres exist in the different areas, and to help new centres with licensing regulations. The information centres will also try to help families determine their eligibility for government paid contributions.

Write the Day Care Information Centre in Vancouver at 45 West 8th Avenue or phone 873-3767, 873-3768, 873-3769. In Victoria write the Family and Childrens Service at 1627 Fort Street or phone 382-5121 In other areas contact the district office of the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement.

Weddings

Gill — Speed

A pretty wedding took place March 17, 1973 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Dunstan's Anglican Church, when Reverend W. J. Lunny united in marriage Lucille Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Speed, 30 View Royal Avenue, to Mr. James Jonathon Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Gill of 587 Nora Place.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown, medieval-styled in white satin. Her full-length tiered veil, entrain, was lavishly edged with lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis. Maid of honor Miss Leslie Peerless and bridesmaids Miss Donna Gregory and Miss Laurie Gill, sister of the groom, wore gowns of blue chiffon and carried bouquets of pink carnations. Best man was Mr. Graham Lee and Messrs. Bruce Speed and Larry Gill, brothers of the bridal couple, ushered the guests.

Many out of town guests attended including Mr. and Mrs. James Gill of Burnaby, grandparents of the groom.

Planes — Greenhough

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Greenhough of Sooke, B.C., are pleased to annouce the marriage of their second daughter Catherine Renee, to Mr. David Leslie Planes, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Planes of Sooke, B.C.

The quiet ceremony took place in Victoria, B.C., on March 23, 1973.

The happy couple are making their home in Sooke.

Straith — Lyttleton

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Mary Patricia Lyttleton and Mr. Donald Alexander Straith, both of this city. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized on Saturday, February 24, 1973, at 5 p.m. in the home of the bride, with members of the families in attendance. Reverend A. Calder of Oak Bay United Church officiated at the exchange of wedding vows.

The bride wore an ensemble of imported Guipure lace over watermelon silk, complemented with a white orchid corsage and pearl jewellery.

Following a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Straith left on a one month wedding trip to Hawaii, and are now residing at 2840 Beach Drive, Victoria, B.C.

Benson — MacPhail

Mrs. Jean Peasland of Beach Drive, Victoria, announced with pleasure the marriage on March 24, 1973, of her daughter, Sheila Jean MacPhail to Mr. Edward Liston Lewis Benson of Palm Desert, California. The ceremony was conducted in the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Benson will make their home at 1106 Sandpiper, Palm Desert, California.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mr. T. Whittaker and family wishes to express their sincere thanks to Dr. R. C. Smith, Dr. J. Fiddess and all nursing staff of Royal Jubilee Hospital for their kind and devoted attention to the late Mrs. Mary J. Whittaker. Also to the relatives, friends, neighbours, and business associates for their cards and floral tributes during our sad bereavement. A special thanks to Father Joseph B. Jackson for his comforting words during her illness and funeral service, and also to Sands Funeral Directors.

9 IN MEMORIAM

FLOSS—Taken from us April 1st, 1972.
Loved and was loved.

GRIFFITHS — Donald J. In loving memory of a dear son and brother, who passed away March 31st, 1970.
Gone from us
But never forgotten.
Mom, Dad, Beverley and Keith.

MONTAGUE—To the memory of our dear Father — Christopher N. — who passed away April 1, 1971, and our beloved Mother — Elizabeth B. — who followed just a year later, April 6, 1972.

You're not forgot dear parents,
Nor ever will you be;
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.
The loneliness without you,
The ache deep in our hearts,
We've nothing left but memories,
With these we'll never part.
We've needed you so often,
Yet no one has seen us weep,
But many a silent tear is shed,
While others are asleep.
God bless and keep them always.

So sadly missed by your daughters, Eileen and Audrey, and their families.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: Is it more dangerous to bathe a dog, or a cat? — S.A.

Dear S. A.: On the average, it's riskier to bathe a cat. Usually the larger the cat the greater the risk though it can be practically suicidal to soak some seven pounders. As far as health hazards to the non-human partner in the grand experiment is concerned, bathing either kittens or puppies is usually inadvisable at least until after they have completed their vaccinations. It is easy for them to become stressed and chilled by the bathing process and this lowers their resistance to any infection, the most dangerous of which would be the ever-present viral disease.

XXX

Dear Dr. Miller: Mayflower is already teaching her puppies — they're only a month old — to eat her food. They are diving into it, too, but I wonder if it is really fit food for puppies so young? Does she really know what she is doing? — D. C.

Dear N. C.: Mayflower's maternal instincts are apparently functioning normally. While some bitches want to hang onto their puppies as long as possible, and vice versa, many mothers after a month are ready to disengage. The puppies' needle-sharp teeth and claws are often a factor in accelerating the bitch's "back away" behavior. The first mamaless meals might well be a gruel of milk and meal, puppy meal in particular. It would not be too late even now to switch these kids to puppy meal. It is most appropriate for them during the early rapid growth period.

Dear Dr. Miller: Will an African gray parrot live with a parakeet in the same cage? — L. C.

Dear L.C.: If the parrot were moving in with the parakeet and in a parakeet-sized cage, the parrot wouldn't be very happy about the arrangement. It certainly would be much too cramped, for one thing. The parakeet wouldn't be overjoyed, either. In fact, and with good reason, he would be downright apprehensive. While the African gray is generally remarkably good natured (for a parrot) he would still be likely to get mad at the parakeet sometime for some reason and he could do in his little friend with one bite. Certainly the parakeet would be better off alone and the parrot needs plenty of room. If the parrot is to be caged continuously it must be a very large cage. Otherwise, he should be allowed plenty of time outside of it for exercise.

DEATH SMELL OVERPOWERING

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (Reuter) — Three months after its almost total destruction by an earthquake, the smell of death is still so strong in the heart of Managua that gas masks must be worn to visit its ruins.

The bodies of those who died when the first quake struck Nicaragua two days before Christmas are still being pulled from under the collapsed houses. The final death toll could be more than 20,000.

Engineers working on clearing the fallen stonework and reconstructing the capital say the task is expected to cost $1 billion.

Public Works Minister Cristobal Rugamans said work has begun on restoring the dike along Lake Managua, beside which the city is built.

An estimated 270,000 people were evacuated from Managua, and Nicaragua's strongman ruler, Gen. Anastacio Somoza, said in a New Year's Day message that those who survived would have to stay away from their homes—those few homes that remain standing in outer districts—for at least six months.

The dawn quake leveled three-quarters of the city and started huge fires. It was the third tremor to destroy Managua in 88 years, similar disasters having occurred in 1885 and 1931.

The 1931 death toll was about 1,450.

Canada 'in Limbo' in Vietnam

By JAMES ANDERSON
Special to The Times

SAIGON — The International Commission of Control and Supervision has slipped into a kind of limbo with the end of the U.S. military presence in Vietnam.

It has, temporarily at least, no one to report to, no one to assist or be assisted by and no point of reference to the Vietnam ceasefire.

The four-party Joint Military Commission — composed of the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — has concluded its business at the end of the initial 60-day ceasefire period.

But the two-party JMC, which should have been organized by the South Vietnamese and the Provisional Revolutionary Government in the course of the past two months, has not come into existence.

There have been some discussions on the subject between the Viet Cong and Saigon but members of the commission have not been formally designated and no one seems able to say when it may begin to operate.

The JMC has primary responsibility for implementing the Paris peace accords.

So desultory is the working of the Vietnam ceasefire, the ICCS and the old four-party JMC, that for the moment it doesn't really seem to matter that there is a hiatus in the ceasefire machinery.

Canadian officials say they won't be too worried if the interruption lasts a week. But if nothing happens in two weeks it would be disturbing, they say.

The four-party JMC never functioned at the 27 teamsites around South Vietnam.

There are no PRG representatives at even the regional headquarters in the northern half of the country and the few Viet Cong at the headquarters of the four southern regions have never really taken part in the commission work.

The impasse dates back to the first few days of the ceasefire when the Viet Cong and South Vietnamese could not agree on formalities such as Saigon's demand that the communists sign immigration papers when they arrived in Saigon.

The PRG has a host of complaints about its treatment in the Joint Military Commission.

The Communist delegations have been held virtual prisoners in South Vietnamese military camps around the country, unable to make any show of their presence in Saigon and other cities.

The PRG also complains that whenever it designates a rendezvous point for its delegates to join the JMC, the South Vietnamese shell or bomb the site.

There are only 200 Viet Cong representatives in Saigon and a few other South Vietnamese cities, instead of the 800 called for by the ceasefire terms.

This means that it has been impossible in almost every case for the ICCS to get more than the government side of the story in its investigations of breaches of the ceasefire.

It means also that the Viet Cong have been unable to take advantage of the ceasefire machinery to protect themselves on the ground from South Vietnamese truce violations which even Americans here concede have been numerous.

Saigon's troops have shelled, bombed and captured areas held by the Communists at ceasefire day.

The PRG delegates, concentrating on winning the status they think they are entitled to under the ceasefire agreement, have apparently been willing to sacrifice hamlets and villages to their insistence on formalities.

Their insistence will probably continue. U.S. diplomats here regard the process as "a bit of brinkmanship on both sides" but expect it will be settled somehow.

Meanwhile, Canada and the other ICCS countries have a total of 51 investigations in progress and have four others completed with nowhere to send their reports.

And some of the most vital questions in implementing the ceasefire — the control of supplies entering the country and demarcation of the Communist and government zones of control — have not even been tackled by the ICCS and the opposing sides.

'MY DADDY AND I . . .'

"My mommy walked out and left me alone with my daddy almost two years ago.

"My daddy explained to me he has done something wrong and he expects to be punished, maybe by going to jail . . .

"All my relatives are in Quebec except my mommy who lives in Toronto somewhere and she does not want me.

"My daddy and I are very close . . . He looks after me well . . . I will miss him very much . . .

"I would like to thank you for anything you can do for my daddy."

Ontario provincial judge admitted Friday that this letter written by 11-year-old Rochelle Desrosiers of Toronto saved her father from going to jail after being convicted of driving while his licence was suspended.

"I don't want to be flooded by a lot of letters from children on behalf of daddy," said Provincial Judge Harold Rice in an interview.

"But I'd have to be a pretty hard-hearted soul to stand here and say that I wasn't affected. It was a very touching letter."

On that account he decided to send Raymond Desrosiers home on 18-month probation.

Desrosiers said he had paid his rent three months in advance and hired a woman to look after Rochelle because he expected to spend some time in jail.

"I was pretty scared," the 49-year-old longshoreman said.

Guaranteed Wage Plan Experiment

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and Manitoba are going to join in a guaranteed annual income experiment involving a limited number of persons in the province.

Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said it will be the first major social experiment in the field of guaranteed income.

The project will be operated by Manitoba but the federal government will contribute 75 per cent of the cost and participate in the research.

One official said Ontario and British Columbia both have expressed interest in a guaranteed income scheme. There was no indication, however, if or when these two provinces would ask for federal assistance.

In Winnipeg, Premier Ed Schreyer said intensive planning has been under way since last July and the experiment could get going with payments to participants starting this fall.

Final planning for the project will involve families and individuals to be selected in Winnipeg and in a farm and rural town area.

Asked by reporters to elaborate, Schreyer said details are being worked out and sites of the experiment in Manitoba have not been determined.

Under guaranteed income plans, the government guarantees an individual he will receive a certain amount of money annually.

If the individual cannot make that level of income through employment, welfare or unemployment benefits the government makes up the difference.

Four experimental annual income projects were, or still are, being conducted in the United States. There is yet no definitive work on their effectiveness.

Major concern is whether a guaranteed income would deprive individuals of the incentive to get work. A federal official said that incentive and problems of administration are areas that will be studied in the Manitoba projects.

Manitoba officials said all participants would be volunteers and would be told that the project would last a definite period, perhaps three years.

The selected individuals in the scheme would be welfare recipients, those on low wages, unemployed and persons formerly unemployed.

The level of guaranteed income to be offered was not announced. But the official said more than one scheme will be tested.

GAS RATIONING IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Distributors of Texaco gasoline will start rationing gas to 200 service stations here Sunday for the first time since the Second World War, the Los Angeles Times said today.

The cutbacks, ranging as high as 47 per cent in some cases, also marks the first time a major oil company's retail outlets have been hit by the growing U.S. gas shortage.

Texaco, the largest U.S. gasoline retailer, has more than 1,000 outlets in the Los Angeles area, but only 200 will be affected.

The Times said most motorists will still be able to get the gas they need at the 200 stations but those stations will be limited in the amount of gas they can get from distributors.

The distributors' action followed an announcement by Texaco and Mobile on the national level, instructing their distributors that they would be limited to last year's level of purchase.

Nixon Aides To Talk

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Responding to mounting criticism, President Nixon has ordered his personal staff to testify, if called, in connection with the Watergate affair.

This is a major compromise by the president with the Senate's investigation and also a grand jury hearing now under way in Washington.

H. R. Haldeman, the president's chief of staff, and John W. Dean, the White House counsel, recently connected by hearsay to the advance planning of the Watergate raid, are believed never to have appeared before the grand jury investigating the case.

For the first time the White House appeared to be showing concern about the bipartisan attacks on the administration's conduct in the case.

The change was believed to be due in part to the concern expressed by a number of Republicans in Congress and elsewhere that the White House might be covering up involvement of aides and others close to the president with men employed by the committee for the re-election of the president who were convicted of the breaking into and bugging the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee last year.

And Watergate conspirator James W. McCord has testified under oath that he met or talked almost daily with former attorney-general John Mitchell in the spring of 1972, according to Senate sources. The testimony directly contradicts Mitchell's own sworn statement that he met with McCord only once and had virtually no other contact with him.

McCord's testimony, delivered to the Senate committee can only be interpreted as meaning that either McCord or Mitchell has committed perjury.

61% Addicts Live in B.C.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Sixty-one per cent of Canada's known hard drug users live in B.C., according to statistics released Friday by the federal health department.

The department says there are 8,958 persons known to use such addictive drugs throughout Canada and 5,496 of them are in B.C.

The statement also says there are 45,127 known users of cannabis (marijuana and hashish) and 10,000 known users of hallucinogens.

However the department's totals do not jibe with those from other sources. The Le Dain commissions for example, estimates the number of cannabis users as between 841,000 and 866,000.

The health department's tables show some considerable increases between 1971 and 1972, however, in the convictions for use of marijuana, heroin and cocaine.

Heroin convictions nearly doubled — to 923 from 504 — and cocaine convictions more than doubled — to 44 from 19.

Marijuana convictions rose to 11,713 in 1972 compared with 9,478 in 1971.

Most of the statistics are compiled from drug-related criminal records, the news release, accompanying the statistical tables said. Information on drug users also came from physicians and treatment agencies.

Next to B.C., Ontario showed the next highest number, 1,720 addicts, and Alberta was third with 638 and Quebec fourth with 616.

The statistics may represent better reporting by treatment and drug crisis centres in some provinces. However, officials of the health department could not be reached for comment.

Another table, showing an eight-year cumulative total of habitual hard drug users, showed 682 of the 8,958 were addicted before they were 20 years old.

The statement issued with the tables said the "8,958 illicit narcotic users were made known to the department in 1972." The tables indicated these were from the eight-year cumulative record, which probably would not take into account any who had kicked the habit, had left the country or who died.

IRISH PUNCH-UP

BELFAST (UPI) — Ten policemen and 14 civilians were hospitalized today as army troops fired rubber bullets to disperse a crowd that turned a downtown Belfast dance hall into a "wild west saloon punch-up."

The army said security forces were sent to the hall when dancers started fighting and the brawl spread into the street, but both factions turned on troops and police.

"It was like a wild west saloon punch-up," one man said. "Everyone was hitting everyone."

The troops firing rubber bullets broke up the melee but not until 24 persons were injured and taken to a hospital, an army spokesman said.

Schweitzer to Quit

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, will retire as managing director of the International Monetary Fund when his present term expires at the end of August, it was confirmed today.

Schweitzer had been under pressure from the United States to leave the fund post, although several Western European countries wanted him to remain.

The economist, 60, a former deputy governor of the Bank of France had led the fund since 1953. His future plans were not announced.

The U.S. opposition to Schweitzer was based on his forthright statements in 1971 on the need for a devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

Agreement on a successor has not yet been reached.

GLOOMY SEERS GET JAIL

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — has rounded up more than 50 of the country's top astrologers and thrown them into jail, police sources said.

The sources said 55 astrologers have been arrested without formal charges as a result of a prediction that President Lon Nol will not survive in power until the end of April.

A similar flood of gloomy predictions preceded the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as head of state in March, 1970, and the subsequent opening of the cambodian war.

Damage Done: Meany

Times News Services

WASHINTGON — AFL-CIO President George Meany told the White House bluntly Friday that a simple ceiling on meat prices "does not go far enough" to win labor over to another year of wage-price controls.

"The damage has already been done," Meany said, "and so meat price ceilings are now set at a 22-year high . . . equity will be served only if these prices are rolled back to where they stood before the recent spiral began . . . we will not support inequitable extension of the Economic Stabilization Act."

Meanwhile, most supermarkets across the country simply froze their meat prices Friday at Thursday's levels, according to a spokesman for the National Association of Food Chains. It will take them some time to calculate what their ceiling prices must be under the new rules.

Most U.S. farm and meat industry leaders expressed infuriation Friday over the meat price ceilings. Spokeswomen for consumers planning a week-long meat boycott said their plans remained in effect despite Nixon's action.

An opinion perhaps representative of the farmers' viewpoint nationwide was expressed by Elton Berck, president of the farmers union in the beef-producing state of Nebraska. Berck charged the president acted "under the advice of Wall Street cowboys and legal fact-benders."

In Toronto the manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association said beef prices are starting to decline after hitting their seasonal peak in March.

"Unprecedented consumer demand sustained prices," Charles Gracey said in an interview Friday.

GENTLE WITH ALIENS

TORONTO (CP) — Speaking on the day before the deadline for all illegal visitors to register with the immigration department, Immigration Minister Robert Andreas said Friday night the government will "apply a very gentle hand" in dealing with visitors who establish themselves in Canada without gaining landed-immigrant status.

He spoke to 100 persons at a conference on immigration sponsored by the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs.

With today's deadline, lineups were the rule all this week at the immigration office here as visitors who arrived in Canada before Jan. 1 scrambled to meet the target date.

Many have no idea what is in store for them at immigration. As a 30-year-old Trinidadian mother of two said while waiting to register:

"I don't have any choice. They could deport me now, but if I didn't come here and then they found me they could deport me anyway."

The woman, in Canada for six months, declined to give her name because "I'm afraid."

Pea-Shooter for Elephant?

Washington Post Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's ceiling on beef, pork and lamb prices is merely a faltering step in the right direction. What the current inflation cries out for is a comprehensive controls system on wages, prices, dividends and some interest rates.

The attempt to forestall a kick in the teeth from George Meany seems to have been abortive. What the administration doesn't seem to realize is that Meany has little influence over the collective bargaining policies of the many strong AFL-CIO unions. They just won't take 5.5 per cent wages increases when the consumer cost of living for January-February rose at an annual rate of almost 8 per cent, with food bought in the gorcery stores up 28 per cent.

It's too much to expect Meany to keep union presidents in line when the scorecard reads that way; even if the presidents wanted to play ball, the rank-and file wont.

Nixon is also losing old political supporters like economist Pierre Rinfret, who said: "The president used a pea-shooter to try to kill an elephant."

Twelve weeks ago, on Jan. 11, the president abandoned a moderately successful, mandatory Phase II for a "voluntary" Phase III, a decision which has been a near disaster for the economy. Since then, all hell has broken loose, including the second devaluation of the dollar in 14 months.

Phase III, for all of the PR pretense that it is just as tough as Phase II, has actually kicked off a new round of inflation of which skyrocketing meat prices were merely the most obvious and most politically-sensitive reflection.

The business community interpreted Phase III to mean that prices were decontrolled, and that union leaders would be fairly free to bargain for wages substantially higher than the old 5.5 per cent guidepost. There was no good reason for the business community to figure it any other way.

Thus, in February, the annual rate of increase in the whole-sale industrial commodity price index was a sensa-

'Little Boys Don't Cry'—Maybe They Should

By DON VIPOND

Times Staff

Why do Women Outnumber Men At Eric Martin Institute?

There were 458 men and 741 women admitted to the Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric treatment last year. Why so many more women than men?

That's a question which Dr. Ian Kenning, head of the division of psychiatry at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"I frankly don't know what the real reasons are, I just have my own ideas," he says But he thinks the ratio is significant, particularly when considered together with the fact that jails are occupied mainly by men.

Men are consistently in more difficulty with the law in, so many ways, from traffic offences to acts of aggression, he notes.

Could it be that women are more honest in recognizing their emotional problems, asking for help?

Kenning thinks that's a factor.

"'Little boys don't cry,' that's the password of our society. And so, little boys don't get sick. But their aggression gets acted out.

"To see a 'shrink' or psychiatrist is a big thing if you're not supposed to cry or get sick."

Is there anything which renders women physically more susceptable to mental illness?

"I don't think so . . . women are more prone to depression premenstrually but I don't think that's a big factor."

Cop Out

Even though a considerable number of women are admitted to EMI just before period, he suggests relating that hormone change to psychiatric problems "is a bit of a cop-out."

It's similar to common attitudes on the menopause, he says. The menopause has become a "socially acceptable reason for all sorts of behavior changes, so people frequently don't look for the real reasons.

The menopause often coincides with a time of major change in a woman's lifestyle — the end to raising children — and that change can be emotionally hazardous.

"That's been her job, maybe for 15 or 20 or 25 years. Then, all of a sudden she's pensioned off, and she's got to look at getting a new thing that's meaningful and meeting her needs for expression.

"So I think in that sense, that time . . . is a social hazard for women."

Are women more likely to seek help for mental problems?

"I think women are more accepting to help."

Perhaps too, Kenning says, that is a tendency under stress for women to look to someone for help while men choose another outlet, maybe getting drunk.

He goes down to the beer parlor and sounds off to the guys. And she maybe goes to the doctor."

He thinks the higher ratio of women at EMI is likely paralleled in doctors' offices. He estimates he sees close to twice as many women as men.

Booze Policy

On men and booze, he notes another factor which may help shape the ratio of admissions to EMI. The policy at the hospital, "rightly or wrongly," is not to admit patients solely for alcoholic problems. And that keeps more men out than women.

If men who are disturbed tend to express themselves more aggressively, ending up in court and jail, does it follow that a number of men in prison should more properly be in hospitals like EMI?

"You're getting into the problem of medical-legal responsibility. But let me put it this way . . . I did a lot of consulting work at William Head (prison) and certainly some of the men you see there have severe emotional problems which are similar to what you see more often in women in hospital. . .

"I feel there needs to be a greater partnership between the law and psychiatry. This is coming very slowly, because they are afraid of each other."

Are there more young people in EMI than other age groups?

"We see a lot of adolescent problems, no doubt about that . . . but Victoria is also a city of older people and we get a lot of older age depressions . . . middle life and on."

Women get more depressions than men, he says. One group, for example: older women who have just lost their husband.

Are depressions the biggest problem among patients at EMI?

Kenning estimates depression is the diagnosis in as many as half the institute's cases. But there are many kinds of depression and a good deal of doctors don't know about them.

Depression, he says, is a symptom of other problems.

"My belief is that depression relates to lack of balance in your way of life. If you're not getting healthy expression, you may well get depressed. This is certainly one kind of depression.

"Women I think on the whole have a little greater trougle getting healthy expression"

Is that because the home environment many women find themselves in, as housekeepers and mothers, doesn't give them the same chance to express themselves?

"I think that's right. While work can be a stress on men, it also gives them responsibility, expression. A lot of people I see are better if they have a job. It makes a big differance."

Is the comyany, the companionship, men find at work important?

"This is the way you find friends, often through your work or your church. This business of finding friends is a big hazard in our society.

"Also, I think that children . . . . are predominantly in our society the responsibility of women. And children are a major stress. I really think that bringing up children is a harder job than most guys have going to work. . .

Woman's Job

"There's a sort of thing in our society — if you're a woman you stay home and look after the kids. And it doesn't suit all women. . ."

Kenning says it's his experience that when women come for treatment during the stress period of raising children, their problems generally relate to the marital situation too.

"There are a lot of guys who feel if they bring the pay cheque home, the rest of the time is theirs. And so they have one kid every year for the last four years — 'that's her job.'

"This is not realistic, because four small children is an enormous burden, far bigger than what he's doing bringing the money home."

Another significant group among women patients are "single mothers," whether unmarried, divorced or widowed.

"Women who are bringing up children on their own have a tough life in our society," says Kenning.

They are usually financially limited, so even the price of a babysitter to give them a break takes some doing. And they need a break more because they have no one to share responsibilities.

It's one of the fields where research is needed, he suggests.

Is it possible to research this kind of thing? Will people with personal troubles be honest in talking about them?

"That's what part of the new human potential movement is about, isn't it — people being honest with people and stating their real feelings. I see this as a very constructive movement.

"The previous generation had a lot of good things about it, in terms of stability . . . but they had to go to cocktail parties to say what they really felt. And that's a sad commentary.

"I think that this new movement, in terms of people learning to come on honest, is a bright thing."

Mental illness. There's an impression it's more common now than, say, at the turn of the century. Is that so, or is it a matter of more specialists now, better diagnosis, more treatment?

Kenning says he has not examined the figures recently, but it is generally held in the profession that major mental illnesses are to be found, then as now, in the same proportion.

"One thing we are seeing, of course, is a different manifestation of stress in youth by drugs, a different manifestation of stress in young adult women of which the most common manifestation is the overdose.

"And this is one thing which brings more women into hospital . . .

"Unfortunately . . . partly because of the media . . . (the overdose) has become the non-verbal way of trying to change a lifestyle . . . and of course it's a very bad and very expensive way . . . it, doesn't lead to any positive change."

More Emotion

On the subject of stress, and women reacting to it with more emotion, he says:

"I don't know whether it's related at all but of course men are much more prone to degenerative diseases such as arteriosclerosis . . . I don't know if the two are related but it's an interesting thing to speculate on."

Could it be that if you are able to unload your emotional charge, you're less likely to be subject to these degenerative diseases?

"Maybe so. Maybe women have the last laugh, because men die sooner."

WORK CONTINUES in Inner Harbor on high tide level promenade designed to join up with other park sections of waterfront. Logs floating in foreground will be driven into harbor bottom as supports for new structure. Final phase of Causeway area beautification will be removal of Ocean Cement yard and wharves, and relocation of Black Ball ferry terminal.

Dissidents Would Oust Board

A special general meeting of the Memorial Society of British Columbia won't be held until a report from the attorney-general's department requested by the society is completed and published, society president Clare Yarwood of Victoria said today.

The department is investigating alleged irregularities in First Memorial Service Ltd. of North Vancouver, with whom the society has an undertaking contract.

Yarwood received a letter Friday from six dissident members of the 80,000-member society asking for an extraordinary general meeting to elect a new board of directors.

Five former directors and former executive director Jean Mohart signed the letter.

Yarwood said the letter asked for the meeting to be held before May 6.

The six who signed the letter said they will seek a vote of non-condidence in the current board during the extraordinary meeting. And they said they will call on the meeting to order cancellation of the present undertaking contract with First Memorial.

The contract between the society and First Memorial was suspended for 10 days last month following allegations made about the undertaking firm on a radio hot-line show.

The five former directors who are seeking the special meeting are Charles Clapham, Garth Pither, Bert Hunter, Elve Baillie and Caryl Garden.

They all resigned from the 12-member board March 16.

Hunter said he and his fellow former directors feel the remaining board members have not acted in the best interests of the membership.

NEW LOW IN AREA VOTING

Voters throughout the Capital district appeared headed for a record—in apathy—today as they trickled to the polls to settle three questions.

Regional ratepayers are eligible to vote for or against a $22.5 million referendum to modernize and expand hospitals.

In Victoria, six candidates are seeking the city council seat left vacant by the death of Ald. Ove Witt.

And in that part of Sannich included in school district 63, voters will chose one of five to represent them on the school board.

A sample of polls at 11 a.m. showed few people cared.

"I've never seen it so slow," said Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward, who is returning officer for the trustee plebiscite.

At the five Victoria polls, 837 of about 21,000 eligible voters had made their choice for alderman and 609 of about 17,000 had voted on the hospital referendum.

At Esquimalt municipal hall, 96 out of 4,597 had voted on the referendum and at Oak Bay municipal hall 805 of 8,770 eligible voters had cast ballots.

Up the Saanich Peninsula, only 60 voters of a possible 3,221 had shown up at the municipal hall — not quite 2 per cent.

Price Protesters Seek 1,000 Names

A local woman who is organizing a consumer's boycott of meat next week said today she hopes to get at least 1,000 signatures on a petition supporting the boycott.

Mrs. Margaret Addis said her telephone has been ringing "non-stop" since the boycott was announced in the Times Thursday.

"I've had constant ringing . . . ," she said. "I can't get a normal meal into my son."

"I've only had one derogatory comment," she said. "That was from a farmer's wife."

Mrs. Addis, who has been organizing the boycott from her home where she is recovering from a back injury, has petitions circulating in the community asking people not to buy any meat from Monday through Friday next week.

Now she is asking people who phone her to start their own petitions in their neighborhood and mail them to her next week. By Friday she hopes to have collected them all into one petition, which she will mail to the special Commons committee on food prices in Ottawa.

Mrs. Addis said she'd be satisfied with 1,000 signatures, considering the short time in which the boycott was organized. Anyone willing to support the boycott or circulate a petition can call her at 477-1788.

The local meat boycott will coincide with a similar one in the United States and Canada.

Be Slaves to a Garden? Never Again!

ONCE AT THE HEIGHT of a Victoria spring, my wife emerged from a flower border carrying her lady-spade in two pieces.

"What happened?" I asked her, stupid with fatigue. "Did the handle break?"

"No," she said. "It was rotted off by blood, sweat and tears."

We stood in the deepening dusk, slaves to a garden that had begun its annual mad growing spree with January's first snowdrops.

Never again, we agreed. Once we were delivered from bondage to that over-productive earth, we would choose our next home site with finicky care.

If planters were attached to the house that sat on it, we would tolerate them. Any evergreens or other perennials it might harbor could stay as long as they behaved themselves. But there would be no borders, no vegetable-plot, no fruit trees demanding lime sulphur and pruning . . . nothing in the way of a garden that we couldn't neat up in a casual half hour.

A year has passed since we made that resolve. the sea-battered tract we now occupy came remarkably close to meeting the requirements we laid down.

Its perennials, I'm pleased to report, are coming along nicely, although the little Stewarti we transfered to a carefully-prepared spot by the fence line worries us a trifle. Perhaps continued doses of Epson salts and a ration of bone meal will help restore it to full vigor.

Win spends frequent half hours working on the two fron steps, and as soon as we planting areas that flank our can decide where they'll be best protected from salt-laden winds off the water, we mean to set out a couple of flowering plums.

None of this was supposed to happen. It goes against all the resolves we made in the years when a garden was too much with us. Looking back over the months since we left Canada's garden city — and how we yearn for a few cubic yards of that fruitful Victoria soil! — I find it hard to pin down the exact time when the itch to make the desert blossom sneaked up on us once more.

One day the little plastic pail that we took with us on clam-diggings vanished from its place behind a drift log. When I next saw it, the pail had acquired a lid and was half full of potato peelings, grape fruit rinds, carrot scrapings and the like.

"What's all this?" I asked.

"I hate to waste anything that would make good compost," my dear one said, adding an egg shell to her trove. "How would you like to dig a place for this stuff down past that Stewarti you moved last week?"

I dug as requested, making the pit rather larger than need be, then went in to report on my findings.

"There's a layer of stones land higher," I said, "then and sand where the beach was pushed up to make the you get down to black earth. side out so the earth is on top Well, if we turn that strip in and the stones underneath, we'd have the makings of a flower border."

For someone who had renounced gardening, Win received this suggestion with remarkable calm. We have done a fair amount of inside-outing since them, even though the results as yet are far from obvious.

Next week, we hope, the soil will be warm enough for the Golden Delicious apple tree and the well-branched Bartlet pear sapling that we located on our last prowl through a district nursery. Also, the vegetable patch that we were never going to burden ourselves with again will soon be ready for seeding.

Naturally, we don't intend to let this renewed gardening urge get out of hand. But there are worse pursuits on a sunny weekend than sinking a spade and planning a plot.

Beets here. Carrots there. Green beans at the far end, and maybe a couple of short rows of potatoes . . .

At this point the handle of my over-worked spade broke, and just for a moment I harbored an uncomfortable feeling that history was repeating itself.

2,200 Write in for Bill 42

A one-day advertisement in the four daily newspapers in Victoria and Vancouver brought replies from 2,200 people who support the intent of Bill 42, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club said Friday.

The response came before the controversial land control legislation was amended, presumably making it acceptable to an even larger number of B.C. residents.

After delivering the pile of coupons to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, Ken Farquharson, a director of the Sierra Club, told reporters that the 2,200 total represents one per cent of the total population of the province.

He had been told by people in the advertising business that was an excellent response to a single day's advertising, he said. Farquharson said the replies came from a good cross-section of the province, with a particularly heavy return of 650 from Vancouver Island.

Both he and Ian Hayward, treasurer of the Wildlife Federation, said they were surprised and "delighted" at the response which also brought in enough donations to cover the cost of the advertisement.

In a covering letter to Stupich, Farquharson and Hayward said: "Please listen to those who share your concern for the preservation of our farmland and stand firm on the principle of Bill 42.

"The response to our advertisement has been from a very wide section of the community judging by the names and addresses, therefore we feel there is very widespread support for your efforts. The high proportion of donors also indicates the depth of interest of many citizens."

CIA AGENT 014 BECOMES TOO POPULAR FOR RUSSIANS

By VINCENT BUIST

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Gene Green, CIA Agent 014, has gone underground in Moscow with Yevgeny Yevtshuenko, once the angry young man of Soviet literature, in deadly pursuit.

Green is the invention of three Soviet authors who teamed up to produce a parody of Western life-styles using the late Ian Fleming's licensed-to-kill hero, James Bond, as the target of their satire.

Green, heroic survivor of a hundred clashes with international crooks and agents—including male and female Soviet operatives—is the central figure in a parody of the Western thriller - detective-criminal-science fiction popular novel.

Unfortunately, the team of Soviet authors, who embarked on their anti-Western parody with official backing, became so entertaining in their portrayal of the worst aspects of Western culture—striptease, muggings, marijuana, knuckle-dusters and racial violence—that they made Green a fascinating figure for large numbers of Russians.

BLASTS AUTHORS

Yevtushenko, now an establishment figure, writing in the Soviet Literature Gazette, poured scorn and sarcasm on the Gene Green epic:

"How can you fight Fleming using Fleming's own brand of ethics? This is some kind of aberration . . . readers may develop the same kind of aberration. How will they know what is parody and what is not?"

"Let's hope this inexcusable skit, this unjustifiable work, is a unique product of your pens" he wrote to the authors.

A Moscow publishing house produced 100,000 copies of the book but all these Gene Green originals have vanished into the literary underground.

It sold out in days, long before foreigners got wind of the sale. Russians who have a copy are holding on to it. Foreigners have put out feelers in a dozen different channels for weeks but have failed to unearth one. The value of the book on the Moscow black market is going up rapidly.

Russians are great readers. They while away commuting hours with heads plunged in books or magazines and there is an inexhaustible demand for amusing writings as well as good serious literature.

READ AVIDLY

Apart from the classics French, American, English, Italian among them—Russians like modern translations, and anything which strips away a little of the veil of secrecy at the top of the Soviet establishment.

A recent bestseller is a book entitled Siege, which describes some aspects of Stalin's life during the war years. It shows the old dictator in a more lenient light than has been customary since his death in 1953.

The Soviet underground press, Samizdat, has a hit on its hands with illicit typewritten copies of Cancer Ward by the banned author Alexander Solzhenitsyn which pass from hand to hand.

The English mystery thriller writer Agatha Christie, is often at the top of the ordinary Russian's personal list of favorite authors. Arthur Hailey with Airport is also becoming popular.

Desert Fish Is Back

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California scientists are acclaiming the return of a tiny desert fish thought for 20 years to be extinct but now flourishing in three carefully guarded pools.

The Owens pupfish survived for eons in a changing environment—from a vast inland lake to a string of shallow desert pools where water temperatures may vary between freezing and 100 degrees—but it nearly did not survive its brief contact with modern man.

The Owens pupfish—whose natural range was only about 70 miles along the bottom of the narrow Owens Valley, northwest of Death Valley—is less than two inches long.

Plentiful as recently as 50 years ago, the fish were virtually wiped out by the intrusion of modern man, who drained their habitats and introduced alien species of fish that ate both the pupfish's food and the pupfish.

The fish was considered extinct until 1956, when several hundred were discovered in a pool fed by overflow from a spring-fed drainage ditch.

Now the state has established a pupfish refuge in the area with a pupfish population of more than 1,000. The refuge has furnished stock for two more pools. Plans call for reintroduction of the pupfish throughout its former range.

Islanders May Be Forced To Sell Second Yacht

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — If people don't buy more spaceships and corkscrews soon, many families on this French Pacific island may have to sell that second cabin cruiser.

The gigantic mining concern which supports New Caledonia — Societe Le Nickel — is hurting badly. And the economy, one of the most inflated and improbable in the world, is feeling it.

"Le Nickel pays its people too much and has too many employees," said one qualified observer. "That's the main problem."

Europeans and Melanesians receive generous salaries, often with housing and car allowances. Even New Caledonians get an annual paid "home leave" to France. No one pays income taxes.

Now a depressed market, coupled with dollar devaluation, has caught Le Nickel while it struggles to pay for an expansion that allows production of 30,000 tons more nickel than it can sell.

"Yes, we lost $14 million last year and it'll probably be twice as much this year," said one director, explaining the forced cutbacks. "If there's another devaluation, it'll finish us."

As Le Nickel goes, so goes Caledonia. The company hires 4,000 people directly, and the other 18 independent mines follow its fortunes. The colony's work force is only 35,000.

In past years, workers have streamed in from France, from neighboring islands and even from the Caribbean to mine and refine nickel or to drive taxis for people who do.

For most Europeans, recession means drinking less mineral water from France at $2 a bottle. Bread cost $1 a loaf. Native Caledonians, now closer to Pierre Cardin than to loincloths, have to scratch harder.

And the public treasury feels the same pressures.

Le Niclel's $15 million in export duties made up more than a fifth of the budget last year. It pays no income tax. This year, rather than paying more, the company wants a tax break.

Although New Caledonia has an estimated 43 per cent of the world's nickel reserves, the territorial government had to borrow about $16 million last year from a private bank at 10 per cent interest for schools, roads and public works.

"With our resources, we should be rich," says Maurice Le Normand of the leading Union Caledonienne party, which wants a greater say for the colony in running its internal and budgetary affairs.

One industry man grubled: "Le Nickel has been sitting on top of those deposits for 90 years, with ore almost twice as rich as is mined in Canada, and look what they've done so far. For years they were producing only 6,000 to 8,000 tons until International Nickel Co. Inco showed an interest in the mid-1950s, and then they panicked."

Inco has been trying for French permission to eventually produce 50,000 tons of nickel a year, just under the present Le Nickel level, but the project is stalled. Another plan is under way for two French companies and the Swedish Granges to build a 36,000-ton-a-year plant in the north.

For the moment, Le Nickel is the sole producer of metal — the 18 other simply ship ore to Japan — but the lack of competitors has hardly left it in peace.

Kaiser Aluminum is apparently unhappy over its partnership arrangement with Le Nickel in the recent plant expansion project, and that makes the French company nervous about its access to the American market.

Also, Le Nickel says it is spending more than it can afford in battling pollution from its smelter in Noumea and around its open pit mining centres. Directors say they plan to spend $23 million more to reduce dust and smoke, but they just haven't got it at the moment.

Ugly scars from open pit mining and the murky rivers and lagoons have strained Le Nickel's energetic public relations department.

Independent "petit mineurs," with total concessions larger than Le Nickel's, aggravate the problem. Even if they do more to damage the environment Le Nickel is apt to get the blame.

The government hasn't enough inspectors to advise miners on how to protect villages, water supplies and rare vegetation even though companies may want to comply. One government biologist said several unique plant species have disappeared under heaps of tailings.

"The mines and Le Nickel are a political matter . . . what can be done?" he observed.

Still, this remains almost the most prosperous corner of the South Pacific.

The Cercle Nautique counts 800 pleasure boats around its eight wharves, with an enormous waiting list. The key club where a bottle of Scotch costs $40 is full every night. Junior executives nip down to nearby Australia or across to Tahiti with hardly a twist of the arm.

New Caledonia has nothing but nickel. The island is too expensive for ordinary tourists and too dull for the jet set. High prices for feed mean Australian eggs cost less than local ones, and the cattle industry isn't catching on.

With the inflated economy, it's a long way down to the bottom. But, if there's no turnaround, the local gentry may be drinking Australian champagne with their smoked salmon.

Loaded Barge Beached

GALIANO — A 90 foot barge loaded with wood and steel, plus the material for a new ferry slip destined for Port McNeil, was beached Friday on rocks at Sturdies Bay at the north entrance of Active Pass beside the ferry dock.

The barge, owned by Pacific Piledriver Co. Ltd. of Victoria, was travelling from Vancouver to Victoria, when the captain noticed it was sinking.

The load was transferred to another barge today.

Canada to Give $100,000 to Iceland

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will give $100,000 to a disaster fund to help resettle residents of Iceland's Westman Island, the external affairs department announced today.

About 5,300 residents of the island were evacuated to the mainland during volcanic eruptions early this year.

The eruptions first broke out Jan. 23 and again March 22. It is estimated that between $20 and $30 million will be needed to resettle the people.

The federal government's contribution supplements donations from the Icelandic community in Canada, a $25,000 donation from the government of British Columbia and an expected $25,000 from the Icelandic National League in Winnipeg.

Duncan Hospital Accredited

DUNCAN — Engagement of a qualified anaesthetist for Cowichan District Hospital, is recommended in a report to the hospital board by Dr. L. O. Bradley of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation.

The report awarded the hospital accreditation status, but said an anaesthetist is needed because of the "volume and complexity of surgery."

LIGHT YOUR OWN FLOWER!

How many times have you seen a beautiful flower with lighting too poor or at the wrong angle for pictures?

If you have a flashgun and a large white card or card covered with crinkled aluminum foil about 8"x10" you can reflect the light wherever you need it.

With the flash on or off the camera aim it directly at the flower, or bounce it off the card or foil reflector, or a combination of both. When using the reflectors make certain they are out of the picture area.

Set your shutter speed to synchronize with the flash. Take a meter reading to set the lens opening. If the lens opening is too large for a flash picture so close, cover the flash with 1 or 2 layers of white linen handkerchief. Now, if you are well on your way to confusion come in to JUS-RITE Photos. Your Certified Photographic Counsellors can show you how easy it really is to take striking flower pictures.

Weddings

Gill — Speed

A pretty wedding took place March 17, 1973 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Dunstan's Anglican Church, when Reverend W. J. Lunny united in marriage Lucille Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Speed, 50 View Royal Avenue, to Mr. James Jonathon Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Gill of 587 Nora Place.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown, medieval-styled in white satin. Her full-length tiered veil, entrain, was lavishly edged with lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis. Maid of honor Miss Leslie Peerless and bridesmaids Miss Donna Gregory and Miss Laurie Gill, sister of the groom, wore gowns of blue chiffon and carried bouquets of pink carnations. Best man was Mr. Graham Lee and Messrs. Bruce Speed and Larry Gill, brothers of the bridal couple, ushered the guests.

Many out of town guests attended including Mr. and Mrs. James Gill of Burnaby, grandparents of the groom.

Planes — Greenhough

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Greenhough of Sooke, B.C., are pleased to announce the marriage of their second daughter Catherine Renee, to Mr. David Leslie Planes, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Planes of Sooke, B.C.

The quiet ceremony took place in Victoria, B.C., on March 23, 1973.

The happy couple are making their home in Sooke.

Straith — Lyttleton

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Mary Patricia Lyttleton and Mr. Donald Alexander Straith, both of this city. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized on Saturday, February 24, 1973, at 5 p.m. in the home of the bride, with members of the families in attendance. Reverend A. Calder of Oak Bay United Church officiated at the exchange of wedding vows.

The bride wore an ensemble of imported Guipure lace over watermelon silk, complemented with a white orchid corsage and pearl jewellery.

Following a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Straith left on a one month wedding trip to Hawaii, and are now residing at 2840 Beach Drive, Victoria, B.C.

Benson — MacPhail

Mrs. Jean Peasland of Beach Drive, Victoria, announced with pleasure the marriage on March 24, 1973, of her daughter, Sheila Jean MacPhail to Mr. Edward Liston Lewis Benson of Palm Desert, California. The ceremony was conducted in the home of the bride.

The New Day Care.

Effective April 1st, the new day care program means no child will be denied the benefits of day care because of lack of family funds. The program has been expanded to include nursery schools, private kindergartens (where no public ones exist) and out-of school care. Families can now shop around for the service that best suits their needs. In addition, more families will be eligible for government-paid contributions whether the parents are working or not.

Any family participating in the day care program can tell you the benefits . . . reliable (and if need be — special) care for your children, more resources available to the family, as well as a wider choice of day care services.

The cost is calculated on the number of persons in the family "group" and the total family "take home pay" plus income from any other sources.

The Provincial Government will subsidize the cost of day care to families on a simple sliding scale. (See the chart below.) For example, in a three person family, (two parents and 1 child or 1 parent and 2 children) if the total take home pay is $460, the chart shows that that family group would pay a total $5 a month for day care for the children and the government would pay the balance of up to $100.00 per child. The DECLARATION OF INCOME FORM (for those who qualify on the chart) must be completed in order to qualify for Provincial Government contributions, and is available from the Day Care Information Centre in each area. It is processed by mail, so no interview will be necessary.

People who are not eligible for government contributions according to the chart, but will still have difficulty meeting the cost of day care, may request the APPLICATION FOR ASSISTANCE WITH DAY CARE FEES from the local Day Care Information Centre or district office of the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement,

The day care information centres are set up by the Provincial Government to provide information to parents looking for care for their children, about where day care centres exist in the different areas, and to help new centres with licensing regulations. The information centres will also try to help families determine their eligibility for government paid contributions.

Write the Day Care Information Centre in Vancouver at 45 West 8th Avenue or phone 873-3767, 873-3768, 873-3769. In Victoria write the Family and Childrens Service at 1627 Fort Street or phone 382-5121 In other areas contact the district office of the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement.
